AUSTIN, Texas (SEPT. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Healthcare International Inc. (ASE/PSE:HII) Thursday announced results for the fourth quarter and year ended June 30, 1990.

Results for the final quarter of fiscal 1990 reflected management's continued progress in stabilizing the company's operations and achieving the objectives of its restructuring program. In the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, the company's operating loss before unusual items was $5.2 million, compared with $5.4 million in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989. For the fiscal year, the operating loss before unusual items was $30.7 million, compared to $16.4 million last year.

Jean P. Smith, president, noted that the year's results included approximately $28 million of losses incurred by the general acute-care hospitals and related operations that the company is discontinuing as part of its restructuring program. During fiscal 1990 the company sold two of these facilities and, at year's end, had definitive agreements to sell or transfer the operations of its two remaining general acute-care hospitals.

One of these transactions was consummated in July 1990 and the other is scheduled to be completed within the next month. While disposition of the general hospitals and related operations represents a significant step in the company's restructuring program, Smith pointed out that not all liabilities associated with ownership and operation of these facilities will be retired in connection with their disposition and that these obligations, among others, will have a continuing impact on the company's performance.

Smith pointed out that the company's remaining psychiatric and rehabilitation facilities as a group showed improvement during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 compared with the year-earlier period.

''While our psychiatric facilities have felt the effects of continued intense competition during this past year, and also have been affected by the company's financial difficulties, we were encouraged to see improved operating results from these facilities in the final quarter of 1990,'' she said.

Reflecting primarily the increased competitive conditions facing many of the company's psychiatric facilities, inpatient days delivered by the company's continuing psychiatric and rehabilitation hospitals declined 6.1 percent from the prior year. However, during the fourth quarter, the company's continuing psychiatric and rehabilitation facilities registered the same level of inpatient days as in the prior year's fourth quarter.

The company reported a net loss of $2.7 million, or 37 cents per share for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, which included a $1.9 million favorable adjustment to unusual items primarily as a result of adjustments to the company's estimated losses on dispositions of assets. In the year-earlier quarter, the company posted a net loss of $155.9 million, or $21.19 per share which included unusual items totaling $149.7 million relating primarily to the write-down of assets.

For the year-to-date period ended June 30, 1990, Healthcare reported a net loss of $36.7 million, or $4.86 per share, compared with a net loss last year of $173.7 million, or $23.35 per share. The loss for fiscal 1990 included unusual items of $7.4 million primarily related to estimated losses on the disposition of assets, while the loss for the preceding year included unusual items of $160.7 million, which were primarily related to the write-down of assets.

''Clearly, this has been a very difficult year for the company as management confronted severe cash flow difficulties and began to implement a significant restructuring of the company's operations,'' Smith continued. ''While there have been many challenging moments over the past twelve months, the company has made progress in significantly reducing its debt burden and disposing of operations that no longer fit with its long-term strategy.''

Healthcare International provides a wide range of health care products and services to both local and national markets through 22 facilities in five states. The company's Class A common stock is listed for trading on the American and Pacific Stock Exchanges under the symbol HII.

BIRMIMGHAM, Ala. (SEPT. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Vulcan Materials Co. (NYSE:VMC) announced Thursday that it purchased all of the stock of Reed Crushed Stone Co. Inc., Reed Terminal Co. Inc. and BRT Transfer Terminal Inc.

All three corporations are headquartered near Paducah, Ky.

The assets of the three corporations include a large limestone quarry which provides crushed stone to markets on the Mississippi River system, to the western Kentucky area and to rail customers from Illinois to Mississippi; a number of deck barges which are used to ship crushed stone to the river markets; and a recently acquired stone distribution business in Memphis, Tenn.

In addition, BRT Transfer Terminal operates three terminals which blend and transload coal from rail to barge and barge to barge. During Reed's last three fiscal years, shipments of crushed stone have averaged about 9.5 million tons per year.

Estimated total reserves at the Reed quarry exceed 500 million tons. For the twelve months ended May 31, 1990, the acquired businesses reported combined revenues of $47,195,000 and pretax operating income of $9,555,000 after deduction of depreciation and amortization expense in the amount of $5,544,000. In the preceding twelve months, revenues totaled $48,740,000 and pretax operating income amounted to $14,237,000 after deducting depreciation and amortization of $4,975,000.

In July 1990, Reed Crushed Stone Co. Inc., acquired substantially all of the assets of McAlister Construction Co. Inc., and Central States Dredging Co. During the twelve months ended May 31, 1990, these companies had purchased virtually all of their stone requirements from Reed Crushed Stone Co. Inc., totalling in excess of 1.9 million tons.

The asset's acquired from these companies by Reed include a stone sales yard in Memphis, two tow boats, a number of deck barges, a small dredge used for dredging sand from the Mississippi River and various assets which will be sold and which related to a construction business that was discontinued after the assets were acquired by Reed. The results of these companies are not included in the financial results noted above.

H.A. Sklenar, president and chief executive officer of Vulcan, stated: ''Vulcan intends to continue the current businesses of all three corporations. The Reed operations enable Vulcan to expand its existing Kentucky-based aggregates operations and to participate in a number of new crushed stone markets, including western Kentucky by truck and markets along the Mississippi River and the Tennessee-Tombigbee waterway by barge.

''The BRT coal terminal business provides an excellent transportation link between coal mines in western Kentucky and southern Illinois and several utilities located in the southeastern United States which utilize inland waterways for coal transport. In addition, BRT's principal terminal is strategically located to handle coal shipments originating in the western United States.''

The businesses will continue under the management of David W. Reed as president of the three corporations. Harold D. Lambert, president of Vulcan's Midsouth Division, will serve as chairman of the three corporations.

Vulcan is a producer of industrial materials and commodities with significant positions in two industries. It is the nation's foremost producer of construction aggregates and a leading chemicals manufacturer, producing a diversified line of chlorinated solvents and other industrial

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (SEPT 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Worthen Banking Corp. (ASE:WOR) announced Thursday that following a favorable ruling late yesterday by the U.S. Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals in St. Louis, it is now permitted to go forward with its previously announced acquisition of certain assets and deposit liabilities of Independence Federal Bank, FSB (''Independence'') in Batesville, Ark. from the Resolution Trust Corp. (''RTC'').

Curt Bradbury, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Worthen, said that the injunction temporarily blocking the acquisition was formally lifted today and that Worthen is now working with the RTC to coordinate a closing of the transaction.

''This represents an exciting market expansion for Worthen. When the Independence branches open as branches of Worthen Bank, we will become Arkansas' first bank with statewide branches, with 20 new locations throughout the state, 20,000 new customers and approximately $320 million in new deposits,'' Bradbury said.

The acquisition, once consummated, would give Worthen Bank total assets of approximately $938 million and Worthen Banking Corp. total assets of approximately $2.1 billion, Bradbury said.

On June 21, 1990, Worthen Bank & Trust Co., N.A. in Little Rock, the largest of 10 Arkansas banks owned by Worthen Bank Corp. submitted a winning bid of $1.5 million to the RTC for the acquisition of Independence.

On June 28, Arkansas State Bank Commissioner Bill Ford filed a motion in federal court to prevent the RTC from consummating the transaction, contending that it would be a violation of state law, which prohibits banks from acquiring and operating branches located outside of a bank's home county.

On July 9, the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Arkansas ruled that the RTC did not have the authority to override state bank branching laws.

Upon appeal, a three-judge panel of the U.S. Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled on August 28 that the RTC does have the authority to override the Arkansas state bank branching laws under the Financial Institution Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989 in order to consummate the transfer of certain assets and liabilities of Independence to Worthen.

A further motion filed on August 30 by the Arkansas State Bank Commissioner to stay the decision of the three-judge panel was declined late yesterday (September 5) by the full Eighth Circuit Court.

The injunction was lifted by the District Court today in accordance with the decision of the Eighth Circuit, thereby permitting the RTC and Worthen to go forward with the Independence acquisition.

ACCRA (SEPT 6) - Gambian President Dawda Jawara, chairman of the Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) arrived here Thursday for talks with Ghanaian head of state Jerry Rawlings on Liberia's bloody civil war.

The two leaders immediately began closed-door talks on the eight-month conflict at the international airport along with ECOWAS Executive Secretary Abass Bundu who is accompanying the Gambian president on a sub-regional tour.

ECOWAS sent a peacekeeping force made up of troops from Ghana, the Gambia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and Guinea into the Liberian capital Monrovia August 24.

The force, led by Ghanaian commander Arnold Quainoo, has reportedly encountered financial and logistical problems.

Last week Liberian politicians and religious leaders met in the Gambian capital Banjul to chose an interim government to serve until elections can be held.

The conference did not officially announce the new leaders, who will not be allowed to stand for elections, but sources close to the Banjul meeting said the participants chose former political science professor Amos Sawyer as acting president and Lutheran Bishop Ronald Diggs as vice-president.

Sir Dawda Jawara, who has already been to Senegal and Burkina Faso, is expected to fly to Guinea and Sierra Leone later in the day.

Last month Togo called for a special summit of the 16 ECOWAS heads of state to discuss the Liberian crisis. Nigeria and Burkina Faso have officially supported the meeting.

LUSAKA (SEPT. 6) - Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines (ZCCM) made a net profit of 1,329 million kwachas (41.5 million dollars) for the quarter ended June 30, compared with 372 million kwachas (11.6 million dollars) for the same period of last year, a company spokesman announced Thursday.

In a statement released to AFP, the spokesman said ZCCM recorded a profit on metal trading of 5,738 million kwachas for the quarter ended June 30, 1990, against one of 1,153 million kwachas in the corresponding quarter of 1989.

The statement also said sales revenue for the April-June 1990 quarter of 14,329 million kwachas represented an increase of 174 percent over the 5,234 million kwachas achieved in the same quarter last year. ''This is mainly as a result of the higher price realisation on copper and the effect of the devaluation of the kwacha during the period under review,'' said the statement.

It added that copper production for the quarter in question, at 94,759 tonnes, was 21,149 tons lower than the 115,908 tons achieved in the corresponding quarter of 1989. Copper accounts for 90 percent of Zambia's export revenue.

PARIS (SEPT. 6) - Western industrial nations and Japan, facing higher oil prices as a result of the Gulf crisis, must respond by curbing any rebound in inflation as a matter of priority, OECD Secretary General Jean-Claude Paye said Wednesday.

"We must above all prevent a surge in inflation," he told Agence France-Presse, adding that "This (inflation) would lead us straight into stagflation."

"Stagflation" is the economists' term for a situation of low or stagnating growth combined with high inflation, as experienced by the 24 industrial states in the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in the wake of the 1973-74 and 1979 oil shocks.

For the moment, OECD countries are not faced with an "oil shock, but a tremor", Mr Paye said, commenting on the rise in crude oil prices since the August 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq. "There has been no panic," he added.

If the situation does not change significantly in the period ahead, the additional cost of imported crude "would add between one half and one percentage point to inflation" in the OECD countries over a period of six to 12 months, after which the effect would begin to taper off, he said.

The OECD official said the aggregate economic growth of the 24 countries "may be reduced by one-half of a percentage point."

LONDON (SEPT 6) - Coffee futures prices reached their highest level for three months here Thursday, after a technical breakout in New York overnight triggered a similarly inspired jump in London.

Coffee for November delivery, the most actively traded contract, reached 639 pounds per ton in mid-afternon trading here, up from 617 at the close of trading on Wednesday.

The market has been edging ahead since the start of the week, and Thursday's climb came despite an increase in sterling's value against the dollar.

Traders here had predicted a strong climb if the November contract could reach a perceived resistance level of 616 pounds per ton. This point was reached early Wednesday, and operators now expect a spike to 660 or even 700 pounds.

According to analysts, there are fundamental factors behind the climb, which include concern over the availability of finer types of coffee from Colombia and Brazil, at a time when roasters, particularly in the United States, are gearing up for winter processing and look ready to start buying programmes.

The Brazilian harvest, already three-quarters done, is yielding less than expected, they say.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) - Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy met with President George Bush Thursday and later insisted that Israel be accorded the same aid treatment as Egypt, which Mr. Bush has said deserves special help for its role in the current Gulf crisis.

The White House did not disclose the content of their 15-minute meeting, which had not been scheduled on the foreign minister's agenda. Mr. Levy said they had discussed "common goals."

"Aid to Egypt is linked to the aid to Israel and I hope there will not be a different attitude toward us than toward Egypt," Mr. Levy told reporters after the meeting.

The prime minister was expected to broach the subject Thursday in meetings scheduled with members of the foreign affairs committees of the Senate and House of Representatives.

Israel owes the United States a military debt of 4.5 billion dollars. Mr. Bush has decided to ask Congress to forgive Egypt's debt of nearly seven billion dollars as a reward for Cairo's support in the Gulf crisis.

Asked whether Israel would seek additional U.S. military aid, Mr. Levy replied, "We didn't come here to talk about money."

Mr. Levy is on his first official visit to the United States as foreign minister.

The New York Times, citing U.S. administration officials, reported Thursday that Secretary of State James Baker had not offered to wipe out Israel's debt in his first meeting here with Mr. Levy Wednesday.

Both men were in accord on resuming the peace process for the Middle East initiated by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir in May 1989.

But they rejected any link between the Israeli-Palestinian problem and the Gulf crisis sparked by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait August 2.

"Peace will come to the Middle East only when the Arab states end their state of war against Israel," Mr. Levy said Thursday.

He said the Palestinian question "is not only an Israeli issue but also an issue that has to be dealt with by the Arab states," he said. "We have agreed to act on both parallel roads."

Mr. Levy also met Thursday with White House national security adviser Brent Scowcroft for talks the foreign minister called "fruitful ... creative."

"The United States does not have a better friend -- more loyal, stable and credible -- than Israel," Mr. Levy emphasized.

KABUL (SEPT 6) - President Najibullah returned from France late Wednesday after attending a United Nations conference on the least developed countries, state radio reported Thursday.

Mr. Najibullah's return was kept a secret for security reasons and Radio Kabul did not give details.

The 43-year-old president had left for Paris Monday amid speculation that he might try to hold peace talks in France with moderate leaders from the mujahedeen resistance fighting his Soviet-backed regime.

It was not immediatly known whether any such meeting took place.

In his address at the conference Wednesday, the Afghan president pleaded for major industrialised countries to provide urgent assistance to help his war-ravaged country rehabilitate its economy.

Last year Mr. Najibullah attended a similar U.N. conference in the United States. Foreign minister Abdul Wakil accompanied the president during the French tour.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) - Aluminium prices continued their strong run on the London Metal Exchange (LME) Thursday.

Analysts expect the metal to continue its climb in the fourth quarter, boosted by tight world supply against a background of very little spare refining capacity.

Three-months aluminium was quoted at 1,950 dollars per tonne in afternnon trading, against 1,919 on Wednesday.

Copper firmed in sympathy, despite the depressing effect on its pound-quoted prices of sterling's firm trend against the dollar.

Three-months copper was quoted at 1,521 pounds per tonne in afternoon deals against 1,505 on Wednesday.

NAIROBI (SEPT. 6) - Two people were killed and eight injured Thursday in two bomb blasts in the Somali capital, Mogadishu, Somali radio reported.

The casualties and injuries were in the main post office where the first bomb exploded shortly after opening time.

Minutes later another bomb exploded outside the information ministry, not far from the office of President Mohammed Siad Barre and the police headquarters.

Nobody has claimed responsibilty for the attacks which came a day after the formation of a new government under Mohammed Hawadle Masar, formerly parliamentary vice president and an Issak tribesman from the north of the country.

The main resistence group in Somalia's protracted civil war is the Somali National Movement (Snm) which is chiefly supported by the Issaks. Hawadle Madar's appointment was seen in Mogadishi as a peace gesture towards the rebels.

PARIS (SEPT 6) - French President Francois Mitterrand said Thursday that countries wishing to tighten a U.N. embargo against Iraq could close their airspace to aircraft suspected of sanctions busting.

He also told a news conference that it was "very probable" that he would go to the Gulf, where France has sent 14 warships, although no date had been set.

Insisting that France would keep to measures ordered by five U.N. resolutions aimed at rolling back the August 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, Mr. Mitterrand said a further U.N. decision to impose an air embargo against Baghdad would not be necessary.

Pointing out that the embargo already decided was "general", he said: "This can be settled simply... If countries wishing to enforce the embargo ban the overflight of their territories, this would be really effective."

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas and, separately, his British counterpart Douglas Hurd had earlier this week raised the possibility of extending the naval embargo to the skies. U.S. Secretary of State James Baker on Wednesday also mentioned such a prospect.

But Mr. Mitterrand, speaking at his third news conference on the Gulf crisis since the Iraqi invasion, said he did not think that the embargo violations were "very large".

Turning to the U.S.-Soviet summit in Helsinki on Sunday, Mr. Mitterrand said he hoped for an "affirmation of solidarity" from U.S. President George Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

Mr. Mitterrand, who spoke to both presidents by telephone on Thursday, said he was "expecting a great deal" from the summit, and thought there was no "real threat" of a divergence between the U.S. and Soviet leaders.

"We need to know if both are sufficiently in harmony" on the response to Iraq, he said, and dismissed a suggestion that the superpowers might decide on a military intervention.

Mr. Mitterrand stressed that in the case of a U.S. military intervention against Iraq, he would only engage French troops "to execute the orders of the United Nations".

DHAKA (SEPT 6) - Bangladesh said Thursday it has lined up more than 90 special flights during the next three weeks to bring home some 30,000 of its nationals stranded in Jordan, Turkey and Saudi Arabia after fleeing Kuwait.

Government spokesman Mustafizur Rahman said here that the national flag carrier Biman would operate 63 flights from Amman, Riyadh and the Turkish city of Adana before the end of September carrying 18,000 Bangladeshis.

In addition, 28 special flights chartered by different countries and international organisations on behalf of Bangladesh will operate until September 13 to ferry home another 9,000 Bangladeshis from the three countries, he said.

Some 2,000 more will be carried by the Saudi national carrier by the weekend, he said.

There were more than 75,000 Bangladeshi workers in Kuwait and 25,000 more in Iraq when Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2.

Officials said some 39,000 Bangladeshis had fled Kuwait and taken shelter in neighbouring Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Turkey where they were awaiting repatriation.

Mr. Rahman said in addition, an unspecified number of Bangladeshis had assembled along Iraq's borders with Jordan and with Turkey, currently closed.

The spokesman said nearly 6,000 stranded Bangladeshis had been flown to Dhaka from the Gulf as of Thursday.

Repatriation officials here said in response to a Bangladeshi request, the European Economic Community had offered 10 chartered flights, and 18 other flights were being financed by United Nations Disaster Relief Organisation the International Organisation for Migration, as well as by Japan, West Germany, Britain and Norway.

They said Biman had almost finalised a deal with the Asia-America Enterprise, a Florida-based company, to charter a 500-seat jumbo jet to airlift the stranded Bangladeshis from the Gulf.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT 6) - An economic recession and political uncertainties are damping the South African business mood, the South African Chamber of Business (SACOB) said here Thursday.

SACOB's Business Confidence Index (BCI) dipped from 92 in July to 91.8 in August -- the same level as in June, according to the BCI report released on Thursday.

The report said the business mood in the latter part of August was shaped by the Gulf crisis and by a sharp increase in black-on-black violence in townships around here which saw some 560 people killed since August 13.

Among the factors affecting profits were cost increases, racial unrest and declines in consumer confidence, the report said.

SACOB said that if oil prices remain at their current levels for some time, growth prospects in South Africa's major trading partners will decline, affecting demand for the country's exports.

The costs of imports will also rise, which will result in lower trade balances and making it difficult for South Africa to build up its gold and foreign exchange reserves.

On the positive side, South Africa is making progress in reducing inflation, which analysts predict will average 13.7 percent this year, and is gradually rebuilding net reserves, the report added.

ACCRA (SEPT 6) - Gambian President Dawda Jawara said here Thursday that the food situation in war-torn Liberia was "desperate" and called for urgent foreign aid.

Sir Dawda, who is current chairman of the 16-nation Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) said help should come from ECOWAS and the international community.

Speaking to journalists before flying to Guinea and Sierra Leone on a whirlwind sub-regional tour that has taken him to Burkina Faso and Senegal Sir Dawda said he hoped assistance would soon start reaching the needy.

Sir Dawda had earlier held 90 minutes of talks with Ghanaian leader Jerry Rawlings at the Accra international ariport.

Liberia's eight-month rebellion was launched December 24 in northeastern Nimba County by Charles Taylor's National Patriotic Front (NPFL) rebels against troops loyal to beleaguered President Samuel Doe.

The Gambian leader said he had earlier asked Burkina Faso President Blaise Compaore to use his influence on rebel leader Charles Taylor to accept the ECWAS peace proposals.

Sir Dawda said Mr. Taylor's claims of misconduct by the peacekeeping force in Liberia were unfounded.

The ECOWAS force, officially named the ceasefire monitoring group (ECOMOG), "has been well-behaved and has been displaying exemplary discipline," he said.

ECOWAS sent its peacekeeping force made up of troops from Ghana, the Gambia, Nigeria, Sierra Leone and Guinea into the Liberian capital Monrovia August 24.

The force, led by Ghanaian commander Arnold Quainoo, has met with resistance from Mr. Taylor's rebels.

Last week Liberian politicians and religious leaders met in the Gambian capital Banjul to chose an interim government to serve until elections can be held.

The conference did not officially announce the new leaders, who will not be allowed to stand for elections, but sources close to the Banjul meeting said the participants chose former political science professor Amos Sawyer as acting president and Lutheran Bishop Ronald Diggs as vice-president.

Last month Togo called for a special summit of the 16 ECOWAS heads of state to discuss the Liberian crisis, which has already claimed more than 5,000 lives. Almost all those killed have been civilians.

ABIDJAN (SEPT 6) - Eleven people were injured, including four seriously, and 23 others stopped for questioning by security forces following demonstrations here Thursday, Ivory Coast opposition leaders said.

They said 22 people, including television journalist and member of the Ivorian People's Front (FPI), Georges Koffi, were detained Thursday afternoon at the central police station.

"The police commissioner told us that he was checking their identity," one opposition leader said.

Louis Dakoury, another FPI member, was taken to the national bureau of investigations while one of the injured was hospitalized with a bruised chest.

State radio and television announced earlier Thursday that 12 people had been detained for "identity checks", but gave no casualty figures.

Witnesses said that riot police, backed by troops and gendarmes, used tear gas and truncheons to disperse opposition supporters in the Plateau business and embassy district near President Felix Houphouet-Boigny's residence.

The authorities had declared that Thursday's demonstration called by four opposition parties, the second in a week, was "unauthorized".

Agence France-Presse correspondents said they saw one man beaten and led off to a lorry by some 15 soldiers. Several hundred uniformed men took up stations in the Plateau district overnight and many were still there late Thursday.

The demonstration was called by Laurent Gbagbo of the FPI, Francis Wodie of the Ivorian Workers' Party, Zadi Zaourou of the Union of Social Democrats and Bamba Moriferee of the Socialist Party.

LISBON (SEPT. 6) - The Angolan authorities expressed "concern" Thursday that two South African naval vessels had docked in the Zairean port of Matadi, in a statement issued through the ANGOP news agency monitored here.

The Luanda government considered that military equipment the South African vessels could unload in the port, some 300 kilometres (190 miles) north of the Angolan capital, could be destined for Angolan rebels.

The statement said the ships had arrived in Matadi on Thursday and indicated that they might be delivering equipment not to the Zairean army but for Jonas Savimbi's National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA).

ANGOP said UNITA received equipment across the border with Zaire, adding that rebel activity in northern Angola had recently increased.

The South African government has dropped military backing for UNITA as part of a regional settlement that provided for Namibian independence and for the phased withdrawal of Cubans supporting the Angolan government.

LONDON (SEPT 6) - British oil company Enterprise Oil announced Thursday that its net profit for the first half of the year jumped by 59 percent to 82 million pounds (155 million dollars), against 51.6 million pounds for the same period last year.

The result, well above the estimates of City oil analysts of around 72 million pounds, came on a 58 percent increase in sales to 207.5 million pounds, against 131.2 million, reflecting the acquisition of some Texas Eastern interests.

Per-share profit for the first half was up 23 percent to 18 pence, against 16.4 pence for the same period last year. An interim dividend of six pence was declared, against 5.25 pence.

The firm said its profit has been influenced favorably by higher income from investments and certain asset sales.

The group produced an average of 116,200 barrels a day during the first half, up 30 percent from the 89,200 barrels a day of the first six months last year.

On the Stock Exchange, Enterprise Oil finished up two pence at 680 pence.

French oil group Elf Aquitaine holds 25 percent of the group.

LIMA (SEPT 6) - The mayor in the Andean town of Huancayo called for a general strike Thursday to protest the government's tough austerity measures that have depressed wages while the costs of public services have spiraled.

Pedro Morales, mayor of the central Andean town of Huancayo, some 370 kilometers (230 miles) east of Lima, initiated the strike to protest the costs of public services that have shot up by 1,000 percent.

Mr. Morales' call for a general strike was one of an array of angry reactions from workers, students and faculty to the economic program announced August 8 which raised prices and taxes and kept wages down.

To ameliorate the effect on workers, the government agreed to bonuses and postponed wage increases. Now, the government, strapped for cash, has been paying salaries by instalment causing exasperation among a growing number of Peruvians.

One month after the program was put into effect, the cost of living has shot up 400 percent and workers have taken to the streets to protest unpaid promised raises and low wages.

Shining Path rebels have capitalized on the student unrest to sow their own confusion, dynamiting Wednesday the car belonging to the president of the National Agrarian University. No one was injured in the bombing.

The country's 48 universities have been shutting down services and are on the edge of total collapse, said Javier Soto Nadal, who heads the National Assembly of University Presidents.

Some protesting Transportation Ministry workers were beaten in clashes with police. Displaying bruises and welts on his body, one protestor said, "All we wanted was half of what they owed us for August, which were starvation wages anyway."

Some 3,500 workers for the state-owned Mining Peru kept up their strike Thursday, demanding that the government pay the salaries that were owed them.

Meanwhile, the Banking Employees Federation said that it would wait until Tuesday before its 35,000 workers went on an indefinite national strike for salary demands.

KARLSRUHE (SEPT 6) - West Germany's federal high court in Karlsruhe

The federal prosecutor's office in Karlsruhe said Loeffler was suspected of having have worked since 1974 for the now defunct East German Stasi secret police and to have passed information to East Germany up until May 1990.

Perez de Cuellar said the council held the view that ''even if it (the meeting) was not successful, it was the beginning of dialogues which may lead to the resolution of the problem.''

LAGOS (SEPT 6) - Hundreds of participants to a scheduled national conference on Nigeria's future were locked out of the venue on Thursday in what Nobel prizewinner Wole Soyinka dscribed as "sabotage" and "indirect censorship".

"I am very sad and I really condemn this indirect censorship in the strongest terms," Mr. Soyinka, the 1986 Nobel Literature laureate, told Agence France-Presse in a telephone interview.

The conference, due to open in the main hall of the National Theatre here Thursday, had been opposed by General Ibrahim Babangida's military government, which plans a return to civilian rule in October 1992.

The National Consultative Forum which organised the conference had paid rent for the hall. It was not informed by the management that approval of its use as the venue had been revoked, a forum representative said.

Late Wednesday, the minister of justice, Prince Bola Ajibola, had warned the organisers of the conference that they risked a five-year jail term if they went ahead with it.

Hundreds of participants, including a former deputy director-general of the World Health Organisation (WHO), Thomas Adeoye Lambo, and current Organisation of African Trade Union Unity (OATUU) Secretary-General Hassan Sunmonu, were locked out.

"They should not anticipate that a meeting might turn out this way or that way. How do you condemn people in advance?" Mr. Soyinka said.

"You cannot anticipate until people have actually said what they had to say, what is burning in their mind. One should not take upon himself the immense responsibility of condemning what they have got to say. Not even prophets can predict what is going to come out of a conference until the conference takes place," he stated.

He said he had hoped that that by now the government would have learned about the negative effects of stopping any avenue for either individual or collective expression.

The aborted meeting would "definitely" be held at another date, conference coordinator Beko Ransome-Kuti told AFP in an interview in the Nigerian capital.

SUVA (SEPT. 6) - Fiji's military will buy its second helicopter from France this year while maintaining the current strength of its 5,015-man army, chief of staff Brigadier General Ratu Epeli Ganilau said here Friday.

But the Fiji Military Forces (FMF) will try to reduce costs by cutting down on territorial and reserve troops because the army is "in the red," Brig. Gen. Ganilau told the Fiji Times newspaper.

He said that for the moment, the military only planned the helicopter purchase, but in the long run "our plan is to have fixed wing capability or airplanes."

France supplied an Ecureuil-type helicopter to Fiji in 1988 after Fiji's traditional military donors -- Australia, New Zealand and Britain -- suspended defence ties with Suva in the wake of two military coups in 1987.

Brig. Gen. Ganilau said Fiji would maintain its army strength of 5,015 men, which includes 1,100 United Nations peacekeeping troops in Lebanon and Egypt's Sinai desert.

But he said the army would only send regulars to the Middle East and would reduce territorial and reserve forces as a temporary cost-cutting measure.

He added that demobilisation "was another option but the idea was scrapped because of the FMF's role in maintaining security in Fiji."

He said the FMF was feeling constrained after the suspension of defence ties by Australia and New Zealand, which trained most of Fiji's soldiers prior to the 1987 coups led by ethnic Fijian military officers against the South Pacific country's ethnic Indian-dominated government.

The interim government, installed by the army commander Major General Sitiveni Rabuka after his coups, would decide on any possible demobilisation of FMF troops, the army spokesman said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) - U.S. Naval forces have boarded about 25 ships in the Gulf region since the U.N. embargo against Iraq and Iraq-controlled Kuwait was imposed August 6, the Defense Department said Thursday.

Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall said only two Iraqi ships were among the 25.

One, a tanker running empty, was sent on its way.

The other, a freighter carrying tea, was stopped as it was heading into the Gulf for Iraq, and was forced to reverse course and head East.

Mr. Hall said a number of other ships had been turned back, but he did not specify their number of cargoes.

The U.S. Navy has completed 580 ship interceptions, the spokesman said.

The term "interception" covers a variety of actions by U.S. warships, he said, ranging from radio questioning to boarding.

JEDDAH, Saudi Arabia (SEPT 7) - Saudi Arabia agreed on Thursday to shoulder the cost of the deployment of U.S. troops sent to defend Saudi territory from an Iraqi attack, according to U.S. and Saudi officials.

The agreement came during a visit here by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

"There was a meeting of the minds," a senior Saudi official said after a lengthy meeting here between Mr. Baker and King Fahd. The Saudi foreign minister Prince Saud al-Faisal was also present.

The Saudi official said he believed the United States "would not be disappointed with what the Saudis are willing to do."

A high-ranking U.S. official said the Saudis had explicitly agreed to pay for the cost of deploying U.S. troops on the ground, including fuel, water, transportation and other expenses.

He did not specify the amount of money the Saudis had offered.

Mr. Baker has said the cost of the U.S. operation "Desert Shield" could reach six billion dollars by the end of the year.

ROME (SEPT. 7) - European Economic Community (EEC) economy ministers will meet here Saturday to find that their once-sunny prospects of economic growth have been suddenly clouded by the Gulf crisis.

"If the price of oil stays at or around 30 dollars a barrel for a long period, the EEC's annual growth will be depressed by a full percentage point," an expert at the European Commission in Brussels warns.

Before Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2 and sent a quiver of fear through the world's oil market, the EEC calculated its 1990 growth rate at three percentage points.

Such figures are far from having merely paper value. Experts say they translate into hard cash that will crucially affect the Community's ability to cope with the cost of German unification and embark on EEC economic and monetary union.

The problem, the Commission source said, is that "it is very difficult to make any serious prediction" about the price of oil, as it is so completely linked to the outcome of the showdown in the Gulf.

Such uncertainty means that the ministers are unlikely to draw up a joint economic battle plan this weekend, diplomats say.

With less than three weeks left before the autumn meetings in Washington of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) and the World Bank - which will also include talks among the G-7 group of top industrialised democracies - the ministers will talk chiefly of their "respective approaches" to the crisis a diplomat said.

There is also likely to be a discussion about the effects of the oil price hike on developing countries and the new democracies of eastern Europe, described by a diplomatic source as "the biggest losers" in the crisis.

BEIJING (SEPT. 6) - At least 108 people were killed, 4O were reported missing and 850 were injured when Typhoon Abe sliced across China's eastern provinces of Zhejiang and Jiangsu and the city of Shanghai, the China Daily reported Thursday.

The toll, the worst in 34 years, could go higher as the authorities have yet to receive reports from a number of neighboring provinces, including Anhui, the official English-language daily said.

The official media had given a toll of 90 dead on Tuesday.

The typhoon affected more than 10 million people - including 720,000 stranded by floodwaters - as it pummelled the area between August 31 and September 3, the daily said.

Material damage has been put at 3.5 billion yuan (741 million dollars), more than half of it in Zhejiang alone, the China Daily said, quoting sources at the ministry of civil affairs.

More than 170,000 houses were destroyed and 334,000 damaged, and 443,000 hectares (1.09 million acres) of farmland were flooded, it said.

The ministry said 65 people were killed and 40 were missing in Zhejiang and 41 were killed in Jiangsu.

An earlier typhoon, Yancy, which hit Zhejiang on August 20, claimed 101 lives and seriously injured 546.

Violent storms in western Sichuan killed 19 people and injured 63 since the beginning of the month, while the rest of the central Chinese province, the country's most populous, remained in the grip of its worst drought in 10 years, the China News Service reported Thursday.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze Thursday called for a mutually acceptable solution to a territorial dispute with Japan, as 1,000 right-wing activists rallied for the return of the Soviet-held Kuril islands.

Mr. Shevardnadze told Japanese Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama "an environment full of trust and goodwill" was necessary to solve what he termed the "most difficult and complicated" problem between the two countries, Japanese officials said.

His comments came during the third and last round of talks with Mr. Nakayama. Analysts said they showed Moscow's flexibility toward the dispute, which has kept the two countries from signing a post-World War II peace treaty.

Before Mikhail Gorbachev came to power in 1985, the Soviet Union refused to openly discuss Japan's demand for the return of the islands, which it has held since the end of the war.

Mr. Shevardnadze's third trip to Japan was aimed primarily at finalizing plans for an unprecedented visit here by Mr. Gorbachev in early 1991.

Japanese prime ministers have visited Moscow since the war without reciprocation from top Soviet leaders, while the territorial issue chilled ties and hampered economic cooperation.

At a park in central Tokyo, some 930 people gathered aboard 245 loudspeaker vans to demonstrate for the return of the islands, known to Japanese as the Northern Territories, police said.

The protestors belonged to 120 rightist groups, they said.

HONG KONG (SEPT. 6) - The search has been called off for a Panama-registered ship reported missing last week while a typhoon was in the region, a Marine Department spokesman said Thursday.

Search efforts had been carried out for the past four days near China's southern Hainan island where the cargo vessel Alphard was reported missing by its agent on Saturday, he said.

The vessel had 22 people on board, including five Hong Kong and 17 Filipino seamen, and set sail on August 22 for Bangkok from south China's Tsam Kiang.

TAIPEI (SEPT. 6) - Taiwan's gold bullion imports more than doubled in August, up 2.31 times to 12.96 tonnes (457,186 ounces) amid fears over the Gulf crisis, a government report said Thursday.

But total gold imports during the first eight months of thie year, including bullion and other gold products, were down 22 percent over the same period of 1989 at 85.49 tons (3.018 million ounces), the Finance Ministry said.

Escalating tension in the Middle East spurred a buying spree on the precious metal in August, which also saw the import of 235 kilograms (8,289 ounces) of other gold products, except coins, the report said.

Gold coins lost their appeal with only 41 kilograms (1,446 ounces) imported, the lowest monthly volume this year, compared with 106 kilograms (3,739 ounces) in July, it said.

Gold reserves held by Taiwan's central bank were some 13.6 million ounces in June.

CANBERRA (SEPT. 6) - The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate in Australia jumped to 7.3 percent in August from 6.9 percent in July, according to figures released Thursday by the Bureau of Statistics.

The figure was also up from the six percent recorded in August last year.

The number of jobless rose by 27,400 to 619,500 last month from 592,100 in July and 503,600 in August 1989, the seasonally-adjusted figures showed.

KUALA LUMPUR (SEPT. 6) - Malaysia will again raise its crude oil production to meet demand from Pakistan and Bangladesh, whose supplies are affected by the Gulf crisis, news reports said Thursday.

The reports quoted Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad as saying the size of the increase would be decided after Pakistan and Bangladesh's requests for oil and petroleum products were studied in detail.

Malaysia, which has a maximum production capacity of 650,000 barrels per day (bpd), raised output by 10,000 bpd to 605,000 bpd in mid-August to help meet a shortfall created by the U.N. embargo on Iraq following its August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The initial hike was meant to meet requests for more oil from India and the Philippines.

Dr. Mahathir said Malaysia did not like to see an oil shortage push the world into recession and would work with other oil-producing countries to meet world demand.

He said an economic slowdown or a recession would affect many countries' economies and would hit developing countries more.

MANAMA (SEPT. 6) - The Gulf crisis has cast a new light on the role of women in Arab societies, with reports speaking of women carrying out resistance missions in Kuwait, Saudi women allowed to serve as volunteer nurses, or girls in the United Arab Emirates willing to take up arms against an enemy.

''The role of the man is the cornerstone of society,'' wrote a woman reader, Khadijah Abdullah, faithfully reflecting Islamic teaching in a letter to the Arab language daily Bayan in Dubai.

But at the same time she put forward an almost revolutionary suggestion: ''Women too can fight against an enemy by force of arms, not only men. Even 12-year-old girls are prepared to take up arms to defend the United Arab Emirates... Who says we are too delicate for this?''

In the Gulf countries, many activities so far have remained a privilege of men. Women in Saudi Arabia, for example, may not drive a car or work in public offices.

In Bahrain, the Uae and Oman, women were admitted to the police service only a few years ago. In business or politics, women are practically nonexistent. In the mosques, they pray in an extra room separated from the men.

In the Gulf, more so than in many Asian or African states, the rule is that women live in a male society. But today hardly a day passes without the media directing attention to women.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 6) - Australian business leaders are warning that only a change of economic direction can avert a full-blown recession as the country faces rising unemployment and its biggest wave of industrial strife for seven years.

This week a succession of company reports have painted the same gloomy picture: high interest rates, an excessively strong currency and "frightening" foreign debt are crippling the economy.

High interest rates, which bolster the Australian dollar, have been Canberra's major weapon against crippling current account deficits, foreign debt and high inflation.

Australia's foreign debt is running at about 124.5 billion Australian dollars (102.5 billion U.S.) and cash rates are fluctuating around 14 per cent.

Optimistic expectations about Australia's ability to cope with the Gulf crisis are starting to sour with the realisation that the dollar is being driven to new heights, thus widening the current account deficit.

Employment figures released Thursday showed unemployment had jumped to 7.3 percent in August from 6.9 percent in July and six percent in August last year.

At the same time, the Australian Council of Trade Unions decided to abandon centralised wage fixing for the first time since Labor won control of the government in 1983.

Confederation of Australian Industry (CAI) chief executive Ian Spicer warned Thursday that the economy was declining much faster than Treasurer Paul Keating realised.

A joint Westpac Bank-CAI survey showed the strongest pessimism among manufacturers since the 1981-82 recession, and Metal Trades Industry Association chief executive Bert Evans said Australia appeared to be heading for as bad a slump as at that time.

"Interest rates have been too high for too long. That is propping up the dollar and we are in very serious trouble," he said.

Mr. Evans, whose association represents 7,000 companies, said he had asked the metal unions to persuade the government to alter its monetary policy.

An association survey, withheld until this week because it was so bad it could have worsened the economic climate, showed "an extremely serious" downturn in production and sales, he said.

Mr. Evans described as "crazy" threats by metal unions representing 400,000 workers to strike next week for pay increases totalling 11.5 percent or 50 dollars a week (41 dollars U.S.).

One of Australia's most powerful businessmen Sir Peter Abeles, head of TNT Ltd. transport group warned the economy was labouring under a "frightening" foreign debt bill.

"It's a national emergency," said Sir Peter, a close friend of Prime Minister Bob Hawke. "We just cannot earn our way out of having such a great international debt."

In a statement Monday, directors of Australia's biggest mining company, CRA Ltd., said international competitiveness had been impaired by factors including inflation, wages and monetary policy.

But they added that the rapidly strengthening Australian dollar was of major concern.

Economists say the strength of the dollar is making Australia's exports prohibitively expensive and widening the current account deficit.

The Reserve (central) Bank's recent intervention to stem the dollar's climb was proving futile, and late Thursday the currency was trading at 82.27 U.S. cents.

DJIBOUTI (SEPT. 6) - Djibouti's international airport has seen its traffic double since mid-August because many airlines are switching here as a transit point due to the Gulf crisis, airport officials said Thursday.

Some 40 aircraft land or take off here each night as airlines modify their routes to avoid stop-offs in Jeddah, Abu Dhabi, Bahrain and Dhahran in Saudi Arabia.

Fears of a worsening Gulf situation following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2 have sent insurance premiums higher and many airlines have preferred to change their routes and touch down in Djibouti for security reasons.

About 30 Air France planes are now transiting through Djibouti weekly, against 18 normally, an official source said, while Ethiopian Airlines' planes on Asian routes are now refuelling in Djibouti.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) - Japanese couples are tending to get married later in life, sending the already-low birth rate down further, according to statistics published by the health ministry.

Only 1,246,802 births were registered last year -- 67,204 less than in 1988 -- leaving the national birth rate at 10.2 per thousand, the figures showed.

Demographers worry that this is insufficient to renew the population, which stood at 123 million in March.

A major reason, the health ministry believes, is that most Japanese now aged between 20 and 30 are single.

The average marriage age dropped to 28.5 years for men and 25.8 years for women in 1989, compared to around 26 years and 24 years respectively in the 1970s, it said.

BANGKOK (SEPT. 6) - Thai exporters are pushing Bangkok as the jewelry store to the world in hopes of giving it a cutting edge in the international jewels and gems trade -- and raking in four billion dollars a year by 1995.

Work has started on four high-rise malls billed by local moguls of the industry as "one-stop shopping centers" in Bangkok's Silom financial district, and several similar projects are under way in the suburbs and provinces.

The skyscrapers will range in height from 29 to 63 floors, accommodating as many as 1,000 units each at a time when Thailand is expected to attract investors from Hong Kong prior to its 1997 takeover by China.

Investments of two to eight billion baht (80 to 320 million dollars) will be poured into the steel and glass towers, changing the face of an industry that traditionally has operated out of often rundown, cramped shops.

Only two decades ago, in the memory of one prominent jeweler, the Thai ruby was almost unmarketable abroad.

Disdained for its pallor, it could only be exported "under the table" in a shady business that brought in less than five million dollars a year, he said.

But since duties on imported raw materials were lifted 13 years ago, exports of locally-manufactured jewelry, as well as of imported rough-cut precious and semi-precious stones polished and cut here, have increased.

Today, Thailand ships out 80 percent of the world's ruby supply, but it exports even more locally-cut South African diamonds and Australian sapphires, according to exporter Pornsit Sri-orathaikun.

Raw materials are also imported from Burma, India and Sri Lanka to supplement Thailand's domestic ruby supplies from mines in the southeastern province of Chanthaburi and from Cambodia, just across the border.

Official figures are sketchy and incomplete, experts say, but according to the Commerce Ministry, this year's gem and jewelry exports are expected to surpass the target of 34 billion baht (1.36 billion dollars) set for 1990 by the ministry's department of export promotion.

Exports were estimated by the ministry at 16 billion baht (640 million dollars) from January to May, an increase of 21.7 percent over the same period last year.

Ambitious plans to push these exports -- already the second largest in Thailand's fledgling industrial sector after garments and textiles -- through hefty annual increases are calculated to fetch four million U.S. dollars a year in overseas revenue by 1995.

Merchants are talking of replacing the current door-to-door trade with a gems bourse that would electronically link the new skyscrapers.

But the industry is built largely on cheap labor and duty-free imports, and much of its future will depend on the creation of the European Economic Community's single market in 1992, Mr. Pornsit said.

Some 80 percent of the jewelry and gem exports and re-exports go to the United States, Western Europe and Japan, where Thailand's labor-intensive intricate designs are competitively priced.

"We are exporting 10,000-baht (400-dollar) pieces to Europe that (European jewelers) have stopped even thinking about producing because labor is so expensive there," Mr. Pornsit said.

Thai traders expect to fatten their profits alongside their European clients when trade barriers are lifted within the EEC, said Mr. Pornsit, who is president of an association of 386 Thai jewelry and gem exporters.

They are also counting on the European market to offset losses anticipated due to the Middle East crisis, he said, adding that exports to Arab countries, either directly or indirectly via Europe, used to account for 10 to 15 percent of Thai sales abroad.

The minority of exporters who deal in the region have failed to receive payments for recent shipments to Kuwait, Saudi Arabia and other countries affected by the crisis, he said.

HONG KONG (SEPT. 6) - A multinational industrial investment company has been launched here that includes mainland Chinese and Taiwan interests, reports said Thursday.

Local financial concern Sun Hung Kai and Co. and property developer the New World group announced Wednesday they each held a 22 percent stake in the 192 million U.S. dollar firm, SHK Hong Kong Industries Ltd.

Taiwan's Capital Group held nine percent while Beijing's state-owned China Venturetechno International Ltd. took five percent.

The remaining ownership was spread -- each at five percent or less -- among investors from Hong Kong, Indonesia, Malaysia, Singapore, the United States and Austria.

Officials at the new firm -- which was planned to be listed on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange by early next year -- said its key activity would be taking "friendly, non-majority" investment stakes in local manufacturing companies.

The firm also hoped to attract backers from Thailand and Japan, company officials said.

Wiesbaden (SEPT. 6) - The West German cost of living index jumped 0.3 per-cent from July to August, triggered by rising oil and gasoline prices after the Gulf crisis, it was reported here Thursday.

The living cost rise pushed the annual inflation rate for August to 2.8 per- cent, the Federal Office of Statistics said.

In July, the annual inflation rate stood at 2.4 percent.

The office said that vehicle fuel prices were 11 percent higher in August compared to a year earlier. Light heating oil was 21 percent more expensive.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 6) - Australian transport group Brambles Industries Ltd. said Thursday its net profit rose 25 percent in the year to the end of June to 221.9 million dollars (183 million U.S.), despite a sharp fall in second half trading conditions.

Managing director Gary Pemberton said the result, which compared with 177 million dollars (146 million U.S.) the previous year, was lower than expected due to "the sharpness of the decline in Australian trading, particularly during the last quarter."

He said the slowdown in Australia emerged in the transport sector towards the end of last year.

"Transport remains the worst hit so far. Equipment rental and industrial services divisions are now being significantly affected," Mr. Pemberton said.

"Brambles European activities benefited from a stronger economic environment than Australia's although there were signs of a slowing in the British economy in the second half," he added.

Mr. Pemberton said the international company posted a 25 per cent increase in gross operating profit of 334 million dollars (275 million U.S.) for the year to June 30.

Abnormal gains of 30.3 million dollars (25 million U.S.) boosted net profit to 252.2 million dollars (208 million U.S.), a 42 percent increase on the previous year, he said.

He said the result was achieved on a 36 percent jump in revenue to 2.33 billion dollars (1.9 billion U.S.).

At balance date, the company had 467.5 million dollars (385 million U.S.) in cash reserves, Mr. Pemberton said.

He said he was optimistic that rising oil prices would not crush economic activity in Europe but there was no sign of a recovery in Australia's trading environment.

"Under these circumstances, I am not prepared to speculate on the likely profit outcome for the current year," Mr. Pemberton said.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) - The Kuwait Investment Office (KIO), which manages most of Kuwait's national riches abroad, has opened a credit line for Kuwaiti banks facing liquidity problems as a result of the Gulf crisis.

Kuwait's aim is to restore the international credibility of its financial institutions, the country's central bank governor Sheikh Salem Abdul-Aziz al-Sabah was quoted as saying in an interview published in the European edition of the Wall Street Journal.

The Kuwaiti banking system has unpaid short-term obligations of between five billion and seven billion dollars because of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2 and a subsequent freeze on Kuwaiti assets in many countries to prevent Iraq seizing them, the daily cited banking sources as saying.

"Our priority is to get our banks to meet their interbank and foreign exchange obligations. We must meet our debts so our conterparties don't suffer," Sheikh Salem was quoted as saying.

Kuwait's investment abroad totals some 100 billion dollars.

INDIANAPOLIS (SEPT. 6) - A Brazilian woman has been disqualified from the International Violin Competition here after an audition convinced judges she had faked her audition tape with recordings of Yehudi Menuhin or Fritz Kreisler.

Blumita Singer, 26, of Sao Paolo, was invited to compete on the basis of her audition tape of extraordinary brilliance -- the first movement of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto.

But when she played in a preliminary round Sunday, it was so bad that some in the audience walked out.

Her performance "verged on the ridiculous," Yugoslav violinist Igor Ozim, vice president of the jury, was quoted as saying. There were "problems of intonation, sheer lack of skill, no vibrato, no memory -- she had innumerable memory slips."

The 10 judges then reviewed the audition tapes and immediately decided that Ms. Singer could not have played the music, according to Thomas Beckiewicz, executive director of the contest.

"It took just five notes for those 10 people to say, 'Who's this playing? It must be Menuhin or Kreisler," he said Wednesday. "When you have 10 of the most expert violinists in the world, you cannot fake anything."

The competition is the richest in the world with a 20,000 dollar cash prize and a debut at Carnegie hall for the gold medalist.

In her application, Ms. Singer said she received professional training at the Manhattan School of Music in 1983-84 and at Julliard in 1982, and that she was taught by the late violinist Henryk Szeryng from 1984 to 1987.

"The screening committee looked at this portfolio with special care because there were doubts in their minds from the beginning," Mr. Beckiewecz said.

They had doubts about her letters of recommendation, copies of certificates of musical education, and programs and reviews of concerts she said she had given.

When confronted, Ms. Singer offered "no admission, no regrets, no penitence," Mr. Beckiewicz said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) - The Medellin cartel, one of Colombia's biggest cocaine operations, laundered nearly two billion dollars of drug money through the Tokyo branch of a Swiss bank, Japanese newspapers reported Thursday.

The daily Mainichi and other newspapers quoted police sources, but a spokesman for the National Police Agency refused to either confirm or deny the reports.

Mainichi said the money was put into an account at the Swiss Bank

Corporation's Tokyo branch in the name of Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha, a top member of the Medellin Cratel.

The account was found as a result of a U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration probe launched into Mr. Gonzalez's bank accounts after his death last year the newspaper said.

But Hans Pieren, vice-president of the bank's Tokyo office, denied that there ever had been an account in the name of Mr. Rodriguez.

He said the bank was not involved in any wrong-doing and had collaborated fully with Japanese police.

Mainichi said 1.8 billion dollars from a Hong Kong bank were transferred to the Tokyo account in November, then moved to an account held by a Colombian financial institution in a New York bank.

It was the first public report in Japan of a case of drug money laundering.

The Japanese government is currently studying new regulations that will oblige the country's financial institutions to render public all large transactions whose origins are deemed suspect.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 6) - Students both opposing and backing Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh's caste-based job quota policy staged rival shows of strength Thursday in the Indian capital.

Hundreds of students opposing the policy blocked road and rail traffic in parts of the city as a 24-hour general strike they had called got off to a halting start amid tight security.

Police said the crowds were later dispersed.

The strike, accompanied by the sympathy closure of some shopping centers, was only a partial success, police said, adding that life in the city of nine million people was largely unaffected.

Police teargassed one group of "unruly" students protesting the quotas at the University of Delhi and several were detained, a police spokesman said but gave no further details.

At one city hospital, about 100 nurses left the wards and blocked traffic to demand the withdrawal of the quotas, while about 700 people, mainly students chanting anti-Singh slogans, blocked two trains by squatting on railroad tracks in a New Delhi suburb, the police said.

Another batch of militant schoolboys blocked road traffic elsewhere in the city, deflating bus tyres near the international airport and the university.

Government offices and banks in the rain-drenched city were functioning as usual and essential services such as water and electricity supplies were normal.

Fewer public transport buses were running in the city centre mainly due to traffic diversions ordered for a mass rally near parliament by thousands of students backing the job quotas announced by New Delhi last month.

Some 60 companies of paramilitary police were deployed to beef up security in the city, which has witnessed violent student protests against the government's August 7 decision reserving almost 50 per cent of all government jobs for lower castes.

At the Boat Club lawns a few hundred metres (yards) from Parliament House, 12,000 to 15,000 students and lower-caste youths rallied in favour of the quotas, short of the 100,000 the organisers had forecast.

Critics charge that Mr. V.P. Singh's job quotas are designed to carve out a caste-based vote bank for the prime minister and his minority National Front government.

Many student organisations have charged that the policy would wipe out merit as a criterion for employement in the government and the public sector, putting more than 50,000 jobs out of the general competitive category.

Upper-caste students have launched crippling strikes and fought with security forces in nearly 40 cities and towns, leaving at least 18 people dead.

CAIRNS, AUSTRALIA (SEPT. 6) - Foreign airlines could buy a stake in the Australian state-owned carrier Qantas, the airline's chairman Bill Dix said Thursday.

As the government continued talks on selling 49 percent of the airline, Mr. Dix told a seminar here he would not rule out the purchase of equity in Qantas by international carriers with close business ties to Qantas.

Such airlines included Lufthansa, British Airways, Japan Airlines and American Airlines, he added.

Mr. Dix also said he would "not be at all surprised" to see Qantas increase the equity it already held in Air New Zealand and Fiji's Air Pacific.

"I would not rule out the acquisition of a stake in Qantas by some of the major carriers with which we do business," he said.

Mr. Dix also hinted at the chance of a further shake-up in aviation in the coming years with cooperation between Qantas, Australian, Ansett and Air New Zealand as they seek to strengthen their positions amid increasing foreign competition.

Qantas' capital funding requirements had increased dramatically from the 650 million dollars (535 million U.S.) the airline needed in July, he said.

The airline planned outlays of more than one one billion dollars (820 million U.S.) a year to the end of the century, with a total of 9.5 billion dollars (7.8 billion U.S.) to be spent on aircraft, Mr. Dix said.

Without the capital, Qantas would be unable to maintain the growth needed to serve Australia's tourism industry, he said.

Munich (SEPT. 6) - The machinery and vehicles concern Man said here Thursday its group surplus for the 1989-90 business year jumped 25 percent to 320 million marks (205 million dollars).

The Maschinenfabrik-Augsburg-Nuremberg company, reporting results on the year ending June 30, said its world group turnover rose eleven per cent to 18.9 billion marks, bouyed by strong demand for investment goods both at home and in Western industrial countries.

Man said the earnings rise would permit it to raise shareholder dividends for the third year in a row. But it did not specify what the dividend would be. Last year Ma paid an 8-marks dividend, the year before that, 6.50 marks.

The company said thatitbooked 20.7 billion marks' worth of orders in the 1989-90 year, up nine percent from the year befor. Foreign orders accounted for 12.6 billion marks of the total, p 12 percent.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 6) - India's third and youngest airline Vayudoot has accepted the resignation of its chief executive, the Press Trust of India (PTI) reported Thursday.

Vayudoot, which flies mainly short routes or to remote destinations, joined its sister companies Air India and Indian Airlines among the ranks of headless public sector concerns.

Chairman and Managing Director Harsh Vardhan, 34, was once widely regarded as one of the fastest-rising stars in Indian aviation management.

Mr. Vardhan's resignation was accepted a year after he had tendered it, owning moral responsibility for the crash of a Vayudoot Dornier in the western city of Pune that killed 14 people.

He rose from the ranks after beginning his career with Air India and was appointed Vayudoot's general manager in 1983. He became its chief executive in 1987, given the job of turning around a company perennially in the red.

Vayudoot's turnover and range of operations increased sharply under his control, but its image suffered because of accidents and technical snags that raised questions about aircraft safety.

Indian Airlines, the main domestic carrier, has been without a chief since its managing director, Raghunandan Prasad, quit after an Airbus A-320 crashed in February killing 90 people in the southern city of Bangalore.

Rajan Jetley resigned as boss of Air India, the international carrier, in July to take a better-paying job in Singapore after turning the company's account books from red to black in a spectacular one-year transformation.

No replacements have been named for them so far.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) - Courtaulds Textiles, detached from British group Courtaulds at the beginning of the year, said Thursday its taxable profit rose 4.5 percent in the first half of this year to 16.4 million pounds (30.9 million dollars) from 15.7 million (29.6 million dollars).

But sales shrank 0.7 percent compared with the same period of last year to 480.9 million pounds (907 million dollars) from 484.3 million (913 million dollars).

Courtaulds Textiles said the firmer pound since the beginning of the year had had a "marked impact" on the international competitivity of its British plants, with exchange rate fluctuations reducing sales by 9.5 million pounds and taxable profit by 0.4 million.

The profit improvement was almost entirely due to increased British sales to retail chain Marks and Spencer, the company's major client, and a brief rise in consumption at the beginning of the year.

Chief executive Martin Taylor warned that the full year results would be "heavily influenced" by the level of domestic demand in he final quarter, noting that the textile and clothing market were weak in Britain and the United States while enjoying good health in continental Europe.

The interim figures were below market expectations, and Courtaulds Textiles shares were down seven pence at 236 on the London stock exchange after the news.

Earnings per share were up to 11.9 pence from 11 pence, and an initial interim dividend of four pence was announced.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 6) - India has signed a contract for 500,000 tons of crude from the United Arab Emirates to help it pull through the oil shortage created by the Gulf crisis, the government announced Thursday.

The brief announcement said a high level delegation now scouring the Gulf for supplies to replace normal imports from Iraq and Kuwait also hoped to secure a contract for another 150,000 tons of kerosene from Bahrain.

The oil would arrive here in September and October and further imports of petroleum products from the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain were "under discussion," the announcement said.

Before Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2, prompting a U.N. embargo on oil from the two countries, India relied on them for 60 per cent of its annual imports, with 4.5 million tons of Iraqi crude coming indirectly through the Soviet Union on a barter basis.

Petroleum Minister M.S. Gurupadaswamy said last week that with promised imports from Saudi Arabia, Malaysia and other sources, Indians should have no fears of an oil shortage, but he warned of a serious drawdown on foreign exchange reserves to pay for it.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) - Oil products manufacturer and distributor Burmah Castrol announced a 3.3 percent interim pre-tax profits improvement Thursday, and chairman Lawrence Urquhart said that the company's principle businesses were showing resilience in the face of Gulf crisis uncertainties.

Burmah Castrol (formerly Burmah Oil before restructuring in July) announced pre-tax profit of 79.2 million pounds (151 million dollars) for first half 1990, up from 76.7 million (146 million) in first half 1989.

Taxation as a percentage of pre-tax profit was calculated at 40 percent.

Turnover net of duties for the period was up 4.3 percent at 831.7 million pounds (1.585 billion dollars) against 796.9 million (1.518 billion).

Earnings per share was 24.7 pence, up from 23.9, and interim dividend was 8.5 pence against eight pence.

Profits were below market expectations, and Burmah shares slipped seven pence to 508 pence despite a steady trend among other oil stocks.

The statement said that the profits climb had been achieved despite "significantly more difficult trading conditions" than in first half 1989.

Chairman and chief executive Mr. Urquhart said "against the uncertain background for trading and currencies engendered by the Middle East crisis our principal businesses are demonstrating resilience."

Since the period covered by the results, Burmah has embarked on a restructuring programme which included the sale in August of its 29.7 percent stake in Premier Consolidated Oilfields for 138 million pounds (263 million dollars) as well as the company's name change.

The moves reflected Burmah's strategy of concentrating on its core business of lubricants, fuels and chemicals, and liquified natural gas transportation and of strengthening the company financially.

The company also announced an agreement to sell its two Ultra Large Crude Carriers (ULCCs -- crude oil tankers of around 300,000 tonnes), to the Swedish shipping line Stena.

SYDNEY (SEPT. 6) - Australia's Western Mining Corp. Holdings Ltd. said Thursday its net profit rose 22.5 percent in the year to the end of June to 422.6 million Australian dollars (348 million U.S.).

Gross operating profit for Australia's eighth largest capitalised company rose 65.7 percent to 351.6 million dollars (290 million U.S.).

The huge rise was partly due to the reclassification of extraordinary items as abnormals, it said, adding that without the book-keeping change the profit was only up 8.9 percent.

The net result compares to the previous year's 345 million dollars (284 million U.S.).

Western Mining's 44.7 percent owned aluminium producer Alcoa of Australia boosted its contribution to Western Mining's bottom line by 87.8 million dollars (72.3 million U.S.) to 334 million dollars (275 million U.S.).

But the contribution to profits from nickel was more than halved to 125 million dollars (103 million U.S.) due to a 32 percent fall in the metal's price.

Profit from the gold arm was up by about two percent to 79.8 million dollars (66 million U.S.).

Chairman Arvi Parbo said there their was scope for improvement in other divisions of the company outside Alcoa.

"We would naturally like the other parts of the company to be more profitable and we are working hard towards that," Sir Arvi said.

Sales for the year totalled 1.38 billion dollars (1.1 billion U.S.).

The company's tax bill fell sharply from 82 million dollars (67.5 million U.S.) to 16 million dollars (13 million U.S).

WOLFSBURG (SEPT. 6) - East Germans are ordering new Volkswagen cars at a far higher rate then expected, and the boom will continue into 1991, the Vw company said here Thursday.

Vw said that this year it expected to sell 50,000 brand-new VW, Audi, and Spanish-built Seat cars in East Germany, nearly 20,000 more than it had had calculated around July 1, when the East-West German economic union introduced the Deutschmark to East Germany.

A VW spokesman told the German Press Agency that the company was now revising its sales targets, so that in 1991, new car sales were expected to reach 100,000, instead of 55,000 as originally estimated.

The spokesman said that contributing to the success was VW's early establishment of a sales network in East Germany. The company now has 423 VWAudi sales outlets and 150 Seat dealers in the country which in less than a month will merge with West Germany.

KUALA LUMPUR (SEPT. 6) - The Base Lending Rate (BLR) for commercial banks will be raised by up to 0.5 of a percentage point from Monday, the Association of Banks of Malaysia announced Thursday.

The BLR is currently at a 20-year-low of 6.75 percent for the two lead banks - Malayan Banking Berhad and Bank Bumiputra Malaysia Bhd - and seven per cent for the other commercial banks.

The association said in a statement that the decision was made in consultation with Bank Negara, the central bank.

The association originally submitted a request to the central bank for an upward adjustment of the BLR by one percentage point in mid-May because of narrowing margins.

MANILA, Sept 6 (AFP) - Businessmen believe the Philippine economy is in a state of drift due to setbacks in the wake of the Gulf crisis and a devastating earthquake, Finance Secretary Jesus Estanislao said Thursday.

"There's a lot of speculation in the financial markets, interest rates have gone up ... and there's a lot of speculation in the foreign exchange market which are not based on market realities," he told reporters after a cabinet meeting.

"There appears to be a sense of drift," he added.

Manila has lowered its growth forecast for 1990 to 3.8 percent from 5.7 per- cent last year, postponed tariff reform and put off the implementation of an oil deregulation scheme.

The measures came after an earthquake July 16 that killed 2,300 people and the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, which has threatened the livelihood of half a million Filipino overseas workers in the Gulf region.

President Corazon Aquino summoned her economic advisors Thursday "to find out really what we can do," Mr. Estanislao said.

"We are suffering a number of delays simply because of certain very key decisions that we will have to make given the changes that have come around in light of the earthquake ... and now the Middle East crisis whose dimensions we do not yet fully know."

Persistent rumors of a coup plot against Mrs. Aquino, who has weathered six military rebellions, have also wrought havoc on business confidence here.

Asked what the government should do to arrest the drift, Mr. Estanislao said "the immediate task at hand is to come out with very clear decisions on some very key points of the economy so that we stop all these speculations."

He said the government "cannot afford to pay whatever subsidies I am paying right now," apparently referring to the postponed oil deregulation program.

Manila depends on imported oil for more than 60 percent of its energy requirements.

Mr. Estanislao said the tariff reform program would have to be implemented eventually, along with relaxation of investment laws.

Stockholm (SEPT. 6) - Scandinavian Airlines Systems, the joint airline of Sweden, Norway and Denmark, announced plans Thursday to cut costs by one billion Swedish krona (172 million dollars) in 1991.

The Sas strategy primarily foresees cutting personnel costs, which currently make up 34 percent of the airline's expenditures, company officials here said.

In the first six months of 1990, Sas showed a pre-tax profit of 369 million krona, down 40 percent on the same period of last year. All except 17 million krona of the surplus resulted from the airline selling off airplanes.

It was also reported Thursday that Sas chief executive Jan Carlzon had secretly met Norwegian Premier Jan Syse in Oslo on Wednesday to discuss the possibility of a partial privatisation of Norway's share in Sas.

The Aftenposten newspaper said the talks also concerned the possibility of the three countries raising the airline's capitalisation by 2.7 billion krona.

(SEPT. 6) - In Paris, a foreign ministry spokesman said the evacuation of French women and children from Iraq and Kuwait is complete after an Air France jetliner Thursday arrived at Orly airport with 105 people on board.

On board the Airbus were also 28 Britons and 12 Americans as well as several Belgians, Spaniards and West Germans. There were now no longer any French women and children being forced to stay in Iraq or Kuwait against their will, said the spokesman.

In an another development in the crisis region, a second contingent of Egyptian troops left Cairo for the United Arab Emirates Thursday, Egypt's news agency Mena reported.

The U.S. European Command in Stuttgart, West Germany, Thursday said ''elements'' of the U.S. army's 7th medical command ''are deploying from West Germany to Saudi Arabia''.

''The medical command will deploy elements of the 483rd medical detachment

(veterinary service) and the 655th medical company (blood bank) and associated personnel and equipment to support the U.S. central command in Operation Desert Shield,'' it added.

In Moscow, visiting Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz conceded Thursday there were ''certain differences'' between Moscow and Baghdad on the Gulf issue.

Foreign ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov said the meeting Wednesday between Aziz and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev had not produced ''any step backwards''. In the Soviet view, all U.N. resolutions had to be enforced - a clear endorsement of continuing sanctions against Iraq.

Christian Falkowksi said the community was also prepared to charter a plane from the International Committee of the Red Cross to transport medical supplies for the stranded refugees.

More than 600,000 people have passed through Jordan from Kuwait and Iraq since Baghad's August 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Jordanian authorities have issued repeated appeals for international assistance, warning that thay were unable to cope with the flood of refugees, most of whom are Asians.

LONDON, Sept 6 (AFP) - The Bank of England on Thursday took the unusual step of moving to discourage speculation of an easing of interest rates, currently at 15 percent, in a technical note to discount houses.

The move came in reaction to a lowering of interbank rates below 15 percent, observers said.

The three-month London Interbank Offered Rate (LIBOR) stood at 14.875 percent on Thursday morning.

The Bank's technical note to discount houses said that instead of the usual tender operation, it would be offering financial institutions refinancing later Thursday at a fixed rate of 15 percent.

The Bank used a similar technique in June when the steep rise in the pound first pushed interbank rates down.

ANKARA (SEPT. 6) - China may increase its deliveries of oil to Turkey to compensate for the end of Iraqi oil deliveries, Chinese Foreign Minister Qian Qichen said here on Thursday, the Anatolia news agency reported.

Mr. Qian said China may revise upward its planned delivery of 2.5 million barrels of oil for 1990. He spoke before boarding a plane to Izmir, Anatolia said.

Sixty per cent of Turkey's oil imports - which total 12 million tons - had come from Iraq until Turkey closed the two Iraqi pipelines to the T terminal at Yumurtalik on August 7.

China had previously indicated its willingness to increase oil deliveries. Mr. Qian, as quoted by Anatolia, did not specify under what conditions the deliveries would be increased.

Mr. Qian said the past two days of talks with his counterpart, Ali Bozer, and President Turgut Ozal, had been "fruitful."

Under discussion were such issues as the Gulf crisis, Cambodia, Cyprus and bilateral relations, according to Turkish foreign ministry officials.

After visiting Izmir and Istanbul, Mr. Qian was to leave Friday for Peru, Bolivia, Colombia and Venezuela.

OSLO (SEPT. 6) - The biggest gas tanker ever built in Scotland was launched on the river Clyde near Glasgow, the Norwegian company that built it, Kvaerner Govan, said Thursday.

The tanker can carry 54,000 cubic meters of gas.

The old Govan shipyard, bought by Kvaerner two years ago, today is the only one of its kind along the Clyde. Govan was on the verge of bankruptcy with no building contracts, but today the shipyard is thriving. At least 1,450 workers will be employed until the spring of 1992.

The gas tanker was built for the Norwegian Company Myhre Havtor Pool and will be christened at a later date, Kvaerner Govan said.

Bonn (SEPT. 6) - West Germany will give the Soviet Union billions of dollars to help in the withdrawal of 380,000 Soviet troops from East Germany, it was disclosed here Thursday. An exact figure was not named.

The money will go toward the cost of maintaining the Soviet troops until 1994 and to build housing for army families moving back home.

A bonn finance ministry spokesman said the two governments agreed on the framework of a treaty that would preclude any further financial demands by the Soviet Union after 1994.

He said Bonn was also supplying a loan of unspecified size to give the Soviets more time to repay their debts to East Germany.

The two sides, represented by West German Finance Minister Theo Waigel and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Stepan Sitaryan, have not set a figure for the total amount of West German financial contributions.

The spokesman said the sum would have to be decided by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

LAGOS (SEPT 6) - Nigeria has already increased oil production in accordance with the recent Opec decision and can sustain current output indefinitely, a source at the Nigerian National Petroleum Corporation (Nnpc) said Thursday.

The source, who did not disclose the volume of the increase over the nation's Opec quota of 1.611 million barrels per day (Mbd), said the country had a capacity for 2 Mbd.

He said that many wells which had been lying fallow over the years might be put into operation ''if necessary''.

The source also said that intensified exploration activities in the past three years had been ''very rewarding'', noting that some oil companies had recently announced new finds in their operational areas.

Preliminary estimates indicate that the findings amount to some 400 million barrels of oil and more than half a trillion cubit feet of gas.

NEW DELHI (SEPT 6) - India Thursday reported widespread shortages in occupied Kuwait and called for United Nations approval of its efforts to rush food and medicines to the thousands of Indian nationals stranded there.

An external affairs ministry spokesman said here that bread, life-saving drugs and water were running scarce in the emirate occupied by Iraq since August 2.

But he denied that New Delhi was being soft on Baghdad and denounced what he called "disinformation" on the country's stance which Indian news reports say has led to attacks on Indians by Kuwaiti resistance fighters.

"Our people are facing great shortages of medicines," the spokesman said. "Bread shops are empty (and) hospitals have stopped taking patients because they have run out of life-saving drugs."

He added that water was also in short supply and telephone connections were beoming erratic in Kuwait, where some 170,000 Indian workers were stranded when Iraqi troops invaded.

The spokesman it was the severity of conditions that had forced thousands of Indians to flee Kuwait and make the "arduous trek across inhospitable territory" to Jordan.

"Things are getting increasingly difficult. So people panic. When they panic, they leave their homes," he said, adding that conditions in Jordanian relief camps were no better.

Reports from Jordan say that the thousands of Asians and others in refugee camps there are facing severe shortages, with many penniless and unable to buy even bread from the open market.

"That is why we are anxious to make the world realise that medicines and food should be rushed (to occupied Kuwait) to end untold human sufferings " the spokesman said.

He added that New Delhi had also asked the United Nations to help clear the way to end the crippling shortages.

The official said India's position had been conveyed to Kuwaiti Oil Minister Rasheed al-Ameeri, who met Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh here Wednesday and called for a total blockade of Iraq and Kuwait.

Mr. Ameeri, who is scheduled to return to Riyadh Friday, told a news conference after meeting Mr. V.P. Singh that any despatch of food and medicines to Kuwait would only help Iraq consolidate its occupation.

LAGOS (SEPT 6) - Most tariff barriers to trade in the Economic Community of West African States (Ecowas) will be eliminated by 1994, Ecowas executive Secretary Abbas Bundu announced Thursday.

He told the opening of a three-day general assembly of African Manufacturers Association that tariffs had been removed from the first two categories of goods originating from the community -unprocessed goods and handicrafts.

He said the elimination of tariffs on industrial products would be gradual and the rate would depend on the category to which the products and the exporting member state belonged.

The 16 member states of Ecowas have been grouped into three, according to their level of industrialisation.

The first group with a relatively high level of industrialisation comprises the Ivory Coast, Ghana, Nigeria and Senegal. They are expected to eliminate tariffs over a period of four years for priority products and six years for non-priority products.

The second group - Benin, Guinea, Liberia, Sierra Leone and Togo - has six years to eliminate all tariffs on priority industrial products and eight years for non-priority products.

The third group - Burkina Faso, Cape Verde, Gambia, Guinea Bissau, Mali, Mauritania and Niger - should achieve tariff elimination within eight years for priority and ten years for non-priority products.

PRETORIA (SEPT. 6) - The black nationalist African National Congress (ANC) Thursday sent a much-reduced team to meet with a top government delegation in what is being interpreted as a deliberate snub.

Instead of an announced seven-member delegation to the meeting, which was to explore issues relating to the ANC's decision on August 7 to suspend its 29-year guerrilla war against the white-minority government, only three ANC officials arrived for the talks here.

The meeting, the first session of a joint governmentANC working group set up under the historic Pretoria Minute accord between the two parties, was expected to continue the whole of Thursday, but informed sources told Agence France-Presse it lasted barely three hours.

The ANC move seems to have been a retort to the government's exclusion from the discussions of ANC army Chief of Staff, Chris Hani, who was supposed to lead the ANC team.

A bitter war of words erupted between the two parties when the government refused last month to renew Mr. Hani's three-month indemnity from prosecution for previous crimes against the state, issued in May to enable him to take part in talks with the government towards constitutional negotiations.

Meanwhile, President Frederik de Klerk earlier on Thursday said escalating political violence may delay the negotiations but was unlikely to derail them.

It was important that obstacles in the way of negotiations be cleared, Mr. De Klerk told journalists here before entering a meeting with a visiting delegation of Dutch parliamentarians.

"There can be no real reform without stability," he said, adding that the government would do whatever was necessary to maintain law and order in a fair way.

The government has said it hopes negotiations with black and white political leaders towards a "new South Africa" can start early next year and has already held two historic meetings with the ANC in a bid to clear obstacles to talks.

A recent upsurge of black-on-black violence in townships around Johannesburg, in which more than 550 people have died, has strained the fragile peace process with the ANC accusing the police of fuelling the conflict.

BUCHAREST (SEPT 6) - Thousands of Romanian mechanical construction workers who went on strike in August are threatening fresh action unless they receive "clear and written" replies to their demands by September 13, trade union sources said.

Workers at the Tractorul company in Brasov made the decision there Thursday, the sources said by telephone from the central city.

Prime Minister Petre Roman is to visit Brasov on Friday, the sources added.

Ten thousand of the plant's 18,700 employees downed tools between August 27 and 29 in protest at problems facing Romanian industry, such as a lack of raw materials, and food shortages.

They later suspended further strike action until September 5.

Union officials say some of the Tractorul workers saw their salaries plummet 50 percent in July because of a drop in factory output.

Their main demands, already outlined in a list given to government officials, are that workers should have their salary guaranteed at national level and that industry should have access to adequate raw materials to keep up production.

During the earlier strike they called on the prime minister to visit Brasov and the government agreed, but only on condition they resumed work.

TOKYO (SEPT 6) - Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze called for an acceptable solution to Kuril Islands dispute with Japan, as President Mikhail Gorbachev said he would make an unprecedented trip here to break a stalemate in relations.

But Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu told visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, who carried the message from Mr. Gorbachev, that Moscow-Tokyo ties would not improve unless the dispute over four Kuril islands north of Japan was settled, Japanese officials said.

"It will take a long time" for the two nations to find a solution to the problem, Japanese officials quoted Mr. Shevardnadze as telling his counterpart, Taro Nakayama, during talks here to improve relations.

"The two sides have reached a common understanding that their security should not be damaged," he said. "It is necessary to seek a solution mutually acceptable to both sides."

Mr. Shevardnadze's remarks were seen by a Japanese government official as "relatively soft and prudent in a postive sense." But he cautioned there was nothing to indicate "substantial change" in Moscow's stance toward the islands.

The islands of Etorofu, Kunashiri, Shikotan and Habomai were occupied by Soviet troops at the end of World War II and have since become an important, fortified link in the Soviet Union's Asian defenses.

Before Mr. Gorbachev came to power in 1985 with policies of reform and openness, the Soviet Union refused to openly discuss Japan's demand for the return of the islands.

Mr. Kaifu said he would welcome Mr. Gorbachev in April, but that Tokyo would pursue relations with Moscow "without putting aside the difficult problems of settling the territorial problem and concluding a peace treaty " officials said.

Nearly 1,000 right-wing activists and sympathizers demonstrated in central Tokyo for the return of the islands, known in Japan as the Northern Territories.

SOFIA (SEPT 6) - The leaders of Bulgaria and Turkey are expected to meet for the first time since tensions arose six years ago when Bulgaria introduced a policy of forced assimilation of ethnic Turks.

Bulgarian Prime Minister Andrei Loukanov will arrive in Antalya, Turkey, Thursday night to participate in a three-day round-table discussion beginning Friday on the United Nations Development Program.

Mr. Loukanov will probably meet with Turkish President Turgut Ozal apart from the round-table talks, offical sources in Sofia said.

The last time a Bulgarian leader, former communist party chief Todor Zhivkov, visited Turkey was in 1983.

One year later Mr. Zhivkov introduced an assimilation policy affecting the Turkish minority (10 per cent of the total population of about nine million) who were obliged to change their Turkish names to Bulgarian names.

The policy caused a rift between the Turkish and Bulgarian governments, provoked bloody riots in May 1989 and led to the mass exodus of 300,000 Bulgarians of Turkish origin to Turkey, of whom 100,000 have since returned to Bulgaria.

After the fall of Mr. Zhivkov, the reform communist government allowed Bulgarians to revert to their Turkish names. In January, Sofia and Ankara held talks at the foreign ministerial level.

BEIJING (SEPT. 6) EFE - China Thursday told visiting Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan that Baghdad must comply with U.N. Security Council resolutions and pull its troops out of Kuwait.

At a press conference, a Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman said, "China's position is very clear and demands the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops to restore the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Kuwait."

But he pointed out that the United Nations resolution calling for an embargo against Iraq and Kuwait "does not include food, medicine and humanitarian aid", while he declined to say if China would provide such assistance.

China, along with the four other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, approved the economic sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait four days after the August 2 invasion.

It also agreed to support all U.N. resolutions aimed at ending the month-long conflict, including the use of force to ensure the embargo is maintained.

Santiago (SEPT. 6) EFE - Chilean neo Nazis have expressed their support for Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, calling him a model "of the struggle against Zionism".

In a rally Wednesday in the capital, former diplomat and neo Nazi Miguel Serrano told more than 50 cheering supporters that he wholeheartedly backed Iraq's fight "against Jewish infamy in the Persian Gulf".

Serrano's supporters shouted "Heil Hitler" as the author, dressed in a long black leather trenchcoat, affirmed his belief that the great powers would fall and Nazism would be reborn.

The author said Nazis were the only real revolutionaries. "We are totalitarian and we loathe and hate democracy."

Asked by reporters how many Nazis there were in Chile, Serrano refused to give a figure, but said they were an "indestructible force".

Serrano also launched an attack on former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet, accusing him of having run concentration camps where "Palestinian patriots who had escaped from Zionism" were tortured.

A number of leading former Nazis are believed to have fled to Chile after World War II, many of them changing their identity to avoid being captured.

PANAMA CITY (SEPT 6) EFE - Panamanian anti-drug agents and the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) have seized 2.5 tons of cocaine from a tiny private island off the Atlantic coast, authorities said Thursday.

The haul, captured on the island of Samba Bonita close to the Colombian border, was the largest so far in Panama, said officials who asked to remain anonymous.

Few details have been released of the joint Panama-U.S. operation, but officials said the drugs were found on a boat moored off the private island, which reportedly belongs to former president Demetrio Basilio Lakas.

Last month former U.S. ambassador Deane Hinton charged, in an address to Panamanian police, that Panama was still a drug transit country eight months after Gen. Manuel Noriega was ousted in a U.S invasion.

Hinton pointed out that the coast close to the Colombian border was a particularly active area for drug trafficking.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) KYODO - NEC CORP. SAID THURSDAY IT HAS DEVELOPED A VISIBLE LASER DIODE WITH WHAT IS CLAIMED TO BE THE WORLD'S HIGHEST OUTPUT, WHICH IT SAID WILL ENABLE SIGNIFICANT IMPROVEMENTS IN HIGH-SPEED LASER PRINTERS AND RECORDING/PLAYBACK DEVICES.

THE LIGHT GENERATED FROM THE 75-MILLIWATT VISIBLE LASER DIODE, WHICH IS COMPOSED OF ALUMINUM, GALLIUM, INDIUM AND PHOSPHORUS MATERIALS, IS EASILY SEEN BY THE HUMAN EYE.

THE 680-NANOMETER DEVICE CAN FOCUS BEAM OUTPUT PRECISELY ON A VERY SMALL AREA, MAKING IT IDEAL FOR USE WITH HIGHER-DENSITY STORAGE DEVICES, COMPANY OFFICIALS SAID. A NANOMETER IS ONE-BILLIONTH OF A METER.

THE HIGHEST LASER DIODE OUTPUT ACHIEVED BY SCIENTISTS TO DATE IS 45 MILLIWATTS. COMMERCIAL LASER DIODES HAVE AN OUTPUT OF SEVERAL MILLIWATTS.

THE NEW LASER DIODE ENABLES AN INCREASE OF 50 PERCENT IN STORAGE CAPACITY FOR RECORDING AND PLAYBACK LASER DISKS COMPARED TO THE COMPUTER MAKER'S PRESENT 830-NANOMETER LASER DIODE.

POINTERS, BAR CODE READERS, AND LASER PRINTERS HAVE USED A LOW OUTPUT OF LIGHT TO TRANSFER INFORMATION. OPTICAL DISKS AND HIGH-SPEED PRINTERS REQUIRE AN OUTPUT LEVEL OF 30 MILLIWATTS OR MORE.

BUT HIGH-OUTPUT LASERS, UNTIL NOW, HAVE BEEN IMPOSSIBLE TO DEVELOP BECAUSE OF THE DAMAGE THE LIGHT CAUSES TO THE MIRROR, OR REFLECTION SURFACE. THE ACTIVE LAYER OF THE MIRROR ABSORBS HEAT FROM THE LIGHT, CAUSING THE REFLECTIVE SURFACE TO MELT.

NEC RESEARCHERS SOLVED THE PROBLEM BY COATING THE ACTIVE LAYER OF THE REFLECTIVE SURFACE WITH ZINC TO PREVENT DAMAGE TO THE MIRROR.

THE ELECTRONICS GIANT WILL PRESENT THE VISIBLE LASER DIODE AT THE IEEE SEMICONDUCTOR CONFERENCE IN DAVOS, SWITZERLAND, ON MONDAY, THE OFFICIALS SAID.

He predicts a move back to 3000 with some resistance around the 2750 level because of "a lot of psychological damage" and the "uncertainty in the Mideast." Todd moved back into the mutual funds he left at 2850, and also likes EASTMAN KODAK and HERSHEY. ("Investor's Daily", 9/6)

"Why hasn't the market been worse?" asks JOHN WESTERGAARD, president of WESTERGAARD RESEARCH. "Bad news is all over the place - there are no buyers out there ... but the market doesn't want to go down," says Westergaard, who believes the market saw its lows last week. Westergaard's long-term bullishness is partly based on post-Cold War political and economic cooperation between the superpowers and other nations. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/6)

FROM THE BEARS:

"The sharp decline in equity prices has not significantly improved the valuation of equities, since much of the decline has been offset by the rise in interest rates. ... U.S. equities are still some 15% above a theoretical buy price," says ABBY JOSEPH COHEN, a market strategist at BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD. Ms. Cohen was bearish well before Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait, and she does not see a bottom for the market yet. She says, "The bottom for the market is a moving target. ... The bottom in equity prices cannot be gauged until ... economic fundamentals have shown some sign of stabilization. We're not there yet." (WSJ, 9/6)

MARC SUTIN of SAFIAN INVESTMENT RESEARCH says a bear market is not on the way, it has already arrived. "If you look at the ... Dow Jones Industrial average or the S&P 500, the both of them are down about 17% - peak to trough - this year," which may or may not be large enough to declare a bear market, according to Sutin. But, he points out, the broader averages are down more than 25% - "definitely bear market proportions." He says the downturn could last another 6 - 12 months. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/5)

STOCK MARKET:

"Reports that an Iraqi soldier shot an American are certainly not going to help us on the opening this morning," says JEFFERY KAMINSKY, head block trader for MABON NUGENT. "Oil trading through thirty dollars a barrel is not going to help either." Kaminsky expects stocks to continue to trade down, although volume may pick up on "real news" out of the Mideast. The Gulf crisis has diverted attention from the long term problems facing the U.S. economy, says Kaminsky. "I don't think they bode well for stock prices in the future." (FNN "World Business Update", 9/6)

"The market doesn't like a standoff in the desert any more than those who have to be on duty in that environment," says ROBERT STOVALL, president of

STOVALL/TWENTY-FIRST ADVISERS. He argues that "aimless drifting on modest volume may be the market's role until there's a basic change in the investing environment." (NYT, 9/6)

"People are still on tenterhooks with respect to the Mideast crisis, and there's a large body of people who fear a long stalemate and don't want to make any [market] moves," says STEFAN ABRAMS, chief investment strategist at KIDDER, PEABODY & CO. (WSJ, 9/6)

"Probably the best potential is up to maybe 2800 or slightly higher," says WALTER MURPHY, technical analyst at MERRILL LYNCH. "That's if everything that can go right does go right. The more likely range is somewhere between the 2680ish area and 2750. So I think you can poke in there, digest the decline we had - work off the oversold - and then set the stage for another decline later on." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/5)

"The markets are regaining some of their stability and perspective," says MICHAEL METZ of OPPENHEIMER & CO. "This is not an open-ended inflationary situation." But he says uncertainty in the Middle East is holding stocks back. "There's not enough courage on the part of the bulls." HUGH JOHNSON of FIRST ALBANY CORP. says improved unemployment figures expected tomorrow will help bring buyers back into the market. ("USA Today", 9/6)

"The market appears very much sold out," says JACK SOLOMON, a technical analyst at BEAR, STEARNS & CO., noting that the industrial average has stabilized around the 2600 level over the past week and a half and the "urgent selling" of recent weeks "seems to be completed." (WSJ, 9/6)

"I'm not yet impressed by the rally since Aug. 23, although I'm a little surprised there has not been more downside pressure," says technical analyst ANTHONY TABELL at DELAFIELD, HARVEY, TABELL. "The market has simply 'stopped falling' - and that's something you basically distrust until proven otherwise." ("The Washington Post", 9/6)

"I don't believe we have fully digested the seriousness of events in the Middle East," says ALAN ACKERMAN, market analyst for GRUNTAL & CO. "We've got a market with a very low energy level, lacking in momentum, lacking in volume. The only high energy levels are energy prices, which closed over $29-a-barrel today. I don't believe we've seen the worst of things yet to come in the Middle East and the pressures on our own economy due to carrying the burden of the close to $1-billion-a-month cost of keeping our military in the Middle East." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/6)

"Earnings projections will continue to come down for the rest of 1990 and all of 1991," says SURESH BHIRUD, chief market analyst for OPPENHEIMER & CO. "Earnings are the single biggest determinant of market performance," says WILLIAM PATERNOTTE, research chief at ALEX. BROWN & SONS. BARRY SAHGAL, research director at LADENBURG THALMANN & CO., says even if the Persian Gulf crisis is resolved "the cold light of day will shine on weak corporate earnings." ("USA Today", 9/6)

STOCK TIPS:

Department stores are trying to react more quickly to retailing trends and competition from speciality outlets, says WAYNE HOOD, retail analyst for PRUDENTIAL-BACHE. His favorite department store is DILLARD which has more than half of its stores in the oil patch and showed a 14% increase in comparable store sales in August. Hood also likes HOME DEPOT: "We think they are somewhat recession resistant, their sales continue to outperform the retail group, and they have exposure in the oil patch as well." (CNN "Business Morning", 9/6)

NIKE is up over 5 points in the last two sessions on very active trading. A boycott by OPERATION PUSH caused the stock to dip sharply last month, but the boycott seems to have failed. "The verdict is not in on the PUSH boycott, but it certainly didn't have the impact that was expected," says JOHN ROGERS of RAGEN & MACKENZIE. ("Investor's Daily", 9/6)

"The whole trend in the 1990s is going to be toward personal communications systems," says JOHN WESTERGAARD of WESTERGAARD RESEARCH. He likes the wrist watch communications technology of AT&T which is being tested for the first time in Portland, Oregon. The "Dick Tracy" type units are manufactured for the company by SEIKO, the world's largest watchmaker. (FNN "World Business Update", 9/6)

"We're increasingly concerned about the September-quarter earnings" for technology stocks, says CHARLES TAYLOR JR., a PRUDENTIAL-BACHE software analyst, explaining why the company eliminated its buy recommendations on nine Big Board technology stocks, including IBM and XEROX, and 10 over-the-counter high-tech issues. "We didn't feel there was enough justification that these stocks could go up in a down market," adds RICHARD BILLY, a Pru-Bache electronics analyst. (NYT, 9/6)

Forecasting lower sales of computer chips in the wake of a decline in personal computer volume, RAJIV CHAUDRI, an electronics analyst at GOLDMAN SACHS & COMPANY, cut his earnings estimates for TEXAS INSTRUMENTS, MOTOROLA and INTEL. Also predicting a "softer economic environment" SHEARSON, LEHMAN BROTHERS' electrical equipment analyst, ROBERT CORNELL, cut his earnings estimates for GENERAL ELECTRIC, EMERSON ELECTRIC, MAYTAG, SQUARE D, WESTINGHOUSE and WHIRLPOOL. FALLS CHURCH, VA (SEPT. 6) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2)

MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"I'm very negative on the dollar," says CHRISTIANE MANDELL, a currency adviser at SECURITY PACIFIC MERCHANT BANK. She cites "widening interest rate differentials and the theory that the Fed could move this week" as the biggest factors driving the dollar down. ("Investor's Daily", 9/6)

"The dollar going down is good for the United States," says RICHARD WITTEN a foreign exchange analyst at GOLDMAN SACHS. Such a decline will "make our exports more competitive, and it is, in fact, exports that are fueling our economy." (CNN "Moneyline", 9/5)

"We're sort of still on the precipice," says DAVID GILMORE, currency analyst at McCARTHEY, CRISANTI, MAFFEI. "We haven't really gone through the 140 level yet in dollar-yen, and until we do that, I think the market is going to be looking for a temporary bottom before the big push lower. European currencies ... have not made new lows. They are still above week-ago lows, so the market is still a little bit cautious here. The yen obviously has a lot more to catch up to get to where the Europeans have gotten." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/6)

"On the whole [the selloff of the dollar yesterday] was a lot of speculation about the Fed easing," says DAVID MARSHALL of MMS INTERNATIONAL. "There was speculation about U.S. rates moving down and other rates moving up." ("Investor's Daily", 9/6)

"We're still basically looking at interest rates and the differential between currencies as the main factor behind the market," says HUBERT PEDROLI of CREDIT SUISSE. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/5)

If the Fed does ease, "long-term market rates are likely to go up because of a loss of faith in the Fed's resolve to fight inflation," says BANKERS TRUST CO. managing director ALAN LERNER. But SAM KAHAN of FUJI SECURITIES also points out that "If the market perceives the Fed easing as a response to a weakening economy that will not lead to higher inflation, then there's no reason for the bond market not to do better." He thinks the Fed is a month too late with this easing move. "The danger for them now is that time is running out," says Kahan. ("Investor's Daily", 9/6)

"The market at this point is looking for U.S. rates to be heading lower, and European and Asian rates to be heading higher," says LISA FINSTROM of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROTHERS. "The U.S. economy is assumed to be on the verge if not in, a recession," while growth rates in Europe and the Far East are "very bouyant," according to Finstrom. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/5)

"I think that the [stock] market is concentrating on the fact that interest rates may be coming down," says ROBERT HARVEY of SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK. He says that with an already weak economy, the employment figures may force the Fed to ease. "What happens in labor is really a leading indicator for wages and that is the long-term source of embedded inflation," according to Harvey. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/5)

"The [bond] market had a relatively good performance in spite of negative news," says JOE LIRO, vice president and money market economist at S.G. WARBURG SECURITIES INC. "But I doubt you are going to see many heavy bets placed until people see the composition of the employment numbers on Friday." He adds, "The market is cautiously optimistic that the Fed is about to ease, but it hasn't swallowed that argument hook, line and sinker. If it had, yields on the two-year Treasury note would be under 8 percent." (NYT, 9/6)

JOHN LONSKI, senior economist at MOODY'S INVESTOR SERVICE, says issuers of junk bonds now face their "severest test." If a recession takes place, he says, the size and number of defaults could outstrip those in the 1981 recession because today only 25% of the junk bond market consists of the highest-rated issues, compared with 42% in 1982. "It's riskier," he says. (NYT, 9/6)

THE ECONOMY:

"I think you're seeing caution, but not yet fear" about the economy, says DOUGLAS LAUGHLIN of BEAR, STEARNS. This growing hesitancy on the part of consumers "is starting to work its way into the numbers," according to Laughlin. (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/5)

Sales of North American-made cars and trucks dropped 21% in late August, reflecting consumers' uncertainty about the softening U.S. economy as the Mideast crisis moves into its sixth week. "People are only buying cars when they really need them," says auto analyst CHARLES BRADY of OPPENHEIMER & CO, JOHN GRETTENBERGER, general manager of GENERAL MOTORS' Cadillac division says, "We need good stable Wall Street performance and more good news from the Middle East to see demand restored." (WSJ, 9/6)

IN WASHINGTON:

HOUSE BANKING COMMITTEE CHAIRMAN HENRY GONZALES (D. - Tex.), is proposing to cut federal savings insurance to below $100,000 per account, limit the number of accounts that can be insured and consolidate into one agency the regulatory functions of the three federal agencies that oversee banks and savings and loans. "The average account in this country is only about $8,700," says Gonzales. "The overwhelming majority of depositors would be fully protected with far less insurance coverage than the law currently provides." ("The Washington Post" and "USA Today", 9/6)

From the "If-Mohammed-won't-go-to-the-Mountain Department," budget negotiators are considering readjusting the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit targets. "The question is, can you readjust those targets so that we put ourselves back on track in terms of deficit reduction over these next 5 to 6 years?" says REP. LEON PANETTA (D. - Calif.). But HENRY AARON of THE BROOKINGS INSTITUTION thinks whatever measures are enacted will make only small steps towards actual budget reduction. "I am still worried about the prospects of getting a multi-year agreement that really does move us a significant distance towards deficit reduction," says Aaron. (CNN "Moneyline", 9/5)

TORRANCE, CA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Standard Brands Paint Company (NYSE: SBP) today reported reduced sales and a net loss for the second quarter of its fiscal year ending Jan. 27, 1991. The company also announced a restructuring of its retail operations in order to improve its future cash flow and earnings position.

The company today closed its 16 Home Decorating Centers in Dallas, Houston Austin and San Antonio, Texas, and a distribution facility in Dallas, as well as three smaller units in Merced, Chico and Redding, Calif., and discharged 220 employees in these areas. To provide for the costs of closing its Texas operations including inventory movement and markdowns, fixed store expenses, associated personnel costs, and a comprehensive employee assistance program, the company accrued a one-time restructuring charge of $4,700,000 in addition to a $1,000,000 allowance for loss from discontinued operations.

Stuart D. Buchalter, the company's chief executive officer, stated that "steps are being taken to sell the closed Texas stores and the Dallas distribution facility with the anticipated proceeds to be utilized to repay long-term debt now at $150 million. These properties in Texas have an estimated value of approximately $20,000,000. Upon sale of these properties and the application of the proceeds, the resulting reduction in interest cost and the improvements in the company's balance sheet will help ensure that Standard Brands will continue to grow in its primary marketing areas."

Rick Beck, company president, stated that the company "plans to concentrate its efforts on intensifying our West Coast presence and will now redirect its retailing efforts toward its remaining higher potential Home Decorating Centers. We will also accent our three primary product groups, paint, wallcoverings and floorcoverings and will continue with our strategy of opening Home Decorating Centers within proven marketing areas." New Home Decorating store openings are planned over the next year for Fresno, San Leandro, Ontario, Compton, San Diego and El Centro, Calif.

with two more units in Las Vegas, Nev., and Phoenix, Ariz. In addition, Beck stated that "the continued success of The Art Stores in California will be strengthened with the addition of three new Art Stores in San Diego, Santa Barbara and San Jose, California."

DOMINGUEZ, CA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Pic 'N' Save Corp. (NASDAQ: PICN) today reported a net loss for its second fiscal quarter ended July 29, 1990, of $9,298,000, or $.27 per share, compared with net earnings of $6,403,000, or $.18 per share, in the second fiscal quarter ended July 2, 1989. The second quarter ended July 29, 1990, includes a one-time pretax accounting charge of $19,024,000 for the recent contested proxy solicitation and restructuring program, an amount which translates to $.33 per share after tax.

For the six months ended July 29, 1990, the net loss was $3,362,000, or $.10 per share, compared to net earnings of $11,818,000, or $.33 per share in the first two quarters of the prior year.

Sales during the second fiscal quarter increased 10.7 percent to $112,676,000, from last year's second quarter sales of $101,772,000. Sales in comparable stores for the 13 weeks ended July 29, excluding the Job Lot

Pushcart stores, were 3.4 percent higher than in the same period last year. Sales of $31,732,000 for the four weeks ended Aug. 26, 1990, were 5.6 percent lower than the $33,602,000 in the prior year period, reflecting the sale of the Job Lot Pushcart stores. Sales in comparable stores during the most recent period were 6.1 percent lower than in the prior year, when a major advertising/promotional event occurred. Year-to-date comparable store sales increased by 3.0 percent.

Pic 'N' Save said that due to the change of its fiscal year, this year's second quarter results excluded April, a normally strong month because of the Easter Holiday, and included July, a normally weak month. The company said that its gross profit rate was lower because of the higher provision for inventory shortage during the first half of 1990, and that freight costs were also higher, due to the significant increase in purchasing activity which has occurred to position inventories for strong second half selling opportunities. The company said additionally that markups were somewhat lower in the first half of 1990, based upon lower comparative beginning inventory markups in both the stores and the warehouse. However it said that it expects, based on the steady increase in purchase markup achieved throughout this year, as well as improved control over markdowns, its realized gross profit rates will improve in the third and fourth quarters.

Pic 'N' Save Corp. operates a chain of 176 retail stores in the Far West and the South. These stores all specialize in new, closeout, variety general merchandise which is sold at substantial reductions from original retail prices.

ALLENTOWN, PA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Mack Trucks Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: MACK) and Renault Vehicules Industriels S.A. (RVI) announced today that they have entered into a definitive merger agreement pursuant to which RVI will acquire all the outstanding shares of Mack common stock it does not currently own for $6.25 per share in cash.

The tender offer and merger remain subject to the satisfaction of various conditions, including the termination or expiration of the waiting period under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Antitrust Improvements Act of 1976. RVI previously announced that the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice had issued a request for additional information on July 20, 1990.

NORRISTOWN, PA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Metrophone, the Philadelphia area's leading provider of cellular service, announced today it is offering two new programs designed to make car phone service widely available and affordable to area consumers.

Highlights of the first new plan include a monthly cellular access charge of $9.95, and flexible local calling rates that adjust to callers' usage. The plan also includes premium calling services like call waiting and conference calling, and excludes long distance charges on weekends.

A second plan offers additional premium calling features, local cellular calling rates in an expanded calling area from Atlantic City, N.J., to State College, Pa., and free voice mail service. Both plans offer an optional $15 a month phone lease.

In announcing the new plans, Michael E. Kalogris, Metrophone's president and chief executive officer, stated, "Metrophone has built its reputation as the area leader in cellular phone service by listening and responding to the needs of consumers. CHARLOTTE, NC (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - NCNB has chosen Bozell Inc. of Dallas, Texas, to handle all advertising for NCNB Corporation (NYSE: NCB) and its banking subsidiaries. Brad C. Iversen, marketing division executive for NCNB Corporation, said the decision is effective immediately.

Since acquiring NCNB Texas National Bank in July 1988, NCNB had used two advertising agencies. Bozell was associated with NCNB Texas and McKinney & Silver of Raleigh had the Southeast portion.

In June, NCNB announced it was combining the consumer and commercial banking functions of its six Southeastern banks with those of NCNB Texas. The move placed NCNB's more than 938 branches into one national organization called NCNB General Bank.

"Now that we have restructured NCNB as a national organization, it makes sense to have one agency communicate one image for all our products and services," Iversen said.

"To continue our growth, we at NCNB feel we must maximize our marketing efforts," Iversen continued. "We need one communications company responsible for our full array of coordinated communications.

"McKinney & Silver is an excellent advertising agency and has provided outstanding service and a high-quality creative product for NCNB during the last 14 years," Iversen said.

But he pointed out that Bozell has been associated with NCNB Texas and predecessor banks for more than 38 years. "Bozell has done an outstanding job representing NCNB in Texas and has the full-service capabilities we need in an advertising agency," he said.

Bozell is an international advertising agency with offices throughout the world, including in New York, Los Angeles and Detroit. The agency also has a presence in Atlanta and Tampa. American Airlines is a major account in Bozell's Dallas office.

DALLAS (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Carl Westcott, founder and CEO of Westcott Communications (NASDAQ: WCTV), today announced plans for the Professional Security Television Network (PSTN), which will provide on-going training, news and information programs for security managers, officers and specialists.

PSTN, scheduled to begin broadcasting during the first quarter of 1991, will be the first television network aimed exclusively to the professional security market.

According to Westcott, concerns among the business community for the well-being of employees and the security of physical assets have escalated along with increased crime in the streets and in the workplace. In addition, corporate executives are placing greater emphasis on creating a drug-free environment, safeguarding proprietary information and managing workplace liability. Combining the cost-effectiveness of training via satellite technology with the immediacy of television, PSTN will provide security managers, specialists and officers with solutions to today's complex security issues.

Initially, PSTN will broadcast programs two days per week for four hours each day. These programs will be produced at Westcott's studios in Dallas, uplinked to a satellite, and downlinked to satellite dish antennas that PSTN will install at the locations of its corporate customers. Security personnel at these companies can watch the television programming at times convenient to their schedules. The potential exists for a viewer population of 500,000, including 25,000 professional level security practitioners, to take advantage of PSTN programming.

Approximately 75 percent of the PSTN programs will provide training and information for security managers and specialists, with the remaining 25 percent designed to meet more basic instructional needs of security officers. In addition, a five-minute industry newscast will provide updates to the security professionals on the hour and half-hour.

Westcott Communications, a pioneer in business television networks, is the parent company of the Automotive Satellite Television Network (ASTN), which broadcasts to 5,000 automotive dealers across the U.S. and Canada, and the Law Enforcement Television Network (LETN), which broadcasts to more than 1,800 law enforcement agencies.

This partnership will create a new suite of application system software that will simplify development, increase development productivity and allow single application designs to work with multiple operating systems and networks.

The advanced technology for the planned application software environment that will be developed by Patriot Partners will operate under Operating System/2(A) (OS/2(A)) and Advanced Interactive Executive(A) (AIX(A)), as well as a number of other versions of UNIX(A).

Hardware support will include a wide range of personal computers and workstations from IBM and other vendors. A number of different networks will also be supported, without requiring adaptation by the application developer.

The partnership's long-term development project is intended to provide microcomputer applications programs with support for a number of important advanced software technologies not provided in today's more popular software environments: class libraries for object-oriented programming, multimedia support, end-user visual programming capabilities, and structured access to expert system facilities.

The partnership intends to exploit the potential of 32-bit architecture, greater memory and display capabilities, and the client/server model for distributed computation. Details of the partnership agreement were not disclosed.

"It's too costly and complex for software developers to build the new and groundbreaking applications that are needed to reach the vast market of unserved users," said David E. Liddle, Metaphor president and CEO, and president of Patriot Partners. "To fuel industry development of breakthrough applications, we hope to create an environment where developers will no longer have to build applications from scratch for every operating system."

"Our customers have made clear the need in their strategic planning for a software environment that will allow them to choose hardware products, operating systems, networks, and applications independently, and to have the various combinations interoperate in providing real business solutions " said Joseph M. Guglielmi, IBM vice president and president, Application Solutions Division. "Moreover, they want new applications that are designed to exploit emerging advanced technologies like multimedia."

The outcome of the project will be an open, standards-based, technologically advanced software environment available to all interested software and hardware vendors. "We feel that the industry can best develop in an atmosphere of open, competitive standards," said James A. Cannavino, share in the quarter ended July 29, 1989. (Income per share for 1989 is adjusted for the December, 1989, two-for-one stock split.)

Sales for the second quarter of 1990 were $273.0 million, an increase of 19.6 percent over the $228.2 million in the second quarter of 1989.

For the first half of 1990, net income was $18.3 million or 88 cents per share. This was up 26.2 percent in total and 22.2 percent per share over $14.5 million or 72 cents per share in the first half of 1989 (adjusted for the stock split).

Second-quarter earnings included an unusual after-tax gain of $2.9 million that was fully offset by other unusual transactions. The gain resulted from the purchase of annuity contracts by the company's pension trust. The principal offsetting transactions included a reserve for costs associated with discontinuing operation of shoe departments in Hess's department stores, adjustment of lease right values, and recognition of potential exposure from a 1982 countervailing duty claim.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Independent Entertainment Group (NASDAQ: INDE) announced today that it has raised a total of $2.3 million through its current warrant offering and that its board of directors has voted to let the remaining warrants expire on Sept. 10, 1990.

"This infusion of capital places the company in its strongest financial position since inception," said Lew Eisaguirre, chief financial officer. "With virtually no debt on the books and a much stronger working capital position, we are now poised to pursue several projects which have been on the back burner."

"Although our stock price has certainly taken a beating the past few months," Eisaguirre continued, "It doesn't appear to correlate with our financial performance since our market cap is only around one half of last year's sales of $10.6 million. We are hopeful that terminating the warrant offering will relieve the pressure on our stock price. With a public float of only about 1.7 million shares, it appears to us that the market should rebound with a tighter supply of stock."

IEG recently announced year-end results of $10,624,628 in revenues and $112,934 in earnings for the year ended April 30, 1990. The company specializes in the promotion, acquisition and distribution of sporting events, movies, concerts and other programming to the burgeoning pay-per-view marketplace.

ST. PAUL, MN (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - 3M expects higher third-quarter and full-year sales and earnings, company executives told financial analysts here today.

Roger W. Roberts, senior vice president, Finance, told analysts that 3M's third-quarter results will depend "a good deal" on results in September, "an important month for us in the United States," but that the company looks for third-quarter earnings to increase at a faster rate than the five percent recorded in the first half.

"As of right now, it appears that our U.S. volume growth will be better than the three percent we had in the second quarter," Roberts said, adding that much of the improvement is coming from the company's largest business sector, Industrial and Electronic.

"It also appears that our international volume growth will be stronger than in the first half. It should be similar to the 13 percent we averaged for all of last year," he said.

According to Roberts, changes in the value of the U.S. dollar are expected to add about five to six cents a share to third-quarter earnings. Results for the quarter also should be helped by "continued productivity gains, recovery in our Brazilian business and a lower effective tax rate," he said. In the third quarter of last year, net income totaled $307 million, or $1.37 a share, on sales of $2.994 billion.

Given the recent rise in oil prices, Roberts said, "We will see some minor impact in the second half. A number of avenues are being pursued to offset this impact: selling price adjustments, conservation measures and raw material substitutions."

Allen F. Jacobson, chairman and chief executive officer, pointed out that 3M has achieved strong results the past several years. Since 1985, earnings have grown 87 percent, from $664 million to $1.244 billion; return on equity has risen from 17.2 percent to 23.1 percent; and return on capital has risen from 20.0 percent to nearly 27 percent. "That's a good record," Jacobson said, adding, "The question is, 'How do we plan to maintain it during the 1990s?'"

Jacobson noted that in the past five years, the company has invested $3.3 billion in research and development, much of it to develop and build technologies. "In the '90s, we'll be harvesting the fruits of these investments," he said. "Our emphasis is going to be getting products to market faster." He said the company will aim to cut by 50 percent the time it takes to commercialize a technology.

These earnings compare to earnings of 5 cents per share for the same period last year, including 1 cent per share of extraordinary gain.

The increased extraordinary gain is the result of greater utilization of the net operating loss carryforwards due to the increased profitability of ADMAC operations. ADMAC was acquired by Flow in February 1989.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Canal Capital Corporation (NYSE: COW) today reported a net loss of $1,312,000, or 39 cents per common share, for the nine months ended July 31, 1990, as compared with net income of $312,000 which resulted in a loss (after preferred dividend) of 17 cents per common share, for the same period in 1989. The 1989 results include income from discontinued operations of $924,000 related to Canal's stockyards operations, which were sold in October 1989, while the 1990 results include an extraordinary gain of $148,000 (net of income taxes) on the retirement of debt.

The 1990 loss was caused by softer than anticipated results from the art, real estate and securities trading and investing operations as well as slightly higher than anticipated interest expense. These were somewhat offset by stronger results from the agribusiness operations and lower general and administrative expenses.

Revenues from continuing operations, which include gross sales from each of Canal's art, real estate and agribusiness operations as well as the income or loss from the company's investment program, were $7,843,000 for the first nine months of 1990 as compared with $14,110,000 for the same period in 1989. It should be noted that the 1989 revenues from continuing operations exclude revenue from stockyards operations which are presented as discontinued operations.

For the third quarter of 1990, Canal recognized net income of $249,000, or 4 cents per common share, on revenues of $3,116,000, as compared with a net loss of $230,000, or 13 cents per common share, on revenues of $3,467,000 for the same period in 1989. The 1989 results include income from discontinued stockyard operations of $268,000.

Income (loss) from Canal's securities trading and investing operations included unrealized appreciation in the market value of its marketable securities portfolio of $396,000 and unrealized depreciation of $1,129,000 for the nine months ended July 31, 1990 and 1989, respectively. There was also unrealized appreciation of $389,000 and unrealized depreciation of $834,000 for the three-month periods ended July 31, 1990 and 1989, respectively, in the market value of Canal's marketable securities portfolio.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Stuart Landow, president and CEO of Top Source, Inc. (NASDAQ: TOPS) announced today the signing of an exclusive license agreement with the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT), Cambridge, Mass. The agreement provides Top Source with several proprietary technologies (patent applications are being prepared) that will directly affect final design of the Top Source automotive safety seat device. Patent applications will include methods to identify and achieve optimal seat motion which restrains occupants during frontal collisions, potentially reducing bodily injuries. Top Source may also sub-license any technologies to seat frame, restraint and/or vehicle manufacturers.

The Top Source mechanism, which will be built into the seat frame, allows the seat to move slightly forward and tilt rearward during a frontal crash alleviating unwanted forward body motion and potentially reducing injuries. Landow said, "The seat motion is achieved by the force generated from the crash, requiring no additional power. Sled crash tests will be used to verify results of computer simulated crashes." Top Source believes the final design can be inexpensively added to seat frame construction.

For the past year, Top Source's team of scientists and engineers, experts in computer crash simulation, crash testing, mechanical design and bodily injury, have been experimenting with controlled seat motion as an approach to injury reduction during a frontal crash. The Top Source Device, trademarked A.R.C. (Acceleration Restraint Curve), is designed to provide an added level of injury protection supplementing air bags and seat belts. A second objective is to provide additional protection against lower torso injury which may occur if the occupant fails to use the lap belt and relies only on upper torso protection provided from air bags or shoulder belts. Air bags and shoulder belts restrain the upper chest and head. Often, in frontal collisions, the lower torso, if unrestrained by lap belts, slides off the seat reducing the effectiveness of upper torso restraint and can result in injuries.

Landow also said, "The technologies licensed from MIT will help Top Source finalize development and testing of the mechanism. In addition to the marketing effort targeted at car and seat frame manufacturers, our engineering team has presented preliminary test results and development methodology to national and local safety activists as well as representatives of the insurance industry, who are particularly interested in the A.R.C. mechanism's potential to save lives, reduce injuries and help reduce insurance expense."

Imparato, chairman and chief executive officer of International Systems and Technology (INSAT), today announced that an agreement has been reached on acquiring worldwide exclusive rights to market a new patented technology for the repair service to nuclear reactors.

The technology and patent was developed by personnel of New York Power Authority and consulting engineer Donald Harrison, a nationally recognized heat transfer engineer. International Systems and Technology has already begun work at its Oldsmar facility on the construction of prototype heating elements to be used in the repair process. Completion of the prototype equipment to be used for repair of cracking due to corrosion and leaks in nuclear reactor recirculatory systems is expected to be completed within three months. In further corporate action, the board of directors at its Aug. 30, board meeting authorized the repurchase of 50,000 shares of the company's own stock over the next three months. These purchases will be made in the open market and this action was taken by the board because of its belief that the price of its stock was greatly under valued and that shares are needed for future corporate purposes. CAMBRIDGE, MA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Polaroid Corporation announced today the formation of Polaroid of Shanghai Limited to manufacture instant cameras and package film, and to market Polaroid imaging products throughout the People's Republic of China.

Polaroid of Shanghai Limited, which will initially employ 130 people, is a joint venture with SMPIC, formerly the Shanghai Motion Picture Industry Company. SMPIC is a corporation of the Shanghai Light Industry Bureau, a branch of the Ministry of Light Industry.

Polaroid's venture into China is part of the company's long-term growth strategy to expand instant photography beyond traditional geographic markets, according to I. MacAllister Booth, Polaroid's president and chief executive officer.

"During this past year, Polaroid opened manufacturing facilities and a retail outlet store in Moscow, founded Polaroid India, Inc., and activated Polaroid Oy in Finland," Booth said.

"Now, with the establishment of Polaroid in Shanghai, Polaroid is continuing to develop new market potential. We are very pleased to be able to offer the magic of instant photography to increasing numbers of people around the world. Although Polaroid's activities in China are at a very early stage, we are looking forward to working with our partners to develop the Chinese Market for all Polaroid products."

Initially, Polaroid of Shanghai will assemble Polaroid Supercolor 635CL instant cameras, one of the most popular in Polaroid's international camera line. Used extensively in business applications, the 635CL instant camera will retail for approximately $100 (500 yuan in local currency). The company also will package Polaroid 600 Plus instant film.

Cameras and film will be marketed to business and industrial markets, as well as to China's more than 2,500 street photographers. Street photography is popular at China's major tourist attractions in Beijing, Hangzhou, and Xian, as well as in Shanghai and other regions of China.

Cameras will be assembled beginning later this year at the Shanghai Xian Feng Factory, a 1,700-square-meter facility in Shanghai, as part of the joint venture with SMPIC. For the past two years, the Shanghai Xian Feng Factory, under contract to Polaroid, has been assembling the camera's printed circuit boards for export to Polaroid manufacturing facilities overseas.

John Chang has been appointed resident general manager of Polaroid of Shanghai Limited. He will report to George Hamilton, Polaroid senior managing director, international business development.

FAIRFAX, VA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Mobil has completed a $100-million upgrading of its Jurong refinery in Singapore. The upgrade confirms the importance of the Singapore refining hub in meeting the Asia-Pacific area's growing demand for high-quality petroleum products.

The Jurong refinery, Mobil's largest outside the United States, is a pivotal part of the company's Asia-Pacific supply system, which serves operations from the Middle East to the U.S. West Coast.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Paramount Communications Inc. (NYSE: PCI) today reported earnings from continuing operations and net earnings for its third quarter of fiscal 1990, ended July 31, of $106.2 million, or 88 cents per share. These results compared with earnings from continuing operations in the comparable year-earlier period of $18.5 million, or 15 cents per share, and net earnings of $96.3 million, or 80 cents per share, which included earnings of $77.8 million, or 65 cents per share, from discontinued operations.

Results from continuing operations in the fiscal 1990 third quarter included net interest income of $10.6 million, primarily resulting from the investment of the proceeds from the company's October 1989 sale of the Associates to Ford Motor Company. Net earnings in the comparable fiscal 1989 period included $32.1 million of net interest expense and an after-tax charge of $48.3 million for costs incurred in the company's bid to acquire Time Inc.

Paramount said that operating income from its publishing operations in the third quarter totaled a record $115.2 million, a gain of 11 percent over the $103.9 million for the same fiscal 1989 period, while entertainment operating income of $55.1 million reflected a decline of 4 percent from the record $57.5 million registered in the same quarter a year ago.

The company noted that higher quarterly operating income in publishing resulted from gains in higher education, school (elementary- high school), supplementary education and international publishing activities, which more than offset lower results in consumer publishing and flat results in professional information. Lower results from entertainment reflected declines in motion picture and theater operations and costs associated with the ongoing renovation of Madison Square Garden, although the Sports Group and MSG Network contributed higher operating income. These factors in the company's entertainment operations more than offset strong gains in television operations. The company pointed out that some of the profits from its summer blockbuster motion picture "Ghost" were reflected in the third quarter, but that the major portion of the earnings from domestic theatrical distribution will be recorded in the fourth quarter.

JERICHO, NY (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Getty Petroleum Corp. (NYSE: GTY) today reported results for the second quarter and six months ended July 31 1990.

Total revenues for the quarter and the six month period ended July 31, 1990 were $320.6 million and $571.6 million, respectively, as compared with $297.1 and $570.5 million for the comparable periods last year. Revenues increased $23.5 million for the quarter primarily due to merchandise sales within the company's convenience store operations and an upswing in wholesale gallonage.

The company's earnings during these periods were adversely affected by unprecedented volatility affecting the cost of products. In addition, the significant increase in petroleum prices during the second quarter could not be passed along because of competitive market conditions. These factors, along with a LIFO inventory charge in the amount of $3.3 million, contributed to the net loss of $1.9 million or ($.14) per share in the quarter ended July 31, 1990 as compared with net income of $1.9 million or $.14 per share for the comparable period in 1989. For the six months ended July 31, 1990, the company incurred a net loss of $1.7 million or ($.13) per share as compared to net income of $9.6 million or $.72 per share for the comparable period last year.

Leo Liebowitz, Getty's president and chief executive officer, commented that "Since the end of the quarter, the invasion of Kuwait by Iraq has caused severe distortions in the market structure adversely affecting the company's reselling prices and profitability. We are hopeful that a return to a normal supply and demand functioning of the marketplace will be restored in the near future."

Liebowitz announced that, at the board of directors meeting held this morning, the board of directors voted on and approved a seven cents per share cash dividend. The dividend is payable on Oct. 16, 1990 to holders of record on Oct. 2, 1990.

Getty Petroleum Corp. also announced that at its board of directors meeting today, the directors approved the additional purchase of up to 500,000 shares of the company's common stock. The authorization is in addition to the June 15, 1989 authorization to buy back up to 500,000 shares of which 413,073 shares have been purchased to date.

Getty Petroleum Corp., one of the nation's largest independent marketers of gasoline and petroleum products, markets in a thirteen state area, Maine through Virginia. The company is also a major distributor of heating oil and handles wholesale distribution of a variety of petroleum products through its east coast petroleum storage and distribution network.

JOHNSTOWN, PA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Claude J. Incaudo, president and chief executive officer of The Penn Traffic Co. (AMEX: PNF), today said, "We are pleased to report that for the 13 weeks ended Aug. 4, 1990, Penn Traffic achieved record second quarter sales, operating cash flow (EBDIAT) and operating income of $716.6, $44.1 and $27.1 million, respectively, which were 1.0 percent, 14.3 percent and 17.7 percent greater than a year ago.

"Sales comparisons for the quarter were adversely affected by the sale of the P&C New England wholesale division. All three of our operating companies contributed to the exceptional growth in cash flow and operating income during the most recent quarter, building on the previously reported strong results for the first quarter. The continued progress of our company in improving its cash flow and operating income clearly demonstrates the success of our merchandising, operating and capital programs. We remain confident further improvement will be achieved in our results for the balance of the year. For the 13 and 26 week periods, the amortization of good will and the equity interest loss in Grand Union were the primary reasons for Penn Traffic's accounting net loss.

"During the second quarter, P&C completed the divestiture of its New England retail division. Having previously discontinued its New England wholesale business, P&C leased its New England distribution center, disposed of 13 stores, and entered into a 10-year lease with Grand Union for the remaining 13 stores. As initial consideration for these transactions, P&C received cash, which was applied to pay down debt, and two Grand Union stores.

"Our capital expenditure program for existing facilities continues to move forward, although at a slightly slower pace than anticipated. This has resulted primarily from developer delays at new store sites. For the 26 weeks, the company has invested $39 million in capital improvements, including opening seven new stores totaling 265,000 square feet. The company expects to spend a similar amount on capital improvements in the second half of fiscal 1991.

"With so much accomplished and plans to do so much more, dedication and teamwork continue to make the future look bright for our company."

The Penn Traffic Co. and its subsidiaries, excluding Grand Union, operate 184 supermarkets in Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio and West Virginia. The company owns and operates one of the largest dairy processing and ice cream manufacturing operations in Pennsylvania, along with two large bakery operations in New York and Ohio. It also operates 30 Harts department stores, along with four supermarket-discount department store combinations. The company wholesales groceries to 124 independently owned stores, which operate under the Riverside Markets, Bi-Lo Markets and Big M names, and provides wholesaling services to 96 independent supermarkets. Penn Traffic and its subsidiaries employ approximately 24,000. Grand Union operates 307 supermarkets and food stores under the Grand Union and Big Star trade names. Grand Union's stores are located in Vermont, New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Georgia. Grand Union has approximately 22,000 employees.

KILLINGTON, VT (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - S-K-I Ltd., (NASDAQ: SKII) today announced that revenues for the year ended July 31, 1990 increased three percent to $84,554,000 compared to $82,069,000 during fiscal 1989.

Net income for the year was $3,579,000, or 63 cents per share. Last year's net income of $4,598,000, or 81 cents per share included a non-recurring gain from the recovery of certain tax credit reserves in the amount of $917,000, or 16 cents per share.

Revenues for the fourth quarter of 1990 were $4,126,000, up ten percent from last year's $3,747,000. The company incurred a loss for the quarter of $2,662,203 (47 cents per share) compared to a loss of $2,442,717 (41 cents per share) for the same period a year ago, reflecting an historical, seasonal pattern in the ski business.

Preston Leete Smith, president and chief executive officer of S-K-I said, "Income from operations for fiscal 1990 was virtually equal to last year's levels. Strong skier volume in our third quarter, coupled with cost controls, helped to offset the effects of very unusual business patterns during the early ski season."

At the company's Bear Mountain Ski Area in Big Bear Lake, California, construction has begun on a new detachable quad chairlift which will increase the total lift capacity there by 26 percent. Work on this renovation and expansion had been delayed for over two years after the plans and permits that existed when S-K-I purchased the property were withdrawn and the approval process was retraced.

A new quad chairlift being constructed at Mount Snow this summer will serve the south facing terrain in the Sunbrook area. The Pico Ski Area, immediately adjacent to Killington, is currently being operated by the company under a management contract which includes an option to purchase the area through July 31, 1991.

Efforts to gain the necessary permits to meet the various contingencies to the proposed merger, including the physical connection to the two areas, are progressing at this time. Skier visits at Pico increased by more than 23 percent to 175,000 this past season. As structured, any effects of this management agreement will not be included in S-K-I's results until 1991.

In conclusion Smith noted, "We are confident that our technical advantage in marketing and snowmaking, combined with our comprehensive management control systems, will allow us to adjust strategically to maximize our future business opportunities."

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - American Plastics and Chemicals, Inc. (NASDAQ: APAC) today announced that it has signed agreements in principle with American Indian Plastics Inc. (AIP), a newly formed Montana corporation, wherein APAC will provide proprietary technology for two plants in excess of $150 million each to manufacture chemicals for plastics and engineered materials from local coal and limestone.

Located in Montana, the plants will be 51 percent owned by American Indian Plastics Inc. and 49 percent owned by American Plastics and Chemicals Inc. which will oversee management of the facilities and market the products produced. The length of the agreements is for a period of 30 years and may be extended by mutual consent. Funding for the projects will be arranged by American Indian Plastics, following the results of technical, economic and environmental feasibility studies. The studies are expected to take between six to nine months to complete.

According to William Morris, president and chief executive officer of American Plastics and Chemicals, American Indian Plastics is owned and managed by successful American Indian businessmen with proven track records in construction, environmental and petroleum engineering.

American Plastics and Chemicals' proprietary technology uses coal and limestone for the integrated manufacture of chemical commodities, rather than relying on oil- or natural gas-based feedstocks.

Commenting on the signing of the agreements, Morris said: "We are excited about the opportunities that will be realized by the new chemical facilities. We believe our coal/limestone technology can play a significant role in helping our country lower its dependence on foreign oil and improve our country's air quality."

Coal used for the chemical plants will be supplied by a Montana coal mining company owned by the Crow Indian Nation. Approximately 25 percent of the sale price for its coal will be paid to the Crow Nation as a royalty payment. American Indian Plastics, Inc. has received an offer for a 20-year supply of coal by the Montana coal mining company. Commenting further Morris added, "Ben Shawneego, president of American Indian Plastics, and I are committed to projects that are beneficial to the Crow Nation without harming their environment."

American Plastics and Chemicals is a development-stage company engaged in demonstrating the commercial viability, licensing, and utilization of certain proprietary technology in the co-production of calcium carbide and fuel gases from raw coal and raw limestone.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Delta Air Lines (NYSE: DAL) today reported traffic results for August 1990.

Revenue passenger miles (RPMs) decreased nine-tenths of a percent during the month to 5.773 billion. Available seat miles (ASMs) increased 5.9 percent to 8.771 billion for the month. Delta's system load factor for August 1990 was 65.82 percent.

Whit Hawkins, Delta's executive vice president - marketing and stations, noted that international traffic growth remained very strong during August but the decline in domestic traffic related to weak demand kept the total traffic below last year.

"The passenger mile yield improved slightly over expectations during August, but the improvement will fall substantially short of offsetting Delta's sharp jump in the price of fuel beginning in August," Hawkins said.

MCCONNELLSBURG, PA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - JLG Industries Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: JLGI) today reported its third consecutive year of record sales and earnings for its fiscal year ended July 31, 1990.

Fourth quarter sales and earnings were also higher than any quarter in the company's history.

Sales for the year rose 23 percent to $149.3 million from $121.3 million in the 1989 fiscal year. Net income for fiscal year 1990 increased 12 percent to $8.5 million, or $2.42 per share, from $7.6 million, or $2.14 per share the prior year.

Sales for the fourth fiscal quarter were $43.2 million, a 22 percent increase over the $35.5 million in sales reported for the same quarter of fiscal 1989. Net income for the 1990 fourth quarter increased to $2.7 million from $2.0 million in the prior year quarter -- a 32 percent increase. Earnings per share for the fourth fiscal quarter were $.77 compared to $.59 in the same quarter of the previous year.

Commenting on JLG's 1990 results, John L. Grove, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said, "JLG's domestic operations again paced the company's growth in fiscal 1990. Our U.S. business reported its sixth consecutive year of sales and earnings improvement despite manufacturing capacity constraints during most of the year. A major contributor to our success in North America has been our ongoing dedication to improving and expanding our product lines. These efforts and the support from our strong network of approximately 100 independent domestic distributors have contributed to an expansion of the overall market for our products, especially with respect to boom-type aerial work platforms, where we historically have been the market leader.

"Results of our overseas operations during fiscal 1990 were mixed," continued Grove. "Our Australian operation showed a small profit for the year, but our U.K. operation reported a loss. Although combined these two international businesses were not profitable, we were encouraged by their record sales levels and the progress they have made in expanding their revenue base."

Grove added, "A strong sales performance by our boom-type machines fueled the revenue and earnings improvements in the fourth fiscal quarter of 1990 which were 6 percent and 9 percent higher, respectively, than our previous quarterly records. Our new U.S. Truck Cranes business also contributed to our record quarterly performance by adding to our sales base, as well as helping to alleviate the capacity constraints that have negatively impacted our performance this year.

"The outlook for fiscal 1991 is clouded by a weakening economic picture, tighter credit and escalating energy costs," Grove added. "During the fourth quarter, we began to experience a softening in our incoming order rate that has continued into the new fiscal year. The current drop-off in orders has necessitated a reduction in our work force, as detailed in a recent press release, and other cost reduction efforts are also under way. While we are hopeful that the incoming order slowdown is of a temporary nature, we believe it is prudent to prepare for a more protracted decline " Grove concluded.

In recognition of JLG's record results for the 1990 fiscal year and confidence in its continued growth, the board of directors has voted to increase the quarterly cash dividend from 5 cents per share to 6.25 cents per share, an annualized rate of 25 cents per share. The dividend is payable on Oct. 3, 1990, to shareholders of record on Sept. 15, 1990.

JLG Industries Inc. is an international manufacturer and marketer of specialized hydraulic machinery, including mobile aerial work platforms and cranes. Sales are made principally to independent distributors which provide sales and service support as well as rent the company's products to a broad customer base, including users in the construction and industrial markets.

The company is headquartered in McConnellsburg, Pa., with additional manufacturing facilities in Fort Littleton, Bedford and York, Pa.; Cumbernauld, Scotland; and Port Macquarie, Australia.

DEARBORN, MI (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Ford Motor Company's Dearborn Stamping Plant here has become the 60th company facility - and the first major stamping plant - to win the Q1 Award for quality excellence.

Allan D. Gilmour, president - Ford Automotive Group, presented the award to Plant Manager James Agnew and UAW Plant President Loretta Burrell during a ceremony attended by most of the plant's 1,600 employees.

Gilmour cited the work done by Dearborn Stamping's employees in achieving a turnaround in plans that, in the early 1980s, "did not have a place for Dearborn as a major stamping facility, but rather as a place that would do mostly transitional work.

"Instead of accepting what everybody thought was inevitable, you decided not to accept it," Gilmour added. "You improved the business that you did have, and set out to raise the level of quality and productivity."

He pointed out that the plant's accomplishments would not have been possible without the participation, cooperation and dedication of the hourly and salaried employees, the union and the plant's management. It was, he told the employees, "an example of teamwork at its best."

Dearborn Stamping Plant, which is part of Ford's Rouge Manufacturing Complex, opened in 1936. It currently produces major exterior sheet metal components for several vehicles, including the Mustang.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Assets of the nation's 520 money market mutual funds decreased $770.0 million to $406.55 billion for the week ended Wednesday (9/5), the Investment Company Institute reported today.

The 160 institutional funds fell $781.7 million to $97.90 billion; the 255 general-purpose funds rose $422.6 million to $143.69 billion; and the 105 broker-dealer funds fell $410.9 million to $164.96 billion.

Mutual fund assets were revised for August 29 (8/29) to $407.32 billion. The increase reported on August 29 (8/29) was revised to $679.3 million.

"Relative stability of stock and bond prices in the last two weeks has found its reflection in the moderation of weekly changes in the level of money market fund assets," said Dr. Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the Institute. "After seven weeks of sharp increases during which these assets rose $25 billion, last week, like the week before, assets shrank by some three quarters of a billion dollars. Also as a week before, the entire decline occurred among institutional funds."

The Institute reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week and makes this data available to the public on a weekly basis. The Institute also reports monthly on three broad categories of funds. They are (1) short- term funds which include limited maturity municipal bond funds, (2) money market funds, and (3) all funds other than short-term funds -- such as stock, income, corporate bond and municipal bond funds.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Price Waterhouse announced today that it has received official Soviet Government approval to establish a wholly owned practice in the Soviet Union, making it the first professional services organization of its kind to be authorized to develop a multi-disciplinary practice without entering into a joint venture. (These services include accounting and auditing, tax, and management consulting.) The application was supported by the State Bank of the USSR and the Ministry of Finance.

Price Waterhouse has had a permanently staffed office in Moscow since September 1989, the first of the accountancy and consultancy firms to establish an office there in recent years. Price Waterhouse previously had an office in Leningrad but it was closed in 1917.

Most of the large accounting and consulting firms are now entering into joint ventures to secure their presence in this rapidly emerging market for professional services. Price Waterhouse is taking a different and far-sighted approach, as explained by Bruce Edwards, senior partner, Eastern Europe and Soviet Union:

"We believe that quality of service is the paramount factor in this new and complex market. We have studied carefully the different options available for us to achieve our long-term aim of an indigenous Price Waterhouse Soviet firm managed and staffed by Soviet nationals. We must offer our clients the quality of service that they expect of Price Waterhouse anywhere in the world.

"We concluded that a joint venture in the USSR was not the best way to achieve our objectives.

"Instead, we opened a Moscow office last year manned by Russian speaking expatriate staff and, at the same time, we have hand-picked exceptional Soviet graduates from the top financial institutes in the Soviet Union to train in Price Waterhouse firms around the world. This is an ongoing program. The graduates will gain internationally recognized professional qualifications, and the experience that goes with those qualifications, enabling them to develop our Soviet firm in the future by offering world standard professional services.

"We believe Price Waterhouse is the first western organization of any type to recruit staff direct from Soviet universities. The results of this program, which started last year, have been extremely encouraging. A western-style audit is still unknown in the Soviet Union. The market will never truly open until appropriate regulatory legislation is in place requiring Soviet organizations to be subject to an independent audit. Such regulations can only be effective when there is a cadre of trained national personnel to carry out audits and provide other professional services.

"Until such time as our Soviet staff are sufficiently experienced, we are able to provide high quality service more effectively through locally based expatriate staff, supported by our worldwide resources. We are also able to cooperate on a case-by-case basis, as required, with excellent Soviet institutions and specialists in particular fields of industry and commerce."

This innovative approach by Price Waterhouse is an example of the firm's pioneering attitude to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Edwards continued: "We are confident that our approach enables us to resource the practice to meet client requirements effectively in the short term as well as, in the longer term, ensuring that our Soviet staff receive the same career opportunities and rewards as all Price Waterhouse staff throughout the world. There will be no compromise on quality nor in our objective of creating a national Soviet Price Waterhouse firm.

Price Waterhouse also offers full services from offices in Hungary, Poland Czechoslovakia and the German Democratic Republic, and is actively engaged on assignments in Yugoslavia and Bulgaria.

Price Waterhouse is a leading provider of professional services worldwide, and has more than 42,000 personnel in more than 100 countries, operating in over 460 locations. The principal services provided are auditing, business advisory, tax, and management consulting services.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Some commercials may claim to be hot, but a new diet Coke commercial is so hot, its stars form a puddle instead of a huddle.

With the help of Lucasfilm Commercial Productions and Academy Award-winning special effects from Industrial Light & Magic (ILM), of San Rafael, Calif., a group of athletes from the National Football League melt before your eyes.

The 30-second commercial, titled "The Melt," filmed at the Rose Bowl, depicts action at summer training camp. As temperatures rise and the players begin to melt into the field, Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Boomer Esiason saves the day by "passing" bottles of diet Coke to his fellow gridiron stars. Refreshed and revived, the players return to their original full-bodied state.

Other NFL stars featured in the spot include: Bubby Brister, quarterback Pittsburgh Steelers; Randall Cunningham, quarterback, Phildelphia Eagles; Tim Harris, linebacker, Green Bay Packers; Charles Mann, defensive end, Washington Redskins; Tom Rathman, running back, San Francisco 49ers; and Chris Spielman, linebacker, Detroit Lions. Messrs. Mann, Esiason and Cunningham have appeared in diet Coke commercials in the past.

ILM made the melting players look realistic by using the technology developed for the "pseudopod" water creature in "The Abyss" (Academy Award Best Visual Effects, 1989).

"The idea of having a day so hot that the players dissolve into the field is so different and challenging that only Industrial Light & Magic could make the commercial happen in a way that would be realistic and not cartoony," said Michael Ritchie, the commercial's director. "Our job is to make people believe the impossible -- that a human being could melt and pull himself back together again in 30 seconds."

The ability to turn brawny football players into puddles is only one of the advanced technologies used in the diet Coke spot. A technique known as "morphing," perfected in the production of the movie "Willow," was utilized as well. Morphing involves transforming the players from one physical state to the next using a computer and live action footage.

The special effects process took several months to achieve. "While most television commercials are on the air a couple of weeks after they are filmed, the complicated special effects in the diet Coke spot took almost three months to pull together," said Mr. Ritchie. "The commercial was handled like a feature film."

The commercial will begin airing this month.

ATLANTA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Coca-Cola USA will mark the 25th anniversary of the Super Bowl with the diet Coke Super Bowl Line-up game.

Consumers can win more than 1 million prizes throughout the fall, including trips to the Super Bowl and up to $25,000 in cash, in the instant-win and collect-and-win game.

In addition, special instant-win game pieces will entitle winners to $5, trips to the Super Bowl or free two-liter bottles of Coca-Cola products.

OLDSMAR, FL. (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Edward T. Imparato, chairman and chief executive officer of International Systems and Technology (INSAT), today announced that an agreement has been reached on acquiring worldwide exclusive rights to market a new patented technology for the repair service to nuclear reactors.

The technology and patent was developed by personnel of New York Power Authority and consulting engineer Donald Harrison, a nationally recognized heat transfer engineer. International Systems and Technology has already begun work at its Oldsmar facility on the construction of prototype heating elements to be used in the repair process. Completion of the prototype equipment to be used for repair of cracking due to corrosion and leaks in nuclear reactor recirculatory systems is expected to be completed within three months. Signing of the final agreement is expected within two weeks.

Pursuant to the agreement, International Systems and Technology, Inc. will be obligated to pay certain royalties to the patent owners upon the successful demonstration and marketing of the acquired technology. Additionally, INSAT will provide the patent owners $10,000 to support their application for a worldwide patent.

In further corporate action, the board of directors at its Aug. 30, board meeting authorized the repurchase of 50,000 shares of the company's own stock over the next three months. These purchases will be made in the open market and this action was taken by the board because of its belief that the price of its stock was greatly under valued and that shares are needed for future corporate purposes. The company may consider future purchases of its stock in the open market should market conditions indicate that such acquisitions are in the company's interest.

WILMINGTON, DEL. (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Wilmington Trust Co. (NASDAQ: WILM) and Sussex Trust Co. announced today that they have mutually agreed to terminate the agreement under which Sussex Trust was to be acquired by Wilmington Trust.

The decision was attributed to rapidly changing economic and market conditions which have dramatically affected banking industry asset values and stock prices, particularly in recent months. These conditions contributed to a growing awareness by both parties of differences which would have made the satisfactory integration of Sussex Trust and Wilmington Trust difficult to achieve at this time.

Wilmington Trust Co. Chairman Bernard J. Taylor II said, "We are extremely disappointed by this development since we remain convinced that the combination of our companies would have benefited the stockholders of both companies."

Robert W. Tunnell, chairman of Sussex Trust Co., said, "Although we regret that we were unable to consummate the merger, we view the future of Sussex Trust with undiminished confidence."

Taylor concluded by expressing his company's respect for Sussex Trust's board and management and his hope that a return to more normal economic conditions might reopen the door for the two companies to get together.

(A) -- The results of the first nine months of fiscal 1990 include gains on the sales of securities of $597,000 (6 cents per share) and an unrealized loss of $521,000 (6 cents per share) to reduce short-term equity investments to market value. The third quarter of fiscal 1990 includes an unrealized loss of $176,000 (2 cents per share). The third quarter and nine months of fiscal 1989 include gains of the sales of securities of $2,510,000 (28 cents per share) and $2,498,000 (28 cents per share), respectively.

(B) -- The third quarter and nine months of fiscal 1990 include $1,609,000 (18 cents per share) as a result of the successful settlement of pending litigation and insurance proceeds in excess of the carrying value of assets destroyed and costs incurred due to a fire in a foreign branch.

This favorably impacted the technical services and temporary personnel segment ($211,000), the electronic publications and typesetting systems segment ($845,000) and the technical publication services segment ($553,000). In the third quarter of 1989, as part of a settlement, the company received $2,140,000 (21 cents per share), which is included in other income, representing reimbursement of certain expenses (interest and general and administrative) incurred in fiscal 1989.

(C) -- The operating results for the third quarter and nine months of fiscal 1989 were adversely affected by a retrospective workers' compensation insurance premium adjustment of $1,500,000 (15 cents per share) applicable to prior years. The operations primarily affected were the technical services and temporary personnel and the telephony segments, whose operating profits were reduced by $1,021,000 and $430,000, respectively.

(D) -- A substantial joint venture, which operates in Australia, sells yellow page directory advertising under contract for directories to be issued through June 30, 1993. This joint venture produces a major portion of its revenues and all of its profits in the company's second and third fiscal quarters.

(E) -- During the first quarter of 1990 the company discontinued its full-service reproduction and printing operations. The operating losses, previously reported in the technical publication services and other segment, and the losses on disposal, have been reclassified, net of income tax benefits, to loss from discontinued operations. In fiscal 1989 the company discontinued its operations in the business information services market, which had been conducted through two joint ventures.

(F) -- The extraordinary items are gains due to repurchases, at a discount of $1,150,000 and $2,800,000 face value of the company's 12-3/8 percent subordinated debentures for nine months ended Aug. 3, 1990 and July 28, 1989, respectively.

(G) -- The 1989 amounts have been restated to conform with the current year's presentation.

WICHITA, KAN. (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Customers of Kansas Gas and Electric Company (NYSE: KGE) have been using electricity at a record pace -- in fact, peak usage this summer by KG&E customers has grown faster than for any other utility in the country.

The record hot weather is the primary reason for record electricity use. This summer there have been 28 days with temperatures over 100 degrees, while last summer there was only one 100 degree day.

"Electric Utility Week" newsletter in its national survey of electricity use reports that KG&E system peak responsibility of 1,763,000 kilowatts on Aug. 28 is a 12.44 percent jump from last year, the largest peak use increase in the country. Second biggest increase is that of Public Service of Indiana at 9.42 percent. Empire District Electric, headquartered at Joplin, Mo., has the third largest use gain at 9.33 percent.

KG&E officials report that total electricity use by its regular customers in August increased nearly 12 percent from a year ago. And regular customer use for all of 1990 through August is up nearly 5 percent from 1989.

Utility officials say they have had no trouble in meeting the increased demand, but encourage customers to take all steps possible to use electricity wisely.

Company officials point out that because of the increased use, customers can expect substantially higher bills. Special payment arrangements can be made and customers anticipating problems in making payment or wanting to budget their payments should contact a KG&E customer service office for assistance. KG&E customer service telephones are staffed 7 days a week, 24 hours daily.

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Equimark Corp. (NYSE: EQK) announced today it has established a committee to search for a new chairman and chief executive officer of the bank holding company. Board member David Gardner has been named to chair the committee.

The board said it undertook the actions after being informed by Alan S. Fellheimer, chairman and chief executive officer, of his desire to step down and return to the practice of law.

"Alan Fellheimer's contributions to this company since 1985 have had an enormous positive impact on the company," Gardner said. "We understand, however, his desire to reestablish his legal practice, and accept his decision."

Gardner said the special committee has retained Russell Reynolds & Associates, an executive search firm, to assist it in the search and that Fellheimer will remain chairman and chief executive officer until a new chief executive officer is selected and in place.

"Equimark now has in place marketing, operating, credit quality and expense containment plans necessary, which will serve as the basis for the company's new strategy, and return to profitability," Fellheimer said in commenting on his decision. "I am leaving because Equimark now needs steady, day-to-day management and I find more personal satisfaction in crisis and turnaround management and the problem solving associated with the practice of law."

HOUSTON (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation and Algonquin Gas Transmission Company, subsidiaries of Panhandle Eastern Corporation (NYSE: PEL), have filed a request with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) for authorization to waive certain tariff provisions that will permit enhanced flexibility to inject into storage third-party gas purchased from sources other than Texas Eastern or Algonquin. The request is supported by the Algonquin Customer Group, which is composed of most of Algonquin's customers.

The filing would permit Algonquin's customers to begin injecting gas purchased from third-party sources into storage under certain of Algonquin's storage rate schedules, which would increase their competitive options. The waiver would enhance the ability of these Algonquin customers or any customers under certain Texas Eastern storage rate schedules to move gas on the Texas Eastern system by allowing the injection of third-party gas transported under any agreement pursuant to Texas Eastern's open access interruptible transportation tariff.

The companies have requested FERC grant the waiver on an expedited basis to permit the activities to start without delay.

FARNBOROUGH, ENGLAND (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Great China Airlines Ltd. of the Republic of China (Taiwan) today signed a letter of intent to purchase six McDonnell Douglas (NYSE: MD) twin-jet transports.

The agreement, with a value of more than $200 million, includes three MD-80s and three advanced MD-90s. Great China, based in Taipei, is a privately owned airline serving cities throughout the Republic of China. The new aircraft order was announced today at the Farnborough Air Show.

Taking part in the signing ceremony at the McDonnell Douglas chalet were S.S. Tang, chairman of Great China; Peter Szu, general manager of the airline; and Gerald Johnston, president of McDonnell Douglas.

In disclosing the choice of the new twin jet, Tang described them as ideally suited for the airline's present domestic operations and also for planned future service between Taipei and cities in the People's Republic of China.

The new aircraft will position Great China as an international regional carrier and provide for direct service between Taiwan and the mainland when authorized.

The near-term selection of MD-80s and later addition of MD-90s provides the best combination of size, performance, technology and economics for Great China's expanding route system, Tang said.

The early aircraft will be MD-82 models powered by Pratt & Whitney JT8D-217C engines, with seating for 148 passengers. The first delivery is scheduled in the third quarter 1991, with two more in the last quarter of 1992.

The Great China MD-90s will be series 30 models with 158 seats in a two-class arrangement. The MD-90s are equipped with International Aero Engines V2500 powerplants. The aircraft will be delivered in the spring and summer of 1996.

Tang noted that a strong factor in the choice of McDonnell Douglas aircraft was their commonality with MD-82s that are currently assembled and operated in the People's Republic of China. The aircraft are built by Shanghai Aviation Industrial Corp. under a co- production agreement with McDonnell Douglas and have been in service in China since 1983. The existing extensive support facilities and capabilities in the People's Republic of China will make Great China's operations with similar MD-82s easier to maintain.

BOSTON, (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Healthco International, Inc.'s (NASDAQ: HLCO), in response to the announcement earlier today by Gemini Partners L.P. that Gemini is actively seeking potential buyers for Healthco, stated as follows:

"Mr. Pearlman and his partners have at long last apparently determined to do something other than talk. Over the past three months, the special committee of Healthco's board and Lazard Freres conducted what we believe was an exhaustive search for a buyer for Healthco. More than 50 companies were contacted by, or contacted, us. These included both strategic and financial and domestic and foreign buyers. Extensive due diligence was conducted and discussions were held with numerous parties.

"During this period, Gemini has contributed nothing but bombast and empty rhetoric. We are at a loss to understand why, if Gemini were truly interested in selling Healthco at the best possible price, they have waited until after we entered into our agreement with Hicks Muse to actually do something to accomplish that goal.

"We can only assume that they are not, and never were, in fact interested in selling Healthco and that their latest announcement is nothing but a desperate attempt to salvage their waning credibility with our stockholders.

"Healthco's board has produced what it promised -- a cash transaction with an extraordinarily well-qualified buyer which we believe is the very best available under the circumstances. By contrast, Gemini's actions have resulted in nothing buy disruption to Healthco's business and the inevitable loss of value in our stockholders' investment -- including that of Gemini -- that has resulted from this.

"It is now up to Mr. Pearlman to produce. Our agreement with Hicks Muse does not preclude us from considering bona fide unsolicited offers and from providing information concerning Healthco in response to such offers. It also contains a customary fiduciary 'out.' Our stockholders will have an opportunity to assess the results of Gemini's efforts at Healthco's annual meeting on Sept. 25."

MCLEAN, VA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Silo, Inc., the nation's third-largest specialty retailer of consumer electronics, has signed a $5.7 million contract with GTE Spacenet to implement a nationwide private business-communication network.

"We are in a very tough industry, one that is highly competitive," said Alan Weingarden, Silo's vice president, information systems and technology. "We are convinced that good customer service, delivered in a cost-effective manner, is the key to our continued growth. This network will improve the efficiency of our business operations and enhance customer service."

Under terms of the five-year agreement, GTE Spacenet will build a Skystar(R) interactive data-communications network consisting of very small aperture terminals (VSATs) installed at Silo's 215 stores nationwide. GTE Spacenet also will provide operations and maintenance support.

Silo, which sells consumer electronics and major appliances, will use the network to facilitate sales transactions or after-sales service through such applications as credit authorization and inventory management. In addition, the network can be readily upgraded to include business-television communications between sites.

Satellites for Strategic Communication

"Whereas the VSAT, with its unique capabilities, was once considered a strategic advantage, it is now a strategic necessity," said Joseph Barna, vice president and general manager of GTE Spacenet's Communications Services division. "We are pleased to do business with a company whose service philosophy so closely mirrors our own."

The last two years have been a period of rapid growth for Silo. In 1989, the Philadelphia-based company experienced a 24 percent growth in sales. Owned by Dixons Group plc of London, the world's largest specialty retailer of consumer electronics, Silo contributed nearly 30 percent of Dixons' total retail sales in 1989. Silo is continuing its expansion this year by opening 16 stores in the Los Angeles market by year's end.

Weingarden considers the VSAT network a strategic fit with Silo's business plan. "We have the flexibility to close or relocate stores, or open new ones, in a matter of weeks rather than months." Locations where a VSAT cannot be installed, such as Water Tower Place in Chicago, will be connected via a terrestrial line to the nearest store with a VSAT.

The GTE Spacenet network of VSATs replaces a hybrid configuration consisting of a shared hub, 36 VSATs in strategic market locations and circuits connecting Silo's other stores. In light of Silo's aggressive business plan, Weingarden said, the decision was made to convert to a totally private network that would give the company more control over costs and network management.

Headquartered in McLean, GTE Spacenet is a world leader in satellite communications with more than two decades of experience in the provision of telecommunications services and systems.

GTE's subsidiaries operate in 46 states and 41 countries, with combined revenues and sales of $17.4 billion and net income of $1.4 billion in 1989. GTE is a leader in its three core businesses -- telecommunications, lighting and precision materials -- providing products and services worldwide.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - A federal judge today refused to grant Johnson & Johnson (NYSE: JNJ) a new trial following last year's $7.85 million verdict against the pharmaceutical giant and three of its subsidiaries for breach of an "exclusive" distribution contract with Advanced Medical Inc., the Horsham-based distributor of high tech medical products.

The judge for the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania ruled that the jury had ample evidence that Johnson & Johnson had intentionally and wrongfully induced its subsidiary, Arden Medical Systems Inc., of Minneapolis, to breach Advanced Medical's exclusive contract.

The court likewise rejected Johnson & Johnson's plea to vacate or reduce the jury's $7.15 million punitive damage award against J&J. The court held that there was more than sufficient evidence of outrageous conduct by J&J and two of its wholly-owned subsidiaries.

The award is one of the largest ever against Johnson & Johnson. Advanced Medical's attorneys, Lee A. Rosengard and Jeffrey A. Lutsky, of the Philadelphia firm of Stradley, Ronon, Stevens & Young, stated that they were "gratified that the court chose not to disturb the jury's verdict, which properly reflected its outrage at the commercial misconduct of Johnson & Johnson."

At the 5-week long trial last year, a former vice president of Arden testified that a high-ranking executive of Johnson & Johnson subsidiary threatened to "crush" Advanced Medical if the little Horsham company attempted to stand up for its rights against the pharmaceutical giant. In addition, a number of former Arden executives admitted at trial that it was the defendants' plan to force Advanced Medical out of its profitable distribution contract so that J&J could reap the profits for itself.

"It's no wonder the jury awarded Advanced Medical such a substantial verdict," said William R. Sasso, senior partner at Stradley, Ronon, Stevens & Young. Sasso suggested that J&J executives take a "long, hard look at their own credo." The J&J credo, often cited by J&J as a principal reason for its success, promises "just and ethical" actions by the company's management, and the opportunity for distributors "to make a fair profit."

LONG BEACH, Calif. (SEPT. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Every year as taxpayers sign their refund checks, they briefly note the announcement that "Forgery of endorsements on Treasury checks is a federal crime. Maximum penalty is a $10,000 fine and 10 years imprisonment."

Michelle J. Magee of Long Beach has contacted numerous U.S. government agencies, starting with the IRS, and not one would prosecute the forgery of her IRS refund check, dated 1986.

Two weeks ago, the Long Beach Press-Telegram ran a wire story about the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers' $10,000 reward campaign for corrupt IRS officials. Magee responded to the coalition, "thinking that maybe these people can help me."

Magee's problems started eight years ago when her ex-husband, Larry Oetjengerdes, skipped town, leaving her with an unexpected tax bill. Magee started receiving IRS notices on her husband's delinquent taxes, such as the frightening 1984 one that stated "...Property or rights to property, such as automobiles, may also be seized and sold to satisfy your tax liability..."

The IRS targeted Magee for the tax bill. IRS Revenue Officer C. Ramerez wrote, "We have been trying to locate Larry Oetjengerdes, but all efforts have been unsuccessful. The tax owed has been long past due and we demand full payment from you."

Magee paid the bill in the fall of 1984, left with the promise from Ramerez that the IRS would continue to search for her former husband, who she had been divorced from for nearly two years.

Two months later, in pursuit of this promise, Magee again wrote Ramerez, informing him that her ex-husband had called her mother about the receipt of an IRS notice. The response to Magee was "case closed." The final note from IRS Group Manager Teresa Price of the Riverside IRS office stated "Disclosure provisions prevent us from discussing anything regarding Mr. Oetjengerdes (the ex-husband) without his expressed written authorization."

Magee thought that her troubles were over. She was her own person again, the past behind her and a refund check from the 1984 tax payment on the way.

Noticing that the refund check was late in arriving, Magee contacted the IRS. She received a copy of the check from the IRS with her signature forged right beside her ex-husband's. Her refund check had been sent to the very same ex-husband the IRS had previously been unable to locate.

Magee went to the IRS Problem Resolution office and then the Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS, but neither would investigate this easily proved accusation.

By the time Magee went to the U.S. Justice Department and then the Secret Service in 1988, the IRS had already decided that the complaint was civil between two spouses even though the divorce was now five years past and the check was forged.

"I want this forgery prosecuted," Magee said. "It is unfair that it has not been done. I believe that divorced or separated people should be treated individually and as separate persons. The person that pays the penalty should be entitled to the refund."

During the past five years, many taxpayers treated unfairly and illegally have contacted the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers. The coalition was founded in 1985 by the Church of Scientology's Freedom Magazine and is composed of former and current IRS employees and concerned citizens.

Those presently having problems with the IRS may contact the coalition in Washington at 202-328-1638 or in Los Angeles at 213-662-9876. The address for the National Coalition of IRS Whistleblowers is P.O. Box 65471, Washington, DC 20035.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - At least 100-thousand students in five states enjoyed an extended vacation Wednesday as more than six-thousand of their teachers walked the picket lines. But teachers in iakima, Washington, returned to the classroom after unanimously ratifying a three-year contract.

The activist homosexual group ACT-UP has raised the hackles of a conservative organization that supports Senator Jesse Helms. ACT-UP has come out with a satirical poster that appears to depict the arch-conservative North Carolina Republican engaging in a homosexual act with President Bush. RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (SEPT. 6) UPI - Antonio Pires Estaquio was overseeing expansion of the municipal cemetery he had administered near Sao Paulo for 13 years when one of three workers using crude shovels uncovered the edge of a plastic bag.

Inside the transparent bag was what appeared to be human remains.

Further digging Tuesday in the small Dom Bosco Municipal Cemetery revealed 1,700 such bags, some containing only partial skeletons, buried in a 90-foot-long, 2-foot wide and 6-foot deep trench. Estaquio told United Press International in a telephone interview he believed some of the remains were of political prisoners who had been tortured and killed during military rule from 1964 to 1985.

''When I came to work here people talked about the common graves that were supposedly for beggars,'' Estaquio said. ''I always wanted to know who really was buried there.''

Estaquio said that some of the bodies showed signs of expensive dental work, including silver fillings that would have been beyond the means of the supposed paupers buried there.

The graveyard administrator said some skeletons also showed signs of physical harm, possibly torture, including skulls that had been crushed or perforated by bullet holes and fractured legs and collar bones.

''I had to get authorization from the municipality to open the grave'' to remove the bags, Estaquio said. On Wednesday, police transferred the remains from the cemetery, 21 miles west to Sao Paulo, where forensic experts were to examine the remains at the Legal Medical Institute of Sao Paulo, authorities said.

Police and officials from the government of President Fernando Collor de Mello said they would not comment on the find until they had the results of the medical tests.

Human rights leaders told Brazil's official news agency that at least two of the bodies were the remains of Frederico Eduardo Mayr and Flavio Carvalho Molina, members of the now-extinct far-left Popular Liberation Movement who were arrested in the early 1970s and later listed as disappeared.

Mayr and Carvalho were identified by the Brazilian Commission for Amnesty, which said the two were registered in the cemetery records under the code names they used while carrying out guerrilla activities, the news agency said.

So far, no group has claimed all the bags hold the remains of people tortured and killed during the military regime, but some say that a small number of what is said to be unclaimed paupers remains could be the bodies of political prisoners arrested in the early 1970s and killed.

''At least 50 of these bodies could be ex-political prisoners. Some could have been killed by the (paramilitary) Death Squad,'' said Luis Eduardo Greenhalgh, a defense lawyer for political prisoners during the 1970s and now assistant mayor of Sao Paulo.

According to the Rio de Janeiro president of the Brazilian Commision for Amnesty for Political Prisoners, Iramia Benjamin, 450 people disappeared and were believed slain in crackdowns against left- wing political organizations during the military regime.

''This grave could reveal many things we don't know,'' said Susana Tejera Lisboa, wife of Luis Enrico Lisboa, a militant member of the guerrilla organization National Liberation Alliance who disappeared in the 1970s.

Estaquio said authorities exhumed the bodies of seven left-wing political prisoners from the same cemetery in the early 1980s.

BOGOTA, Colombia (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Cesar Gaviria shifted gears in the war against the powerful cocaine cartels, offering reduced sentences and the end of extradition of traffickers who surrender and confess their crimes.

But at the same time, the administration also ordered the extradition of three suspects already in custody. The decision came in defiance of a peace offer from the violent Medellin Cartel that ended bombings and slayings but also asked for the end of extradition.

Top aides said the presidential decree issued Wednesday was a new phase in the government's war on the cocaine cartels that began last year. It goes into effect under a state of siege declared by President Virgilio Barco in 1989.

''It's going to increase the capacity of the security organizations to go after the drug traffickers,'' said a senior official.

Gaviria said traffickers who turn themselves in, confess to their crimes and identify property bought from cocaine income would be accorded special treatment. Traffickers who confessed to crimes committed in other countries also would not be extradited, instead being judged by Colombian judges for those crimes.

Those who cooperate will be eligible for probation or reduced prison sentences depending on the crime. Sentences for drug crimes or terrorist acts would be reduced by one quarter, or as much as by one half if the suspects identify others who committed crimes.

''For those who do not satisfy these conditions, the maximum weight of the judicial system will be applied, including extradition,'' Gaviria said in a nationally televised address.

Gaviria said the offer was open Pablo Escobar and other cocaine kingpins, the billion-dollar traffickers who heads the Medellin Cartel. Escobar remains at large despite a huge manhunt.

The government believes the measures will induce traffickers - especially at lower and middle levels - to surrender and cooperate. Their information would eventually lead to higher-level suspects.

''It's like a pyramid,'' said one administration official, ''you start chopping from the bottom.''

Gaviria also announced that three jailed suspects had been approved for extradition to the United States, the first such action in his month-old government.

The decision renews extradition began under emergency decrees of the previous administration and comes after more than a month free of car bombs and other major terrorist acts.

The peace began when the Medellin Cartel, through its hit squad formed to fight extradition - The Extraditables - declared a unilateral cease-fire. But the peace declaration also said the group was looking for an end to extradition.

Gaviria announced the government also turned down three U.S. petitions for extradition of jailed suspects and postponed the extradition of another suffering serious health problems.

Gaviria denied any deal had been struck with the traffickers or that contact had taken place.

''Not only has there been no dialogue but the government has received no message, no signal, no offer, no petition that comes from these criminal organizations,'' Gaviria told reporters.

The government was acting from a position of strength, having made significant advances in the cocaine war in the past three to four months, he said.

The administration official also said the government would not let up the pressure on the cartels because of the new policy.

''It will not be reduced in the least - perhaps it will increase,'' said the official who asked not to be identified.

The president also said the new policy would relieve pressure on judges, who are the subject of either hefty bribes or death threats by traffickers.

The change in tactics obeyed a ''mandate'' from the Colombian people to put an end to the violence that has rocked the nation in recent years, Gaviria said.

A war between the government and the Medellin Cartel erupted in August 1989 following a string of assassinations by cocaine hit squads and a series of successful anti-drug actions by police.

More than 1,000 people have been killed in the war, which includes car bombs, the bombing of an airliner and the slayings of hundreds of police officers.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush picked a pair of GOP fundraisers in Kansas and Florida Thursday to focus attention on this fall's elections and budget battle - as well as to reaffirm American resolve in the Persian Gulf.

Making his first trip aboard the new Air Force One, a six-story high Boeing 747, Bush scheduled a full day on the road in advance of Sunday's superpower summit in Helsinki, Finland, with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The White House says Bush will report on his talks with Gorbachev and the latest developments in the gulf crisis in a nationally televised address to a joint session of Congress on Tuesday.

Bush, who intends to spend much of this fall campaigning for GOP candidates, was to attend fundraisers Thursday for Gov. Mike Hayden in Topeka, Kansas, and for Rep. Bill Grant in Tallahassee, Fla.

Aides say the president, in his campaign speeches, will urge support for the Republican hopefuls in this fall's elections, which will see the entire House and a third of the Senate up for grabs.

They say he will also express the need for Congress to reach an agreement on new deficit-cutting budget, and underscore the United States' commitment to stand up to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for his Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait.

Bush met at the White House Wednesday with 30 members of Congress. They just returned from a fact-finding trip to the Middle East where where thousands of U.S. troops are dug in as protection against further Iraqi aggression.

The lawmakers praised the rapidity of the U.S. military buildup, the biggest since the Vietnam War, and also expressed confidence that the U.N.-mandated economic sanctions would bring Hussein to his knees.

Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, told reporters after the hour-long session that the naval blockade should be extended to include air transport. But the White House quickly rejected the idea as unnecessary and potentially provocative.

While Bush heads to Helsinki Friday for his weekend meeting with Gorbachev he will hope that progress is being made back at home on thus far stumbling efforts to reduce the record deficit and put together a new federal budget.

Congressional and White House budget negotiators, following a month-long recess, are to meet at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., on Friday with hopes of hammering out a new tentative spending plan by Monday.

Bush will fly Thursday - and again this weekend - aboard his new Air Force One, an opulent and modified 747 200B.

It is the first of two such planes that will replace a pair of aging Boeing 707s, one dating back to John F. Kennedy, the other to Richard Nixon.

Two years overdue and an estimated $365 million overbudget, the new planes are the product of a 1986 ''fixed cost contract'' of $240 million that grew by leaps and bounds and revisions.

Bush, a former Navy combat pilot, is said to be anxious to climb aboard the aircraft, which is outfitted with an entire range of state- of-the-art wonders and conveniences.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Health Secretary Louis Sullivan said Thursday that the nation should approach the next century with the goals of reducing the number of AIDS cases, curbing sex among teenagers, cutting tobacco use and promoting healthier diets and more exercise.

In releasing the nation's 298 health goals for the year 2000, Sullivan said good health is a benefit that ''should be made available and accessible'' to everyone. But he said there is a lot individuals can do to make the 1990s the ''decade of prevention.''

''If we are to extend the benefits of good health to all our people, it is crucial that we build in our most vulnerable populations what I have called a 'culture of character' ... a way of thinking and being that actively promotes responsible behavior and the adoption of lifestyles that are maximally conducive to good health,'' said Sullivan, who is a physician.

Many of the new health goals were written for the last decade but were never met. Some of those carry-overs include a reduction in infant mortality, increased immunization against childhood diseases and a decrease in smoking.

More attention was paid in the 2000 plan to acquired immune deficiency syndrome - which was not mentioned in the goals set for 1990.

Other key goals for the next decade:

-Confine annual incidence of diagnosed AIDS cases to no more than 98,000. In 1989, there were an estimated 44,000-50,000 diagnosed cases.

-Confine prevalence of the HIV infection to no more than 800 per 100,000. In 1989, there were about 400 per 100,000.

-Number of adolescents engaging in sex should be no more than 15 percent by age 15 and no more than 40 percent by age 17. In 1988, about 27 percent of girls and 33 percent of boys had sex by age 15, and 50 percent of girls and 66 percent of boys by age 17.

-At least 50 percent of all intravenous drug abusers should be in treatment programs. In 1989, about 11 percent of opiate abusers were in treatment.

-Limit cigarette smoking to no more than 15 percent of people 20 and older. In 1987, 29 percent smoked.

-Reduce the initiation of cigarette smoking by children and youth so that no more than 15 percent have become regular smokers by age 20. In 1987, 30 percent of youth had become regular smokers by ages 20-24.

-Establish tobacco-free environments and include tobacco-use prevention programs in schools; increase to at least 75 percent the number of smoke-free areas in the workplace.

-Eliminate or severely restrict all forms of tobacco product advertising and promotion directed at children under 18.

-Reduce deaths by alcohol-related motor vehicle crashes to no more than 8.5 per 100,000 people. In 1987, there were 9.7 deaths per 100,000 people.

-Reduce drug-related deaths to no more than three per 100,000. In 1987, there were 3.8 per 100,000.

-Reduce dietary fat intake to an average of 30 percent of calories or less and average saturated fat intake to less than 10 percent of calories for people older than 2.

-Increase complex carbohydrate and fiber-containing foods to five or more daily servings for vegetables and fruits, and to six or more daily servings for grain products.

-Increase calcium intake so at least 50 percent of youth and 50 percent of pregnant and lactating women consume three or more daily servings of calcium-rich foods; at least 50 percent of adults over age 25 should have two or more daily servings.

-Decrease salt and sodium intake so at least 65 percent of cooks at home prepare food without adding salt, at least 80 percent avoid using salt at the table and at least 40 percent regularly purchase low-sodium foods.

-At least 90 percent of restaurants and institutional food service operations offer identifiable low-fat, low-calorie food choices.

-No more than 20 percent of people older than 20 should be overweight and no more than 15 percent of adolescents.

-At least 30 percent of people older than 6 should engage in light to moderate physical activity for at least 30 minutes a day. At least 20 percent of people 18 and older, and 75 percent of kids ages 6-17, should engage in vigorous exercise.

-Reduce heart disease deaths to no more than 100 per 100,000. In 1987, there were 135 deaths per 100,000.

-Slow the rise in lung cancer deaths to no more than 42 per 100,000. In 1987, there were 47.9 per 100,000.

-Reduce number of homicides to no more than 7.2 per 100,000. For black men the 1987 homicide rate was 90.5 per 100,000 and the 2000 goal for that group is 72.4.

-Reduce infant mortality rate to no more than 7 per 1,000 live births. The 1989 rate was 9.7.

-Reduce low-birth weight babies to no more than 5 percent of live births and very low birth weight babies to no more than 1 percent of live births. In 1987, the rates were 6.9 percent and 1.2 percent, respectively.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - The State Department says it's investigating a report that an American man was shot and wounded by Iraqi soldiers while trying to avoid capture in the capital of occupied Kuwait. NO word on when the reported shooting took place, or how badly the man was wounded. Asked if the agency had confirmed the shooting, a State Department official who did NOT give her name, replied- ''Yes.'' But State Department spokesman Tom Daugherty later said the agency had NOT independently confirmed the incident.

The shuttle Columbia was to have blasted off shortly from Cape Canaveral, Florida, on a long-delayed astronomy mission. The leak into the shuttle's engine room forced officials to scrub the mission- at least temporarily- less than eight hours before launch.

The prime ministers of North and South Korea met for a second day Thursday behind closed doors at a hotel in Seoul to discuss proposals to peacefully unify their countries after 45 years. Dissident student leaders say they'll organize a march to the hotel later in the day to express their ''anti-U-S and anti-nuclear arms reduction'' view. Police say the planned march is illegal and will be blocked.

Canadian Indian Affairs Minister Tom Siddon emerged from a meeting with Indian leaders in Ottawa Wednesday with a possible solution to a nearly two-month-old land dispute over an ancient Mohawk burial ground. Siddon says one solution might involve asking the armed forces to move back from a alchohol treatment center at a reserve south of Montreal. An estimated 50 Mohawks are holed up in the center... refusing to disarm.

BEIJING (SEPT. 6) UPI - Deposed Communist Party leader Zhao Ziyang has been seen in public for the first time since his ouster after the crushing of the democracy movement last year, playing golf on a course outside Beijing, Japanese sources said Thursday.

Zhao, 71, an avid golfer, played a round with his wife Tuesday morning at the Beijing International Golf Course north of the city near the site of the Ming Tombs, according to Japanese diplomats and officials at the Japanese-managed course.

Beijing has been abuzz in recent months with rumors, first fanned and then denied by the government, that Zhao was making a comeback and might even resume an official post. But none of those has been confirmed and party sources have dismissed them as unlikely.

There have been no confirmed sightings of Zhao, who has reportedly spent most of the past year at a courtyard house in Beijing, since he was dismissed from all official posts in June 1989 after Chinese troops suppressed the democracy movement.

But early Tuesday, a Japanese diplomat playing golf with a visiting member of the Japanese Parliament said his party observed ''a VIP surrounded by bodyguards'' on the course's first hole.

''We couldn't see who it was, but later the managers told us it was Mr. Zhao and Mrs. Zhao,'' the diplomat said. ''We are satisfied it was them.''

Other sources gave a similar account. They indicated it was the first time Zhao had been seen on the course since his ouster, although he had regularly played it before the spring 1989 unrest.

When he was ousted, the government charged Zhao with ''supporting the turmoil and splitting the party'' for his moderate stance toward the six weeks of student-led protests and his refusal to go along with using deadly force against demonstrators.

Premier Li Peng last month denied reports that Zhao had met with senior leader Deng Xiaoping and might be reinstated. However, despite more than a year of investigation, the party has still not brought formal charges against Zhao, expelled him or settled his case, indicating continuing disagreement.

Hong Kong newspapers have reported in the past week that Zhao's fate may be decided at a meeting in October of the party's Central Committee, and that he is likely to retain his membership in the party.

#90249u0308 09/06/1990 ~United Press International
CARMEL, Calif. (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Pebble Beach Co., owner of four world-class golf courses and the scenic 17-mile drive on the Monterey Peninsula, announced Wednesday the sale of its properties to an American subsidiary of a Japanese development company.

Real estate experts estimated the deal to be worth between $780 milliion and $1 billion.

The buyer was Ben Hogan Properties, a Fort Worth, Texas, company owned by Japan's Cosmo World Co., headed by golf course developer Minoru Isutani, which has built more than 15 golf course in Japan, as well as projects in Europe and the United States.

Bran Fanning, president of American International Golf Resorts of Greenbrae, Calif., said he thinks the new owners may make some of the golf courses private and sell memberships both in the United States and Japan.

''Memberships in Japanese golf clubs often sell for more than $1 million each, and memberships of $60,000 each in Japan could reap handsome profits '' he said.

Pebble Beach President Tom Oliver said in a statement: ''We are excited about this new alliance. Our combined decades of experience will assure that Pebble Beach will remain among the world's finest golfing resorts.''

Speculation about the deal has been rampant for months, but Ben Hogan's purchase of the entire company surprised many observers. It had been believed the Japanese firm would buy only 49 percent of Pebble Beach Co. for about $450 million and would jointly manage the property for at least three years with the Los Angeles-based partnership that has owned the famous property since 1983 - Miller, Klutznick, Davis & Gray.

The old owners reportedly had been looking for outside investors to help pay off debt and finance new construction before Monterey County, now in the fourth year of a drought, limits future develoment.

Ernest Morishita, the county administrator, said any benefits Japanese ownership might bring in the form of extra tax revenues will probably be outweighed by extra demands on the county's roads and water supply.

Marvin Davis, who acquired Pebble Beach along with other partners as part of his acquisition of 20th Century Fox, could not be reached for comment on what he plans to do with the proceeds.

Isutani has been a controversial figure in Japan where some members of his golf clubs accused him of selling more than 10 times the number of memberships than agreed and of reneging on other promises.

Isutani has also been criticized for his relationship with former NTT Corp. Chairman Hisashi Shinto, who is being tried for political bribery in a stock scandal. The Las Vegas Sun reported last month that Isutani's application for a gaming license may be rejected because of his association with Shinto.

Included in the deal were Del Monte Lodge and the golf course at Pebble Beach, the inn and golf course at Spanish Bay, Spyglass Hill Golf Course, the Del Monte Golf Course in Monterey, the undeveloped Old Capitol site in Monterey, and undeveloped properties in Pebble Beach, an uncorporated area with 5,300 residents.

The sale adds Pebble Beach, one of the half-dozen most famous courses in America, to a growing list of world-class resorts acquired by the Japanese. Another Japanese investment firm recently bought the famed Riviera Country Club in Los Angeles, where Isutani plans to build the Los Angeles International Golf Course in the San Fernando Valley.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - At least the Boston Red Sox will have a month to recover. It may take that long.

The Red Sox suffered their third straight setback to the Oakland Athletics Wednesday night, a 10-0 pasting that gave the A's a sweep of the three-game series between the American League's divisional leaders.

If this was a preview of the American League Championship Series, which begins Oct. 6, they can start printing up World Series tickets in the Bay Area now.

''They took it to us - beat us in every facet of the game,'' Boston's Tom Brunansky said. ''We weren't really in any of the ballgames.''

No, they weren't.

The Red Sox, who entered the three-game set riding a 10-game winning streak, were outscored 25-7 by the A's and never led in any game.

Bob Welch won his major league-leading 23rd game and Mark McGwire belted a two-run homer and drove in four runs to lead the A's, who have won four straight and lead the Chicago White Sox by 6 1-2 games in the AL West.

Welch allowed five hits and struck out four over eight innings to raise his record to 23-5, including 10-2 in his last 12 starts.

The right-hander said the A's were well aware of a potential playoff matchup ith the Red Sox.

''No doubt it's not just like any other series, when you get the feeling you could possible play this club in the playoffs,'' said Welch. ''We listen to what people say.''

Oakland completed its first season-series win (4-2) over the Red Sox in Boston since 1973.

The Red Sox lead the Toronto Blue Jays by 5 1-2 games in the AL East.

''I've been on the other side of this last year at about this time,'' Oakland Manager Tony La Russa said, referring to a Sox sweep of the A's late last season. ''They were red-hot so at some point the law ''

Harold Baines had a two-run single in the third and McGwire capped the inning with his 34th homer of the season.

McGwire added a two-run double in Oakland's four-run ninth inning.

Rookie Doug Jennings, subbing for Jose Canseco, added a solo homer in the fifth inning and contributed a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Greg Harris, 12-6, was battered for six runs and 10 hits in five- plus innings.

Rickey Henderson scored his 100th run of the season on Baines' single in the third, marking the ninth time Henderson has reached the plateau in his career.

Elsewhere in the American League: Toronto downed Detroit 7-3, Chicago blanked Kansas City 3-0, Seattle tripped Baltimore 9-5, New York edged California 2-1 and Texas trimmed Cleveland 3-2.

In the National League it was: Pittsburgh sweeping a double-header from New York 1-0 and 3-1; Philadelphia 4, Chicago 1; Montreal 6, St. Louis 2; San Diego 5, Houston 2; Cincinnati 5, San Francisco 3; and Atlanta 6, Los Angeles 2.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Blue Jays 7, Detroit 3

At Detroit, Rance Mulliniks and Fred McGriff hit solo homers to offset Cecil Fielder's 44th homer to lead Toronto. Rob Ducey had three hits, including a two-run double for Toronto. David Wells, 10-4, allowed four hits in seven innings. Clay Parker fell to 3-2.

White Sox 3, Royals 0

At Chicago, Greg Hibbard recorded his first career shutout with a three-hitter and Robin Ventura broke a scoreless tie with a two-run single in the eighth inning to help the White Sox complete a three-game sweep and keep pace with Oakland. Hibbard, 12-8, walked five and struck out six. Kansas City's Mel Stottlemyre Jr. pitched seven innings of one- hit ball in his first major league start. Steve Farr, 10-6, was the loser.

Reynolds hit Kevin Hickey's first pitch into the left-field bleachers for his fourth home run of the year. Reynolds added a pair of doubles to pace the Mariners' 17-hit attack. Keith Comstock improved to 7-3, while Hickey dropped to 1-3.

Dave LaPoint, 7- 10, allowed five hits in 8 1-3 innings and Dave Righetti got his 30th save.

Rangers 3, Indians 2

At Arlington, Texas, Kevin Reimer's pinch-hit single with one out in the ninth inning scored Gary Pettis from second base to cap a two-run rally and lift the Rangers. Kenny Rogers, 6-5, earned the win despite blowing a save opportunity when he gave up two runs in the ninth. Reliever Doug Jones, 4-5, took the loss.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Hot weather baked the South while the Midwest and northern Plains were hit by rain, lightning and floods Thursday with South Dakota getting 1 1/2 inches of rain in an hour.

Summer weather remained in the nation's midsection with temperatures topping 100 degrees in some cities.

Scattered thunderstorms brought some relief to Alabama and Mississippi, but high pressure kept temperatures near the top of the thermometer in most of the southern states.

Flash flood warnings were issued Thursday for parts of northern Minnesota as thunderstorms with heavy rains washed out roads and flooded basements.

The floods occurred across the northern part of the state and were at their worst in the northeastern corner, near Duluth.

Severe weather hit other states bordering on the Great Lakes as heavy thunderstorms moved across northern and central Lake Michigan carrying vivid lightning and gusty winds.

Storms moved across the lake from the Wisconsin coast into Michigan and the National Weather Service warned boaters from Frankfort, Mich., to Charlevoix, Mich., and those in Green Bay, Wis., to seek safe harbor.

Storms also moved across western South Dakota and Nebraska, carrying winds that gusted to 47 mph and dumping 1 1/2 inches of rain on Rapid City Regional Airport in an hour.

Thunderstorms in Arizona, Utah and Iadaho waned, and warm sunny days dominated in the remainder of the West where there was little change in the weather.

Thickening clouds pushed into the Northeast from western Pennsylvania early Thursday, with winds from the south bringing increasing humidity.

Western Pennsylvania had high humidity with areas of fog and drizzle, and in the eastern portions of the state skies were cloudy, but dry.

Clouds and some fog were reported in western New York, but temperatures remained warm.

Rain wasn't expected in the New England region until Friday, with comfortable temperatures ranging from the mid-70s to around 80 Thursday.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - A Canadian tourist was shot and wounded during a wild shootout in Brooklyn involving alleged crack dealers, three would- be robbers and police, authorities said Thursday.

A livery cab driver - also caught by accident in the melee - was bitten by one suspect who tried to commandeer the vehicle, said a spokeswoman for police, Sgt. Mary Wrensen.

The suspect, Jesus Cruz, 37, of Brooklyn, who was charged with attempted murder, also was wounded in the shootout.

It was the second incident of violence involving a tourist this week. On Sunday night, a young Utah man was stabbed and killed trying to defend his parents from muggers in a Manhattan subway.

The shootout began at 11:20 p.m. Wednesday in the violent East New York section of Brooklyn. Wrensen said Cruz and two others exchanged gunfire with alleged crack dealers who ''they were possibly attempting to rob,'' when three police officers happened on the scene.

Cruz jumped into his car to get away, and the vehicle crashed into an auto driven by tourist Carol Espirit, 27, of Toronto, who was visiting her Brooklyn relatives, Wrensen said.

Cruz took over Espirit's car and with the tourist in the back seat, crashed the car into two other parked cars - all the while continuing his shootout with police, Wrensen said.

''There was pandemonium on the street,'' Wrensen said.

Cruz finally abandoned Espirit's car, leaving her suffering a gunshot wound to the buttocks, and jumped into a livery cab driven by Guilvio Bejarau, 28.

''He's still firing at police, and when the driver tries to push him away with his arm, Cruz bit him,'' Wrensen said.

At that point, police apprehended Cruz, after he had fired a total of 15 rounds. Cruz himself was hit in the left thumb, left indez finger and right ankle.

Cruz was reported in stable condition at Brookdale, where the livery driver was treated and released.

Espirit also was reported in stable condition at Brookdale. It wasn't clear whose bullet hit the tourist.

One pellet gun was recovered at the scene, Wrensen said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, seeking to end nearly five decades of strained relations between Moscow and Tokyo, announced Thursday his intention to visit Japan in April 1991, a trip which would make him the first Soviet leader to set foot in Japan.

Gorbachev made his plans known in a message delivered to Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze.

Gorbachev formally announced the long-anticipated visit despite the failure of Kaifu and Shevardnadze to settle a 45-year territorial dispute that has blocked friendly relations between the two nations.

''Compared to the fundamental changes taking place in the rest of the world, the relationship between Japan and the Soviet Union has seen little progress,'' Gorbachev said in his message, according to Japanese officials.

''To advance this relationship, I want to visit Japan in 1991. I hope to visit in April,'' Gorbachev said.

The Soviet Union could benefit greatly from Japanese economic and technical assistance, especially in the development of the resource-rich Soviet Far East.

But Japan has refused to give aid to Gorbachev because of the Soviet Union's refusal to return four small islands off the northern coast of Japan which the Soviets occupied in the closing days of World War II.

The Soviets fear giving back the islands, which have little economic value would set a dangerous precedent in Moscow's continuing struggle to hold the Soviet republic together.

The Soviet Union seized the southernmost islands in the Kuril chain at the end of World War II and expelled the 17,000 Japanese who lived there.

Japan has been demanding the return of the islands since the end of the war. But the Soviets say Japan lost all rights to the territories when it gave up claims to the Kuril Islands in the 1951 San Francisco Peace Treaty it signed with the United States.

Kaifu said he hopes Gorbachev's visit will lead to a resolution of the island issue, which has prevented the two countries from signing a peace treaty ending World War II hostilities.

''When Gorbachev visits, an unavoidable issue will be the return of the four islands and the signing of the peace treaty,'' Kaifu said. ''We want to find the path toward a resolution.''

Japanese officials said no real progress was made on the island issue in two days of talks with Shevardnadze.

''The Soviet attitude on the return of the islands is softer than before, but they still have not changed their basic stance,'' said a senior Japanese Foreign Ministry official.

Shevardnadze said his government is giving due attention to solving the problem, and the Japanese viewed this statement as a step forward because of Moscow's earlier reluctance to admit a problem even existed.

Shevardnadze said resolving the problem will take a long time and urged Japan to move relations forward in other areas while discussion on the territorial dispute continue.

Shevardnadze and Japan Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama signed several agreements, including pledges to begin discussions on expanding Japanese technical assistance to the Soviet Union, aiding the victims of the Chernobyl nuclear power plant disaster and increasing trade and cultural exchanges.

TOKYO (SEPT. 6) UPI - Imported car sales in Japan in August surged 10.2 percent over a year ago to 15,435 units, posting the 80th consecutive year-on-year rise since January 1984 and setting a record for the month of August, the Japan Automobile Importers' Association reported Thursday.

The association said passenger cars accounted for 15,177 units, up 9.6 percent over a year ago.

West German cars continued to dominate the market despite a 2.2 percent year-to-year fall in their sales, accounting for 8,786 units or 56.9 percent of the total sales, the association said.

Sales of U.S.-made cars surged 36.9 percent to 2,213 units while those of British cars jumped 43.0 percent to 1,676 units, the association said.

Sales of French and Italian cars accounted for 1,032 units and 522 units, up 35.4 percent and 43.4 percent, respectively, the association said.

Swedish cars accounted for 1,056 units, up 17.5 percent, it said.

Sales of Australian and South Korean cars fell 33.3 percent and 43.6 percent, respectively, to 12 units and 84 units, the association said.

The association said imported car sales for the first eight month of this year totaled 149,358 units, up 32.6 percent.

Despite the steady increase in imported car sales in Japan, their market share stood at a modest 4.3 percent, according to figures released by the Japan Automobile Dealers' Association.

The association said sales of Japanese and imported cars in August totaled 356,313 units, up 11.5 percent over a year ago. Sales of passenger cars grew 10.0 percent to 252,033 units while those of trucks and buses totaled 102,533 units and 1,747 units, up 15.4 percent and 17.5 percent, respectively, it said.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Iraq's foreign minister says he and Soviet President Gorbachev had a ''constructive, cordial and frank exchange of views'' yesterday in Moscow. But Tariq Aziz says Baghdad and the Kremlin have ''different views'' of the situation in the Persian Gulf. He also says Iraq requested yesterday's meeting so he could brief Gorbachev on the Iraqi position before the Bush-Gorbachev summit in Helsinki on Sunday.

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Ramadan arrived in Beijing today for talks on the Persian Gulf crisis. An Iraqi diplomat says the visit is expected to last a day or two. Chinese sources say Ramadan is to meet this afternoon with the Chinese Vice Premier. He also might meet with Premier Li Peng. China strongly hinted it might send emergency humanitarian aid to Iraq.

President Bush says ''there are clear signs of progress'' in the war on drugs, even though ''the crisis is far from over.'' Bush made the comments yesterday as he marked the first anniversary of his initiative against illegal drug use. He helped release a rosy report showing drug use has dropped. But other figures show many cities, including Washington, D-C, with record murder rates possibly linked to drugs.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Congressional budget negotiators are suggesting ending or limiting tax deductions for charitable gifts, and the nation's volunteer community is NOT happy about it. Leaders of the volunteer sector say the proposal could cost their groups hundreds of Millions of dollars. Americans gave 96-BILLION dollars to charities in 1989, at a cost to the government of 13-BILLION dollars, which is the tax deduction individuals claimed on that amount.

A consumer group has some unsettling things to say about school lunches. WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - U.S. businesses will increase capital spending 5.1 percent in 1990, adjusted for inflation, in the smallest gain since 3.1 percent in 1987, the Commerce Department predicted Thursday.

The forecast is based on a survey of American corporations for July and August, mailed out before the start of hostilities in the Middle East.

Seventy percent of the surveys were received prior to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait, and officials said it was difficult to determine what effect the military action had on the data.

In its previous estimate, based on a survey for April and May, the department's Census Bureau predicted capital spending would increase 5.5 percent this year.

''Real spending is expected to increase 5.1 percent in 1990,'' the government said. ''This expectation is based on a projected increase of 0.3 percent in (inflation) for plant and equipment from 1989 to 1990.''

The Commerce Department also said that capital spending, adjusted for inflation, advanced 0.8 percent in the second quarter of 1990 after increasing 1.6 percent in the first quarter of the year.

''It is expected to decrease 0.7 percent in the third quarter, and to increase 1.2 percent in the fourth quarter,'' the government said.

In a market letter by Mitsubishi Bank in New York, analysts said a recent survey by the credit rating agency Dun & Bradstreet ''found that the key factor explaining capital spending is the prior year's ''aining ca

''This suggests that multi-year projects are a dominant force supporting capital spending,'' the letter said. ''Hence, it is at first difficult for companies to quickly slash capital spending budgets.

''By the same token if business improves, capital spending usually lags the upturn,'' the letter said.

GENEVA (SEPT. 6) UPI - International relief agencies stepped up their campaign to aid thousands of foreign refugees stranded in the desert along the Jordanian-Iraqi border as they try to flee the Persian Gulf crisis.

The Austrian Red Cross sent baby food, powdered milk, 3,000 blankets and 26 large tents in an 11-ton shipment to border refugee camps Wednesday, and U.N. officials in Europe said they had raised $20 million in aid.

In Brussels, Belgium, the European Community executive agency also approved $19.5 million in new aid, to be used mostly to buy food and medicine for refugees. The EC Commission said Wednesday it would also seek approval for an additional $39 million.

''There is a desperate need for shelter, food, water, and with each day that passes, medical help,'' Barnett Baron of the Save the Children Foundation told Cable News Network regarding the plight of at least 100,000 foreigners.

Karin Saddler of the International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva said the all-Swiss agency began bringing in supplies two weeks ago and has 25 people in the area, but said nevertheless, ''Conditions at the moment are very dramatic.''

ICRC President Cornelio Summaruga traveled to Iraq this week and was meeting with officials including Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz.

However, the official Iraqi News Agency indicated Aziz focused on Iraq's suffering under a U.N. economic embargo and how it was affecting Westerners held in Iraq and Kuwait as shields against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force based in the gulf.

INA said Aziz pressed the Red Cross to ''urge the countries concerned to adopt the necessary steps and provide the foreign nationals present in Iraq with food.''

The story did not refer to the refugees stranded at the border - most of them menial workers in Kuwait and Iraq whose countries are too poor to evacuate them from Jordan.

In Washington, Steve Richards, executive vice president of the American Red Cross, said, ''The International Red Cross has been working in Jordan for the past two weeks, and according to relief workers, the conditions for the new arrivals are deteriorating.''

''It is urgent that the refugees be evacuated away from the border area as soon as possible,'' he said.

The Red Cross was setting up two transit centers in Jordan's Azrak regional 60 miles east of Amman to relieve the situation at the border.

The Jordanian Red Crescent relief organization and the International League of the Red Cross were looking after 30,000 people at one camp in Azrak.

U.N. agencies, meanwhile, have raised $20 million to help the refugees, a spokesman for the U.N. Disaster Relief Organization said. UNDRO in Geneva is coordinating relief efforts for the U.N. High Commission for Refugees, UNICEF, and the World Food Program.

Much of the U.N. aid has been used to feed refugees in Jordan and provide medical care, the spokesman said, adding UNDRO also chartered a large Soviet Antonov freighter to ferry refugees from Jordan to Bangladesh.

Similar transportation was being arranged by the Organization for Migration, a non-governmental group funded by donations from various national governments. Some $11 million has been raised so far by the organization, which has used it to pay for 72 charter flights from Jordan to Sri Lanka and Bangladesh, a spokesman said.

Baron, of Save the Children, said, ''Getting people home is the next priority.''

But he noted it is believed that each Bangladeshi working in oil- rich Kuwait before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion supported 11 others back in Bangladesh. As such, he predicted the crisis will continue when the refugees get home.

''The crisis doesn't end the minute someone steps off the plane in Dhaka ...'' he said.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (SEPT. 6) UPI - The world faces ''grave danger'' of aggression from a widening number of dictatorships if Iraq does not completely withdraw from Kuwait and release all hostages, NATO's top official said Thursday.

''Naked aggression cannot succeed,'' NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner said in a speech at a conference in Prague, Czechoslovakia. Copies of the speech were released in Brussels.

''This crisis is not like previous regional disputes in which the interests of only a few nations were directly at stake,'' Woerner said. ''Nor is it only, or even primarily, about oil.

''If our principal common objective - which must be the complete Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait and the release of all hostages - is not fulfilled, the entire international community will be exposed to grave danger,'' he said.

''Danger from the precedent of a large, powerful country cynically taking over a smaller neighbor, danger even more ominously from the ambitions that successful aggression will undoubtedly engender in dictatorships that increasingly have access to technologies of mass destruction,'' the NATO chief said.

Woerner's trip to Czechoslovakia follows a July journey to Moscow as part of NATO's mission to expand its political role in the region. He goes to Poland next week.

Czechoslovakia implemented United Nations sanctions against Iraq, imposed an arms embargo and delayed the departure to Baghdad of a new Czechoslovak ambassador to Iraq.

''I salute the robust stance that Czechoslovakia has taken'' in the Persian Gulf crisis, Woerner said.

NATO diplomats have met almost daily since the gulf crisis began, and the alliance's 16 foreign ministers will be briefed next Monday by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker on both the gulf and next weekend Helsinki superpower summit between President George Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev.

SEOUL (SEPT. 6) UPI - The prime ministers of South and North Korea ended the first round of their unprecedented talks Thursday, confirming that they still differ on how hard to push rapprochement to end the 45-year-old division of their country.

Neither side called the outcome a failure, however, and sought agreement rather than picking arguments, spokesmen for the South and the North said.

President Roh Tae-woo hoped for a summit meeting with North Korean President Kim Il-sung and wanted the message relayed to Kim.

South Korean Prime Minister Kang Young-hoon and his Northern counterpart, Yon Hyong-muk, met for two hours at the Intercontinental Hotel in Seoul for the second and last session of their talks.

The meeting ended shortly after noon but official spokesmen took several hours to appear for press briefings.

Kang urged the North to accept an eight-point draft agreement for improved relations presented by the South on Wednesday, but the North continued to emphasize political and military issues, Seoul spokesman Hong Sung-chul said.

The draft agreement proposed that both sides recognize and respect each other's political and social systems, refrain from slander and stop trying to overthrow the other's government..

It also sought efforts to realize free travel, multi-faceted exchanges and cooperation, create military trust and end the arms race and military confrontation between the two Koreas.

The North insisted that the two Koreas not seek separate membership in the United Nations, that annual Team Spirit exercises involving U.S. and South Korean forces be stopped and that Southern dissidents jailed for unauthorized visits to the North be freed, Hong said.

North Korean spokesman An Byong-su said the South continues to advocate a step-by-step approach and placed emphasis on exchanges and cooperation.

''In our view exchanges and cooperation cannot be realized in the current state of acute confrontation,'' An said. ''The basic problem is distrust. To wipe out distrust political and military issues must get priority. Accommodation of our demands will ease confrontation.''

Yon repeated the North Korean position when he and other North Korean delegates paid a call on President Roh, a presidential spokesman said.

Roh met Yon alone before meeting the other Northern officials and stressed that a South-North Korea summit meeting would be most important in laying the foundation for improved relations and cooperation, the spokesman said.

The Seoul side told the North that separate U.N. membership would not perpetuate Korea's division, the Team Spirit exercises are defensive in nature and cannot be ceased immediately and that the release of jailed dissidents is an internal affair of the South.

An, the Northern spokesman, said both sides agreed to study the U.N. membership question further. He said the North hopes to convene a meeting of experts, composed of two or three officials from each side, in a week or so.

Both Hong and An said they will call on their Red Cross officials to meet soon to push a program of visitor exchanges at an early date.

''There were not many particular agreements produced but the Seoul meeting had definite achievements,'' South spokesman Hong said. ''The two prime ministers met officially for the first time and both sides presented candid views and tried to understand each other.''

''There still are wide differences but at the same time there are many common grounds,'' An, the Northern spokesman said. ''On this basis, I don't hold any pessimistic prospects for the future. In some aspects there were progress and results.''

The North Korean delegation will return home Friday through the truce village of Panmunjom 35 miles north of Seoul.

A second round of ministerial talks will be held in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang Oct. 16-19. Subsequent meetings will take place alternately in the two capitals on dates to be set later.

PARIS (SEPT. 6) UPI - Reza Pahlavi, son of the deposed shah of Iran, said in an interview published Thursday that reconciliation between Iran and Iraq would create a ''Machiavellian couple'' and destabilize the Middle ''uld c

The son of the late Iranian leader condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait in the interview with the Roman Catholic newspaper La Croix. He said Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ''committed a fundamental error and would pay the consequences.''

''If the diplomatic solution does not work, there will be no other solution than quick military action. One must not drag one's feet or risk undergoing another Vietnam.''

Pahlavi said the rise of the Iraqi president was the fault of the Western countries that spent the past 10 years trying to counter the fundamentalist government in Iran.

''Saddam Hussein is the product of Western countries that were trying to check the Iranian menace. But they created a new monster.''

Warning that Saddam must be brought down to secure Middle East peace, Pahlavi questioned whether the military mobilization ''would force Saddam Hussein to retreat or if it would pursue other objectives, notably his upset.''

Pahlavi said true reconciliation between Iran and Iraq would create ''a Machiavellian couple'' working for ''destabilization of the region.''

(SEPT. 6) UPI - The State Department says it has only sketchy information on the reported wounding of an American man in the capital of occupied Kuwait. The man reportedly was shot while trying to evade capture by Iraqi troops who were rounding up Americans. U-S diplomats in the Persian Gulf say American embassies in Kuwait and Iraq are trying to locate the man. .

In China, Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Taha Ramadan was shown on state television today meeting with China's vice premier in Beijing . Officials say he might also talk with Premier Li Peng. A Chinese spokeswoman says the talks with Chinese leaders will focus on the Persian Gulf crisis and ''the presence of foreign forces in Arab territories.'' .

The Foreign Ministry spokeswoman also hinted strongly that China might send emergency humanitarian aid to Iraq.

President Bush goes on the campaign trail today, traveling to Kansas and then to Florida to drum up support for G-O-P candidates. It's his first trip aboard the new Air Force One, a state-of-the-art Boeing 747 jumbo jet. His second trip on the plane comes tomorrow when he leaves for Finland for a weekend summit with Mikhail Gorbachev.

More bad news for NASA. The shuttle Columbia, scheduled to blast off today on a long-delayed astronomy mission, instead is grounded by another fuel leak. High levels of dangerous hydrogen gas were detected in the engine room yesterday, less than eight hours before launch. The crew is to fly back to Houston today.

Health Secretary Louis Sullivan says there's a lot that individual people can do to make the 1990's the ''decade of prevention.'' He released the nation's 298 health goals for the year 2000. LONDON (SEPT. 6) UPI - A woman who was among more than 300 Britons freed from Iraq over the weekend Thursday lambasted what she said was British officials' complacency in the early days of the invasion.

The former hostage, Kirsty Norman, a British citizen who worked in Kuwait, said in a letter to The Times of London that poor advice given by British Embassy staff in Kuwait allowed Britons to be rounded up ''like rabbits'' by Iraqi troops.

''I feel a terrible despair for those left behind,'' Norman said. ''Their situation is bad enough without being compounded by what my husband and I regard as British official complacency.''

About 2,600 Britons remain in Iraq and Kuwait, while efforts continue to secure their release. They are among Westerners being held as shields against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force deployed in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf.

The Foreign Office responded only to parts of Norman's letter, saying in a statement that the volunteers who had helped the embassy with coordination during the invasion were ''courageous people'' and had worked well under pressure.

Norman's letter was the first detailed account of the lack of coordination and poor information provided by Western embassies in Kuwait during the days following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 in a land and oil dispute.

Similar complaints have been made others who escaped on their own initiative from Kuwait.

Norman said escape from Kuwait was possible for several days after the invasion by driving along the main roads to Saudi Arabia. Swiss citizens in Kuwait used the route, and drove openly across Kuwait to ''gather information,'' she said.

But British Embassy staff advised Britons to remain hidden in their homes in Kuwait City, ''like frightened rabbits,'' Norman said. At the same, consular officials had been dispatched to border crossings to register fleeing British citizens, she said.

Britain also told its nationals to give themselves up to Iraqis, following an order from Baghdad that they assemble at hotels in Kuwait City. Americans were told not to comply with the edict, and Britain subsequently reversed its position.

Norman said she was taken into custody by Iraqi soldiers during her own dash across the desert made 2 1/2 weeks after the invasion.

Her husband in England found out shortly after her capture that she had been interned in Iraq, when a released Austrian hostage told him the news. But she said the Foreign Office had sent a letter only this week saying she was staying with friends in Kuwait.

By then she was already home, having arrived with more than 300 other women and children early Sunday after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein began releasing Western women and children.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk says he will attend the Cambodian peace talks in Jakarta, Indonesia. He answered an urgent plea from President Suharto, averting a collapse of the talks aimed at discussing a U-N plan to end Cambodia's 11-year-old conflict. .

Sihanouk said he will NOT participate directly in the talks, but will work with the representatives of his three-party coalition. His son says the resistance leader will arrive Sunday from Beijing. Officials say a starting date will be announced soon for the talks, which were initially set to begin yesterday.

Another oil spill occurred in the Arthur Kill waterway between New York City and New Jersey. HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev plan to meet for at least five hours Sunday in their summit in the Finnish capital under the cloud of the Persian Gulf crisis.

''This summit has all the majibgs of a success,'' Finnish President Mauno Koivisto said. ''It is likely that their views will converge.''

The summit was hastily scheduled amid the crisis provoked by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

The Soviet Union has joined with the United States in calling for Iraq's immediate withdrawal from Kuwait. Moscow also cut off arms shipments to its one-time close ally and is supporting international sanctions against Iraq, buthas refused to participate in a naval blockade or the international military presence in the region.

Finland's foreign ministry said both Bush and Gorbachev were to arrive in Helsinki Saturday, Bush at about mid-day and Gorbachev later Saturday afternoon. Bush was to lunch with Koivisto on his arrival, while Gorbachev was to dine with the Finnish president Saturday evening.

Meetings Sunday between the two superpower leaders were expected to begin at 9 a.m. in Finland's Presidential Palace and were set to last at least five hours, broken by lunch, the foreign ministry said.

Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze were also to be in Helsinki for the talks, a ministry spokesman said.

Baker and Shevardnadze are to arrive in the Finnish capital Saturday. Foreign ministry officials said it had been ''suggested'' the two meet Saturday evening for brief negotiations as a run-up to Sunday's summit.

An entourage of more than 600 U.S. and 550 Soviet officials and technicians were in Helsinki to make arrangements for the summit - the biggest international event to take place in the Finnish capital since the 1975 Helsinki conference on Cooperation and Security in Europe.

Finnish officials said it was unclear if Bush and Gorbachev would hold separate news conferences Sunday or meet with reporters together and issue a joint statement.

As of Thursday, some 2,000 reporters had sought accreditation to the Helsinki summit taking place in the shadow of the Persian Gulf crisis and following a visit to Moscow by Iraq's Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz.

Both presidents were expected to return home following Sunday afternoon's news conference.

Departing from traditional Finnish reticence in commenting on international affairs, Koivisto lashed out at Iraq Wednesday night in a television interview in which he said Iraq was bellicose and had squandered its resources.

''Iraq's natural resources have been wasted in the eight-year war against Iran, in which Iraq also attacked,'' Koivisto said, adding Iraqi oil revenues had been used to buy weapons rather than improve the lot of the Iraqi nation.

Finland, a former Grand Duchy of the Russian czars, has had a special relationship with all post-war Soviet administrations and their leaders and remains the only Western country to maintain a Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance with the Soviet Union, despite having fought two bloody wars with Moscow.

As such, Finland - which shares an 800-mile border with the Soviet Union - has been a trusted confidant and economic partner of the Kremlin, with an open door to the Soviet leadership even in the coldest periods after World War II.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The National Marine Fisheries Service announced Thursday it would launch a formal study to determine whether four species of salmon in the Pacific Northwest warrant protection under the Endangered Species Act.

The decision by agency chief William Fox clears the first hurdle for a petition by several conservation groups to classify salmon runs on the Columbia and Snake rivers as threatened or endangered.

In making the announcement Thursday, the fisheries service said it ''has determined that the petition presents substantial scientific information indicating that the listings may be warranted.''

The fisheries service, an agency of the Commerce Department, now has nine months to determine whether such a listing is warranted and an additional year to decide if the fish should actually be placed under federal protection.

Some in the Northwest, including Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., have suggested the salmon petition could generate regional acrimony rivaling the dispute over logging restrictions to protect the northern spotted owl, listed as a threatened species in June.

At issue for the salmon is the future use of the Columbia River system, a network of streams valuable not only for its rich fisheries but as an important source of hydroelectric power, transportation, irrigation, flood control and recreation.

Calling for a General Accounting Office study of the salmon in July, Packwood said, ''The Endangered Species Act could fundamentally alter the ability of federal agencies to manage the river system for all its resource uses.''

The petition seeks to protect the native coho salmon of the lower Columbia River, which divides Oregon from Washington state, plus the spring, summer and fall runs of the chinook salmon on the Snake River, which joins the Columbia in southeastern Washington.

Sponsors of the petition, led by the conservation groups Oregon Trout and American Rivers, claimed these four salmon populations face extinction from over-fishing, hydropower dams and water diversions for irrigation.

The fisheries service recently accepted a similar petition filed by the Shoshone-Bannock Indian tribe in Idaho to protect the native sockeye salmon run on the Snake River.

Historically, more than 11 million salmon and steelhead trout swam in the Columbia River basin each year, but those runs have now dwindled to 2.5 million fish, the groups said.

In addition, runs of entirely wild origin comprise just 2 percent of their former levels, with the remainder of the fishery based on hatchery-bred salmon less genetically diverse and less adapted to these rivers, environmentalists argue.

If the salmon is listed as threatened or endangered, the federal government would be barred from taking any action that could jeopardize survival of the species and would be required to devise a recovery plan for the fish.

Such a plan could include restricted salmon fishing, higher stream levels, increased fish passages around dams, restored spawning grounds and better hatchery practices.

In deciding to accept the latest salmon petition, the fisheries service chief determined it was founded on scientific grounds and deserving of further government research to determine if a listing is warranted.

WARSAW, POLAND (SEPT. 6) UPI - Laotian students in Europe seeking independence for their country vowed Thursday to continue their struggle following the conclusion of a 39-day protest in three European capitals.

''We really want our country to be free and independent,'' Bounthanh Thammauong, a representative of the Laotian Students Organization Fighting for Independence and Democracy, said in an interview.

The organization of Laotian students studying in Europe, formed earlier this year, staged a protest demonstration in front of the Laotian embassy in Warsaw which lasted from July 19 through Aug. 26.

More than 40 Laotians studying in Poland, Czechoslovakia and the Soviet Union joined in the protest. Demonstrations also were held in in front of Laotian embassies in Prague and Paris.

''We demanded the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Laos, democracy and pluralism,'' Bounthamh said.

The protesters refused to negotiate with the ambassador, who, they said, was not authorized to guarantee their demands, and sought to meet with a representative of the government.

''We could not ask a government representative to come all the way to Warsaw to talk to students. It was simply not possible,'' said Khouanephet Sayarath, the embassy's second secretary.

During talks with the protesters, embassy officials stressed there was no Vietnamese military presence in Laos and democracy was guaranteed, although the country is not yet strong enough to have a multiparty system.

When no understanding was reached, the students suspended their protest, which included a hunger strike by six demonstrators, but vowed to continue their protest in a different form in the near future.

Bounthamh said the organization wants an international commission to investigate the situation in Laos.

For 39 days the protesters camped in 15 tents in front of the embassy, receiving support and help from people living in the neighborhood.

''They have caused us a lot of trouble shouting threats over a loudspeaker and blocking the gate,'' Khouanephet said.

The students pelted the white embassy building with ink and painted demands for freedom on the fence.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Chicago Mercantile Exchange has proposed a reduction in the daily trading limits for the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index futures contract from 30 points to 20 points.

The Board of Governors approved the proposal Wednesday and will submit the plan to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

The maximum 20-point limit, either higher or lower than the previous day's closing level, is equivalent to about 150 points in the Dow Jones Industrial Average on the New York Stock Exchange.

The CME said there would be no change in the opening price limits of five S&P points during the first 10 minutes of trading as well as the interim circuit breaker during which the market may not fall more than 12 points for 30 minutes.

While the new 20-point limit would not stop trading, it would prevent a rise or fall above that level during the trading day.

The CME said the modification does not change its endorsement of a coordinated circuit breaker rule across the stock, futures and options market.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - U.S. diplomats in Iraq and Kuwait Thursday investigated a report that Iraqi troops shot and wounded an American man in Kuwait as Iraq pursued an international diplomatic campaign and considered giving President Bush the chance to appear on Iraqi television.

The reported shooting incident was expected to raise tension at a time when Iraq is pushing a diplomatic campaign, with envoys in the Soviet Union and China, and another mission planned for Iran.

''We do not have full details (about the shooting) yet,'' one Western diplomat in the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain said. ''We've heard so far that the man was trying to avoid arrest by Iraqi troops, who then shot him near his home. We don't know the full extent of his injuries.''

The diplomat could not say how the unidentified man was injured and said Iraqi authorities were believed to have transferred him to an Iraqi military hospital. American diplomats in Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait sought details on the reported shooting.

President Bush has said he would hold Iraqi President Saddam Hussein responsible for the welfare of U.S. and other Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, being held to guard against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force in the region.

In Paris, 153 former hostages including 105 French women and children arrived at Orly Airport Thursday from the Jordanian capital of Amman aboard a special Air France jetliner. The Foreign Ministry said those aboard also included 28 British citizens and 12 Americans as well as three Belgians, two Spaniards, two Italians and a West German.

Iraq, meanwhile, was calling up more reservists. Baghdad Radio said reserve officers and men born in 1953 had been called up for ''active duty.'' But Cairo Radio said Iraqi reservist officers involved in ''chemical warfare had not been called up'' to boost Baghdad's 1 million-strong army, parts of which are facing U.S.-led troops across the Saudi border.

India, China and Iran indicated Thursday they may supply Iraq with food and medicine despite U.N. sanctions imposed after Baghdad invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

The United States has said U.N. sanctions against Baghdad allow for the dispatch of emergency food and medicine on humanitarian grounds, but has said there is no emergency yet and no shipments should go through.

The official Iraqi News Agency meanwhile quoted Iraqi Information Minister Latif Jassim as saying his country was ready to send television crews to Washington to let Bush address Iraq on both state-run television channels.

''(We are prepared) to pave the way before President George Bush to speak to the Iraqi people,'' INA said.

The Iraqi move came in response to complaints from Bush that while U.S. television gave Saddam's point of view full coverage, Iraqi television had not given the U.S. leader similar access.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, who met Wednesday with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, Thursday described his talks in Moscow as ''frank.'' He said unlike Western nations, Baghdad's former main arms supplier was willing to listen to Iraq's point of view.

While Aziz prepared to head later this week to Tehran for talks with the leaders of Iraq's former Persian Gulf war foe, Iran, Iraqi Deputy Premier Taha Yassin Ramadan arrived Thursday in Beijing to talk with Chinese officials.

Jordan's King Hussein, whose small country neighbors Iraq and who has been leading efforts to persuade Arab states to take a soft line against Saddam's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait, was in Baghdad Thursday.

But King Hussein has been unable to persuade the majority of Arab states to swing behind Baghdad and Saddam, in a defiant address broadcast by Iraqi television and radio Wednesday, described the standoff as a fight between ''Islam and the devil.''

Saddam called on the people of Egypt and Saudi Arabia - countries that have backed U.S.-led efforts to isolate Iraq - to overthrow their leaders and join the Arab holy crusade against the ''infidels and their lackeys.''

Egyptian newspaper played down Saddam's statement.

The semi-official daily Al Ahram said the Iraqi leader ''continued to be stubborn in spite of the call of all international powers to listen to the voice of reason, and withdraw (his troops) from Kuwait to avoid war.''

Another government-supervised daily, Al Akhbar, described thiro daily Al Gomhuria called the speech a desperate attempt to divert the feelings of Iraqis from their ownsuffering.

The United States described Saddam's call for Egyptians and Saudis to overthrow leaders as a ''sign of desperation.'' One senior Western diplomat in the gulf state of Bahrain Thursday described Iraq's diplomatic activity before President Bush's meeting in Helsinki Sunday with Gorbachev as an ''attempt to delay a U.S. military strike that would undoubtedly topple him from power, and lead to his trial as a war criminal.''

The diplomat said both the Soviet Union and China, while supporting U.N. sanctions against Iraq, were against a preemptive U.S. strike against Saddam because that might give the United States a long-term foothold in the area and enhance its regional influence at their expense.

''But there is no question of Beijing and Moscow allowing Saddam to get away with his invasion of Kuwait,'' the diplomat said.

In other developments:

-Secretary of State James Baker was reported on his way to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Europe before attending the Helsinki superpower summit. Baker was to meet Saudi and exiled Kuwaiti leaders in Saudi Arabia, where reports said he would ask them to contribute more cash for the upkeep of the U.S-led multinational force in the oil-rich kingdom.

-Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady traveled to South Korea and planned to go on to Japan, Paris and London to discuss cooperative efforts in the gulf, Saudi defense assistance and help for nations that are financially strapped by the economic sanctions.

-U.S. ally Israel, which has maintained a low profile through the crisis, reportedly secured the delivery from the United States of surface-to-air Patriot missiles. The deal was made during Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy's current visit to Washington and was expected to enhance the Jewish state's defense against Iraqi missile attack.

-In India, a government spokesman said his country had asked the United Nations for permission to send food and medicine to Iraq to alleviate the plight of some 100,000 Indian nationals stranded in occupied Kuwait.

The United States and its Western allies say there is no need yet to soften sanctions on Iraq and allow food into the country on humanitarian grounds.

The Indian spokesman said while Western hostages were for the most part staying in five-star hotels, Indian and other Asian expatriate workers were lining up daily for food. The spokesman said a shortage of medicines had halted admissions to Kuwaiti hospitals.

The spokesman also accused the West of double standards in the sanctions on Iraq, pointing out the United States and Britain technically broke a U.N. economic embargo against Iraq by chartering Iraqi airliners to get out women and children.

The British Foreign Office said a convoy of British and Irish women and children arrived in Baghdad early Thursday from Kuwait and it was hoped they would leave later for the Jordanian capital of Amman.

Saddam pledged to free Western women and children hostages while keeping their male relatives. But Iraq's ban on foreign airlines has meant a shortage of seats on flights to Amman, the only international destination for Iraqi Airways planes facing the embargo.

A plane with 150 British, Italian and Spanish women and children left Baghdad for Amman Wednesday. Other flights brought 57 British, 53 American four Australian, and five Canadians to freedom in London and Newark International Airport in New Jersey.

Another 300 British women and children were given visas for home.

U.N. officials in Amman called for international aid to help confront the plight of some 60,000 mostly destitute Asian workers from Iraq and Kuwait trapped without adequate food, water or shelter in the desert along the Iraq-Jordanian border.

Jordan said it was unable to cope with the refugee influx and has been allowing only 20,000 refugees in a day. Fights have erupted as meager water supplies are distributed and health officials have warned of cholera and typhoid epidemics.

The European Community has pledged $20 million in aid and the U.N. has secured another $20 million, but the officials stressed more was needed.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (SEPT. 6) UPI - Engineers drained the shuttle Columbia's fuel tank Thursday in NASA's latest disappointment and studied preliminary data indicating the fuel leak that grounded the ship again might involve a faulty pump.

If so, Columbia and its seven-man crew could be ready for yet another launch attempt by the end of next week.

But NASA officials stressed that engineers would not get back into Columbia's engine compartment until Friday and that no final decisions would be made until the leak is located and a course of action is determined.

Columbia's countdown to launch Thursday was interrupted when high levels of dangerous hydrogen gas were detected in the ship's engine room about 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, about an hour after fueling began.

Engineers immediately began trying to isolate the leak and early Thursday, officials said preliminary data indicated the problem could involve one of three hydrogen recirculation pumps in the engine compartment.

''They think it's the recirc package on the engines,'' said an engineer who requested anonymity. ''When they brought the recirc pumps up last night, they got high levels of hydrogen a couple of times. All their data is indicating it has to be someplace in the pump package or the pipes leading to the pump package.''

Engineers planned to open Columbia's engine room Friday to begin inspections. If the pump package is found to be at fault, the shuttle could be rescheduled for launch in about a week.

''It's seven days. That's just replacing it and doing minimal retest,'' the engineer said.

Columbia's seven-member crew had planned to spend 10 days in space using a $150 million high-tech observatory in Columbia's payload bay to study X-rays and ultraviolet light emitted by stars, galaxies and other energetic enigmas in the cosmos.

Instead, commander Vance Brand, 59, co-pilot Guy Gardner, 42, John ''Mike'' Lounge, 44, Robert Parker, 53, Jeffrey Hoffman, 45, and civilian astronomers Ronald Parise, 39, and Samuel Durrance, 46, began flying back to Houston Thursday to continue training at the Johnson Space Center.

''The Columbia crew is returning to Houston for a short stint of simulator training,'' Brand said in a statement. ''We hope that the hydrogen leak can be found and fixed to give us a chance to launch next week. But whenever Columbia is ready, we will be ready, too.''

The mission was originally scheduled for 1986 but was delayed by the Challenger disaster. It was delayed again May 29 by a fuel leak officials thought had been fixed by replacing a fuel line fitting.

The latest delay was a hard blow to NASA, which has come under intense criticism because of a defect in the Hubble Space Telescope, doubts about the feasibility of the proposed space station Freedom and fuel leaks that have grounded the shuttle program since May.

''It continues the crisis in confidence in NASA,'' said John Pike, a space policy analyst with the Federation of American Scientists in Washington. ''It's the latest piece of bad news from NASA rather than NASA showing that despite the bad news they can still deliver. They need to start to put things in the win column. It is more bad news when they need some good news for a change.''

Columbia's delayed flight in May was followed by a similar leak on the shuttle Atlantis in July, forcing the cancellation of a secret military mission.

Officials traced the leaks to faulty seals in a 17-inch piece of equipment used to attach the shuttles to their external fuel tanks. Engineers thought they had repaired Columbia by replacing the ''disconnect'' assembly with a new one from the new shuttle Endeavour.

But launch director Robert Sieck canceled Columbia's tense countdown Wednesday when sensors detected hydrogen gas leaking into the ship's engine room shortly after engineers began pumping a half-million gallons of rocket fuel into the external tank.

''The entire team is disappointed. We were looking forward to going flying '' Crippen said.

Sensors detected hydrogen at levels of about 6,000 parts per million - a concentration of 0.6 percent - which is about 10 times higher than the allowable limit of 600 parts per million.

''I really thought we were going to launch today,'' said project scientist Edward Weiler. ''We really thought those 12 years of waiting were over.''

The space agency hoped to follow Columbia's flight by launching the shuttle Discovery next month on a critical mission to fire the Ulysses solar probe to the sun.

CLARK AIR BASE, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 6) UPI - The United States will consult President Corazon Aquino's government if it decides to mount combat operations in the Peson Gulf from bases in the Philippines, U.S. officials said Thursday.

The officials also said the 41,000 U.S. personnel and dependents have been alerted against possible attacks by communist guerrillas expected between now and the resumption of talks on the renewal of U.S. basing rights.

Philippine officials said Thursday the talks are set for Sept. 17- 21. U.S. Embassy spokesman Stanley Schrager said the date was accepted by the U.S. sidel.

The leases on six installations, including Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval complex, expire in September 1991.

''Right now, its business as usual,'' said Col. Steve Richey, director for plans at the U.S.-run Clark Air Base, headquarters of the 13th Air Force base, 50 miles north of Manila.

He told a news briefing that the military buildup in the Persian Gulf following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2 was mainly funneled through Europe, but that the Philippine bases remain resupply and transhipment points.

''If we begin to mount combat operations, we will have to consult the Philippines,'' said Richey. He said this meant ''actual employment of resources at Clark in support'' of a war effort.

He said the 1947 military bases agreement does not require consultations on normal operations.

Philippine officials concerned about the fate of 50,000 Filipino workers in Kuwait and 3,000 in Iraq have stressed that the use of the U.S. facilities as a staging area for military operations in the Gulf should be the subject of consultations.

Clark and nearby Subic Bay are the oldest and largest U.S. facilities overseas and regarded as vital in projecting American military power in the Western Pacific and Indian Ocean.

MIAMI (SEPT. 6) UPI - Tropical Storm Isidore churned in open Atlantic waters with top winds of 60 mph and forecasters said Thursday the season's ninth storm could strengthen into a hurricane by the end of the day.

At 6 a.m. EDT Isidore was centered near latitude 12.8 north, longitude 36.3 west, or about 800 miles west-southwest of the Cape Verde Islands, said Lixion Avila, hurricane specialist at the National Hurricane Center.

The storm was moving west-northwest at near 14 mph, and Avila predicted it would continue that motion for the next day.

Maximum sustained winds were near 60 mph.

Isidore could develop into a hurricane with sustained winds of at least 74 mph by Thursday or Friday, Avila said.

Isidore, the ninth named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, developed from a tropical depression Wednesday. Three storms - Bertha, Diana and Gustav - have grown to hurricane strength this season.

Forecasters said the nine-storm total was two or three more storms than average for this time of year, but the impact of those storms has been minimal. The season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - An energy industry consortium has agreed to draw up plans for an offshore oil port that would ease supertanker traffic in Galveston Bay, a spokesman said Thursday.

The decision was made during a meeting Wednesday between consortium members in Houston, said a spokesman for Phillips Petroleum Co., which helped organize the group of supporters.

The proposed "TexPort" would be capable of moving two million barrels of imported oil a day from foreign tankers to undersea pipelines that already exist in the Gulf of Mexico.

Tentatively slated to be 27 miles off Freeport, Texas, the port would cut down on oil tanker traffic in Galveston Bay and the Houston Ship Channel. Supporters say the offshore port would lower the risk of accidents and oil spills.

Spills would pose less of an environmental hazard because cleanup crews would have a 27-mile buffer zone to contain the oil before it reached shore, supporters say.

Representatives from 18 energy companies agreed to proceed with plans for the port after reviewing a $100,000 consultant's study that analyzed the projected revenue for the venture and the likely demand for its services.

George Minter, a spokesman for Phillips in Bartlesville, Okla., refused to discuss the study's findings or to name the consultant. He also refused to identify the companies participating in the venture, saying some might drop out and others might join before construction ever begins.

Minter also declined to say how much the companies have invested in the port proposal so far. The consortium, which includes some foreign firms, hopes to make a final decision by early 1991, he said.

The Galveston Bay Foundation, a citizens group dedicated to protecting the bay's estuaries, issued a statement urging energy companies to continue work on the port proposal.

"The foundation is extremely interested in the current investigation by Phillips and other oil companies," the foundation said. "Development of an offshore oil terminal would be one step toward (reducing) the tremendous risk for catastrophic damage from oil spills in Galveston Bay."

A June 8 fire and explosion aboard the tanker Mega Borg spilled nearly four million gallons of oil in the Gulf of Mexico off the Texas coast. About 700,000 gallons of oil were dumped into Galveston Bay in the July 28 collision of a tanker and a string of barges.

Several Gulf states considered building superports during the 1970s but the only one constructed was the Louisiana Offshore Oil Port, 20 miles south of the barrier island of Grand Isle.

SIDON, LEBANON (SEPT. 6) UPI - One person was killed and four others wounded Thursday in a firefight between rival militiamen in a southern village, security sources and police said.

Militiamen from the pro-Syrian Popular Liberation Army of Mustafa Saad and the Iranian-backed Islamic Grouping exchanged machinegun fire in the village of Majdalyoun, east of the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut, police said.

One militiamen was killed and four others wounded, police said.

Security sources said contacts were made to contain the incident and restore stability in the area.

The Islamic Grouping, which has military presence in Sidon, competes with PLA and other leftist parties which control the city.

BEIJING, CHINA (SEPT. 6) UPI - A key aide to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein discussed the Persian Gulf crisis with senior Chinese officials

Thursday and China strongly hinted it may comply with any Iraqi requests for emergency humanitarian aid.

Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan, believed to be one of Saddam's most intimate and trusted advisers, arrived Thursday with a 30-member delegation aboard an Iraqi special charter flight.

The visit, which had been rumored for some time, was expected to last one or two days during which Ramadan hoped to meet with Premier Li Peng, an Iraqi diplomat said.

Ramadan briefed Vice Premier Wu Xueqian on ''Iraq's position on the gulf situation,'' the official Xinhua news agency said without further explanation.

Wu responded by reiterating China's desire for Iraq's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait and for a peaceful, Arab-brokered solution to the crisis, Xinhua said.

Wu ''also stressed that China opposes the resorting to force by the big powers, which will worsen and complicate the gulf situation,'' Xinhua added.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Li Jinhua refused to discuss Ramadan's itinerary, telling reporters only that talks would focus on ''the developments in the gulf and the presence of foreign forces in Arab territories and waters.''

The Iraqi diplomat declined to say if Ramadan planned to discuss Beijing's sales of arms to Baghdad. China has sold billions of dollars of weapons to Iraq in recent years, but suspended the shipments following Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of neighboring Kuwait.

But while China is unlikely to violate the international embargo on arms sales to Iraq, the Foreign Ministry spokeswoman broadly hinted that China may view shipments of food and medicine as ''humanitarian'' aid permitted under U.N. resolutions.

''U.N. Security Council resolution 661 clearly stipulates that the embargo against Iraq doesn't include supplies intended strictly for medical purposes and foodstuffs in humanitarian circumstances,'' Li said.

''This point should be firmly implemented,'' she said repeatedly.

Li declined comment on whether China had specific plans to send food and medicine to Iraq.

Western diplomats expresreh surprise at the China visit, but noted reports from the Middle East indicating that Ramadan would discuss bilateral aid questions and that members of the Iraqi Agriculture Ministry were included in the delegation.

''It seems like China may not be in accord with the majority on this one '' a Western diplomat said. ''We also are not entirely sure if any of these people (the delegation) wear military uniforms.''

The ''foreign forces'' Iraq and China will discuss are the Western warships and tens of thousands of ground troops - mostly American - authorized by the U.N. Security Council to enforce an economic and military embargo of Iraq.

As one of five permanent Security Council members, China has a key role to play in the gulf crisis, although Beijing has exercised its influence so discreetly that some diplomats wonder if it is uncertain how to respond.

Beijing has repeatedly criticized the deployment of U.S. troops on Saudi soil even while complying with an international boycott against Iraq.

China's deliberately low profile on the issue may have driven Ramadan to Beijing in a last-ditch search for support, a Western diplomat said.

''Iraq has no other possibility. China is the only one they can look to because it opposes the presence of the superpowers,'' the diplomat said.

''They may be hoping China will protect them in the U.N. if something really nasty happens,'' he said.

The Soviet Union, formerly Iraq's leading arms supplier, has announced it will not send troops to the region but that it does not oppose the U.S. decision to do so.

China has enjoyed good relations with both Kuwait and Iraq, receiving much needed foreign investment from the former and selling weapons to the latter.

China Thursday repeated its position on the crisis by deploring the invasion, demanding an unconditional Iraqi pullout and supporting a peaceful settlement under resolutions passed by the U.N. Security Council.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - Magnetic resonance imaging appears to be a more accurate way of detecting prostate cancer than the more commonly used ultrasound technique, a study showed Thursday.

The study by researchers at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital found magnetic resonance imaging, or MRI, was accurate 69 percent of the time in detecting prostate cancer in men. That compares with the 58 percent accuracy rate for ultrasound.

However, the study noted that ultrasound test costs between $150 and $400 per test, while MRI costs $700 to $1,200.

Prostate cancer is the most common type of cancer in men, claiming 30,000 lives a year. The American Cancer Society estimates 106,000 new cases will be detected this year.

The disease is most common in men older than 65, with black males at greatest risk. The use of imaging technology to find the cancer is critical in determining the best treatment.

The 15-month study, published in Thursday's editioon of the New England Journal of Medicine, involved 230 patients whose cancer was believed to be confined to the prostate, a small gland under the bladder. The patients were examined with the MRI and ultrasound techniques in order to determine how widespread their cancer was.

Matthew Rifkin, a radiology professor at Jefferson who coordinated the study, said doctors still are encouraged to use ultrasound to detect the presence of cancer first. Then, MRI can be employed to determine how widespread the malignant growth is.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - The State Department says its information on the reported shooting of an American citizen in Kuwait is sketchy. U-S diplomats in the Persian Gulf region are still trying to locate the man... who reportedly was wounded while trying to avoid capture during a roundup of Americans by Iraqi troops in Kuwait City. President Bush has said he holds Iraqi President Saddam Hussein responsible for the welfare of all U-S and other Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait.

Iraq is continuing its diplomatic bid to gain support before a U-S- Soviet Summit on Sunday. Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz is preparing for a visit later this week to Iran, Iraq's former Gulf war enemy. And Iraqi Deputy Premier Ramadan arrived in Beijing today to meet with Chinese officials.

President Bush travels to Topeka, Kansas, and Tallahassee, Florida, today to attend two G-O-P fund-raisers. Aides say the president will address the need for Congress to reach agreement on a deficit-cutting budget and reaffirm Washington's committment in the Persian Gulf region. Bush will travel today for the first time aboard the new Air Force One, a modified Boeing 747.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 6) UPI - A national poll of Soviet citizens found that Russian republic leader Boris Yeltsin has double the approval rating as Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, the independent Interfax news agency reported Thursday.

Interfax said the results of the poll by the national public opinion center were compiled July 13 but have still not been released in any of the official newspapers.

The poll of 2,680 people found 61.3 percent fully approved of the work of Yeltsin, the populist who was kicked out of his Communist Party posts three years ago but came back to be elected head of the huge Russian republic earlier this year.

Gorbachev, bedeviled by Yeltsin since 1987 when the then Moscow party boss began criticizing the pace of Gorbachev's reforms, received only 28.5 percent approval, Interfax said.

About 40 percent of those surveyed said they ''don't quite approve'' of Gorbachev, while Yeltsin and his more radical reform ideas met with disapproval from 21 percent.

In a question about the most popular politician in the country, Yeltsin came out on top again with 34.2 percent, followed by Gorbachev with only 10.2 percent.

The margin of error and other details of the poll's methodology were not given.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Crude oil prices shot up more than a $1 a barrel and gasoline nearly three cents a gallon in early trading Thursday as oil markets reacted to news of Iraqi troops shooting an American in Kuwait.

"The market seems to have reacted to the shooting of an American in Kuwait. It's caused people to believe there will be some sort of retalition," said Robert Baker, senior energy analyst with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

U.S. diplomats in Iraq and Kuwait were investigating reports that Iraqi troops shot and wounded an American man in Kuwait. "We do not have full details (about the shooting) yet," one Western diplomat in the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain said. "We've heard so far that the man was trying to avoid arrest by Iraqi troops, who then shot him near his home. We don't know the full extent of his injuries."

The diplomat could not say how the unidentified man was injured and said Iraqi authorities were believed to have transferred him to an Iraqi military hospital.

President Bush has said he would hold Iraqi President Saddam Hussein responsible for the welfare of U.S. and other Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, being held to guard against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force in the region.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery was up $1.13 over Wednesday's close to $30.90 a barrel in morning trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery had gained 2.53 cents to 94.8 cents a gallon after trading as high as 95.75 cents a gallon. Home heating oil added 3.83 cents to 87.20 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - had climbed $1 to $28.70 a barrel, adding to its Wednesday rise of $1.10 a barrel. Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent was up 90 cents to $32.45 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI had gained $1.15 to $30.90 a barrel.

MANILA (SEPT. 6) UPI - Rear Adm. Thomas Mercer, commander of U.S. forces in the Philippines, warned American military and civilian personnel Thursday to be wary of attacks by communist guerrillas.

He said Americans have been targeted for ''kidnapping and assassination attacks'' by the New Peoples Army. ''Every individual is a potential target,'' said Mercer.

''They certainly want to get the highly visible people first and maybe American males before women and children,'' he said.

The Philippine army also announced that a veteran of two coup attempts against President Corazon Aquino's government has surrendered, saying he was tired of fighting the government and was worried about his family.

U.S. officials announced Wednesday night the indefinite suspension of all off-post leave and non-essential travel for some 41,000 U.S. troops, defense department employees and dependents.

Air Force Col. Ron Rand said the action was prompted by reports the guerrillas would strike at the resumption of talks on the extension of the 1947 treaty covering the six U.S. facilities in the Philippines. The installations include Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval complex, largest and oldest U.S. installations overseas.

The pact expires in 1991 and Philippine officials announced Thursday the second round of talks will be held Sept. 17-21 in Manila.

At least 10 U.S. nationals, including Col. James Rowe, a decorated Vietnam War veteran, have been killed in the Philippines since October 1987 in attacks blamed on the NPA.

The 19,000-strong NPA has been trying for 21 years to set up a Marxist state in the former U.S. colony. It considers the bases an instrument of neocolonial dependency and an infringement on Philippine sovereignty.

Washington agreed after the first round of talks on the bases to provide surplus materials from installations it plans to close in the U.S. and in Europe.

Thursday, Defense Secretary Fidel Ramos asked the United States to include engineering equipment among the materials it plans to give the Philippines in exchange for using the bases.

Ramos said the military needs the equipment to rebuild roads and bridges destroyed by the July 16 earthquake and by the landslides caused by monsoon rains.

Last week, Aquino's administration began talks with a broad range of groups proposing a cease-fire with the NPA as a step toward national reconciliation. Aquino agreed in principle to a limited truce in Manila and in areas devastated by the July 16 earthquake.

The National Democratic Front, the NPA's political arm, said in a statement Thursday ''the proposals coming from the Aquino government so far betray insincerity.''

The NDF said the Aquino government must negotiate seriously on such subjects as dismantling the U.S. bases, reassertng national sovereignty and dignity, solving the debt and oil crises and the long-term economic problems of the Phillipine people, including land reform.

In Bacolod, Brig. Gen. Raymundo Jarque, military commander of Negros island, 300 miles south of Manila, said Capt. Edmundo Malabanjot, 35, surrendered to him Tuesday at his headquarters.

Malabanjot, who belonged to the elite First Scout Ranger Regiment and carried a $4,000 price for his capture, joined the Aug. 28, 1987, and Dec. 1-9, 1989, coups that nearly topped Aquino.

''I'm tired of the cause, I'm tired of fighting and I'm worried about my family,'' Jarque quoted Malabanjot as saying. He also said Malabanjot told him the rebels lacked civilian support and ammunition to mount another coup.

At least 17 leaders of the August and December coups led by former army Col. Gregorio Honasan have been captured.

Also Thursday, police arrested four students for smearing red paint on a wall at the gate of the U.S. Embassy in Manila during a protest rally by 50 leftist youths demanding the dismantling of the bases.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher and a group of corporate chieftains will tour the Soviet Union next week to discuss bolstering the Soviet's lagging oil production and improving trade.

"There's a tremendous amount to be done," Mosbacher said Thursday at a news briefing on the trip. "They're the biggest oil producer in the world." "There are a lot of new methodologies and a lot of new equipment that's been developed in this country over the last decade," he said.

Soviet oil production has been paralyzed by aging equipment and a choking bureaucracy. But the United States believes it can tap into a new source of energy if it provides the Soviets with a mix of management advice, hardware and pointers on drilling technique. "They're producing all they can now," Mosbacher said. "There's a good chance some of the group might be going to the oil fields."

Fifteen influential business expecutives plan to join Mosbacher on the journey, which starts Saturday and includes a side trip to Helsinki to meet President Bush after his summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. The delegation returns home Sept. 16.

Among the 15 are Lodwrick Cook, chairman of Atlantic Richfield Co.; James Kinnear, president of Texaco Inc., and Chesley Pruet, president of the Pruet Oil Co., of El Dorado, Ark.

Mosbacher said the trip was being planned before and Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, the seizure of the sheikdom's oil fields and the dramatic increase in world petroleum prices. "It didn't pop up because of the Iraq crisis," he said.

Mosbacher also insisted promises of technical and economic aid to the Soviets are not a "quid pro quo" for their cooperation in the U.N.-sanctioned blockade of Iraq. He also said the Soviets could qualify for most favored nation trading status if they liberalize their immigration laws.

"While we are appreciative of the Soviet's attitude and help, this is part of an ongoing relationship," he said, but added: "If they had taken a different attitude, our response wouldn't have been as positive."

Mosbacher also indicated it was difficult to determine, before the journey how the Soviet Union might react on the trade front if war breaks out between the United States and Iraq. "We may get more insight," Mosbacher said. "Right now we think it is a positive mission and not contingent on anything."

SAN ANTONIO (SEPT. 6) UPI - First Federal Savings & Loan Association of San Antonio is one of nine savings and loan institutions nationwide in an experimental program to sell troubled thrifts before they become insolvent it was reported Thursday.

The thrift could be sold within two months under the Accelerated Resolution Program, which the Resolution Trust Corp. announced in July, The San Antonio Light said, quoting "a source close to the institution."

The source said regulators and outside contractors already have been to First Federal to evaluate its financial condition, and that the agency is moving quickly to find buyers. First Federal president Steve Holloway declined to comment.

"I'll need to direct your questions to the Office of Thrift Supervision," Holloway said. The Office of Thrift Supervision runs the pilot program, and the agency's officials could not be reached for comment. Resolution Trust Corp. spokeswoman Kate Spears also declined to comment.

According to testimony in July before the House Committee on Banking, Finance, and Urban Affairs by Office of Thrift Supervision director Timothy Ryan, any thrift involved in the program would be closed and immediately reopened by a buyer under a new name. A Resolution Trust Corp. fact sheet said just one Texas thrift is involved in the quick-sale pilot program.

Regulators hope the program, when expanded, will reduce the cost of the thrift bailout by allowing them to sell the institutions before they develop multimillion-dollar capital shortages.

Kenneth H. Thomas, president of a Miami-based consulting firm, said First Federal fits the Resolution Trust Corp.'s general description of a thrift in the program - a solvent thrift in South-Central Texas, with total assets of between $250 million and $1 billion, that doesn't meet regulatory capital requirements.

San Antonio has just three solvent thrifts that haven't been bailed out or closed by regulators: First Federal, CitySavings and Loan Association and USAA Federal Savings Bank. As of March 31, First Federal had total assets of $731.39 million and total deposits of $474.35 million.

First Federal's equity capital totaled $7.8 million, but just $1.24 million of that is tangible capital, or real money. The rest is considered goodwill, an accounting category that represents the value of the thrfit's name and operating franchise.

First Federal, which was created in 1922 and employs about 200 people, has ten offices in the San Antonio area and in Alice. "They're obviously very under-capitalized" in all three regulatory capital measurements, Thomas told the newspaper.

Thomas said the thrift was solvent as of March 31, but was $9.49 million short of its tangible capital requirements, $13.65 million short of its core capital requirement and $11.7 million short of its risk-based capital requirements.

Thomas said the rules of the pilot program require participating institutions to have stable management and a strong deposit franchise. If successful, the pilot program could be expanded to include 250 other troubled institutions.

GITEGA, BURUNDI (SEPT. 6) UPI - Pope John Paul II, visiting one of Africa's most populous countries, spoke out Thursday against contraception as a way of controlling population growth.

The pontiff said moral responsibility was the sole Christian method of birth control.

''Mastery over fertility must remain a profoundly human thing, as the church requires, expressing the healthy agencies of morality,'' he said.

The pope spoke at an open-air mass attended by about 75,000 people in Gitega, a former capital of Burundi, 60 miles (100 km) east of the present captial, Bujumbura.

Under a cloudless sky, 5,300 feet up in the heavily farmed hills of the tiny central African country, the pope told his congregation that rapid population growth was the responsibility of all.

But the primary responsibility was that of parents, he said, who must have the children they want and are able to sustain.

Burundi, a former Belgian colony 5.3 million people, has an average population density of close on 200 people per square square mile. In practise the density in the arable areas is much higher, as the inhospitable Rift Valley to the east affords poor farming.

It has a population growth rate in excess of three percent a year, and added half a million people to its crowded hills between 1986 and 1989.

But the pope said contraception was not an option for Christians.

''It is true that at present considerable changes are apparent in the way people live, in the relations between men and women,'' he said.

''Christians must not let themselves be dragged along. They must react and possess enlightened moral judgment.'' he said.

Speaking in French, the pope urged Burundians ''to do the maximum to ensure the soil of Burundi can nourish its children.''

''Agriculture, your primary resource, must be developed so that the fields produce more and better, yet without exhausting the soil or degrading it '' he said.

Burundi's fragile, poor economy is almost entirely based on agriculture. The country is over 80 percent dependent on coffee exports for its foreign exchange.

It was through the coffee and tea groves that John Paul drove Thursday morning, climbing 2,000 feet through smsll villages clinging to steep hillsides, where tens of thousands lined the roadside in brightly colored traditional clothes.

The 70-year-old pontiff is on his seventh African visit, which earlier this week took him to neighboring Tanzania, and takes him Friday to Rwanda and Sunday to Ivory Coast in west Africa.

He has repeatedly stressed on this and past trips his belief that contraception in all its forms is wrong.

In Tanzania Tuesday he talked of the ''unspeakable crime of abortion.''

JAKARTA, INDONESIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - Prince Norodom Sihanouk agreed Thursday to an urgent plea from President Suharto and announced he will attend the delayed Cambodian peace talks, averting a collapse of the meeting aimed at discussing a U.N. plan to end the 11-year-old conflict.

And in the Cambodian capital, the government of Hun Sen said Secretary of State James Baker's announcement Wednesday that the United States would open direct talks with Phnom Penh was ''asute.'' A government statement said such talks would help to develop ''a political solution to the Cambodian problem.

Sihanouk spokesmen also have welcomed the U.S. statement.

Sihanouk's decision to accept Suharto's plea to attend peace talks ensured that the talks will at least get off the ground because the Vietnamese-backed Cambodian prime minister, Hun Sen, had refused to show up if Sihanouk did not attend as well. With Sihanouk coming, Hen Sen has made plans to come, too.

''My father has saved the Jakarta meeting,'' Sihanouk's son, Norodom Ranariddh, said Thursday. The younger prince initally had been sent by his father to attend the talks.

Ranariddh said Sihanouk would be arriving from Beijing Sunday. Hun Sen is scheduled to arrive Friday evening, a spokesman for his delegation said.

''We hope that this opens the way now for the talks,'' said a relieved Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas, who still does not have a starting date for the fourth round of peace talks held in Jakarta.

Alatas, who also co-hosted the unsuccessful international Paris conference on Cambodia last year, said he would announce the date of the inaugural meeting as soon as he has all the arrival times. It was initially scheduled to start Wednesday.

''Meanwhile, I will continue to have informal meetings with those who are already here,'' Alatas said.

Those include Ranariddh, Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, non- communist resistance leader Son Sann and Hor Nam Hong, the Phnom Penh deputy prime minister for foreign affairs.

The talks were called to discuss a plan approved by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council last week to bring peace to Cambodia following 11 years of civil war.

The United Nations asked the Cambodian factions to set up a Supreme National Council to embody Cambodian sovereignty and hold Cambodia's seat in the forthcoming U.N. General Assembly meeting that opens Sept. 18.

Sihanouk's coalition includes his own followers plus those of Son Sann and the Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the factions fighting the Phnom Penh regime.

In Beijing, Sihanouk said he would not participate directly but work with the representatives of his three-party coalition. ''I shall help them, outside their working sessions, to reach understanding on the establishment, in priority, of the NSC and to study together following the establishment of the SNC, the problems not yet solved.''

The Vietnamese-backed government of Cambodia welcomed the U.S. statement to open direct talks saying it ''firmly believes that through these direct talks the two sides will have a clearer understanding of each another and will find light to solve various major issues confronting them, particularly a political solution to the Cambodian problem.''

''The state of Cambodia' s government is ready to hold talks with the U.S. government on all issues and at whatever levels,'' the Cambodian Foreign Ministry said in a statement read over Phnom Penh radio.

The Cambodian statement said Baker had made ''an astute and correct decision'' which that would help prevent the return to power of the Khmer Rouge.

Sihanouk spokesman Ek Sereywath also called the the prospect of U.S. talks with Hun Sen's government ''a very important step.''

''It shows Hun Sen's government is becoming more flexible. This is a good sign,'' he said.

The plan, worked out by the United States, Britain, China, France and the Soviet Union, provided for separation and disarmament of all forces in Cambodia, a major U.N. supervisory role and free elections.

A source in Beijing said Sihanouk changed his mind about attending the Jakarta talks after receiving a personal - and clearly face-saving - invitation from Suharto.

Sihanouk last week refused to attend, saying Hun Sen had violated the accepted formulation for peace negotiations by demanding to meet Sihanouk one-on-one, as equals. Sihanouk insists the three resistance factions each have equal footing with Hun Sen's government at the talks.

The source said Sihanouk had ''to accept the invitation of President Suharto because he is a friend of the Cambodian people,'' the source said.

BRUSSELS, Belgium (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Gulf crisis demonstrates the need for the European Community to move rapidly to full economic and monetary union, EC Commission president Jacques Delors said Thursday.

''The Gulf crisis is going to provoke a greater realization of the need for EMU (economic and monetary union) than we could have expected a few weeks ago,'' Delors told a conference at the European Parliament.

''Imagine if in a few months time, if the Community slowed down EMU, this would have a great impact on the way we could respond to an oil shock.''

Speaking just two days before EC finance ministers debate EMU in Rome, Delors said the Community's resolve to move to a common currency and a central European bank would be a ''test of will'' in the wake of the Gulf crisis.

''It is going to be an important test, because economic growth in the Community was slowing down anyway before the Gulf crisis,'' he said, and higher oil prices will add another complicating factor.

Delors, the president of the EC executive agency, said the European Monetary System, whose exchange-rate mechanism keeps most EC currencies within a narrow range, has shown ''rapid resiliency'' while the U.S. dollar and Japanese yen have fluctuated in the past three years.

Even so, he asked, ''Can we afford to wait for more outside shock? Obviously not.''

Delors sought to counter the slower approach of West German Bundesbank President Karl Otto Pohl, who told a Frankfurt audience Monday that a central bank and common currency may not be ''quite as indispensable as made out to be in some quarters.''

The Bundesbank president said he had ''some sympathy'' toward a British proposal for a ''hard ECU'' (European Currency Unit), which would compete against the 12 national EC currencies.

Delors, who champions a single EC currency, said the British proposal was positive ''to some extent,'' but rejected suggestions of extensive further preparatory work for an intergovernmental conference on EMU due to begin Dec. 13 in Rome.

''Those who say more work must be done at this point to prepare are really half-hearted about making progress,'' he said.

Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis also addressed the conference on EMU sponsored by the Socialist group in the European Parliament. The Socialists are the largest group in the body, holding 180 of the 518 seats.

De Michelis also called for rapid movement toward a single currency and central bank, because the EC must be ''more effective and more precise in our decisions'' in the post-Cold War world.

''If Europe does not come forward, working in a united way in a single voice, then another European country will come forth with its own currency and its own policies, and there's no sense crying about it then,'' he said.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - U-S envoys in Iraq and Kuwait are struggling to investigate a report that Iraqi troops shot and wounded an American man in Kuwait. A Western diplomat in the Persian Gulf state of Bahrain says all officials have ''heard so far is that the man was trying to avoid arrest by Iraqi troops who then shot him near his home.'' He says officials do NOT know the full extent of the American's injuries, but he says Iraqi authorities are believed to have taken him to an Iraqi military hospital.

Up to one-Million of the six-Million gallons of heavy fuel oil in the tank spilled out after the tank itself began collapsing. The oil is said to be covering half of the company's property at depths of up to six feet.

MONTREAL (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Canadian Paperworkers Union and Abitibi-Price Inc. will meet one more time in an attempt to avert a strike next week by 4,500 workers at nine mills in eastern Canada, a union official said Thursday.

CPU spokesman Serge Lord said the union and company were called back to the bargaining table by government conciliators for a session in Toronto Friday.

''If the company doesn't want a strike, we'll get a contract,'' Lord said.

The Abitibi-Price workers voted 77 percent to take strike action against the company beginning at 8 a.m. EDT Monday unless a new contract is reached, the CPU said. The newsprint and speciality paper workers operate two mills in Newfoundland, three in Quebec and four in Ontario.

Sharon Paul, a spokeswoman for Toronto-based Abitibi-Price, said Friday's meeting will focus on contract language and pick up where talks left off when adjourned Aug. 20.

''We are hopeful that we can reach an agreement,'' Paul said.

Talks between the two sides began in April when agendas were exchanged and were followed up with meetings in June and August to deal with local issues, Lord said.

Although many local issues were resolved, Lord said, ''there's (still) a lot of work to be done before a settlement is reached.''

Lord said the talks were stalled principally on two issues: flexibility for tradesmen and running time on statutory holidays.

Paul said both issues were on the table but didn't attach any specific importance to them.

Lord said the company has agreed to a three-year wage package which will boost workers salaries 72 cents in the first year and 5.5 percent in the second and third years.

The wage package was part of a deal struck in early July between the CPU and Stone-Consolidated Inc. for 2,350 paperworkers in Quebec. The union said the deal was to be the basis for talks with the rest of the industry in eastern Canada.

The Stone-Consolidated settlement, however, was only ratified by 56 percent of the workers.

The settlement did not provide any health and safety improvements and none of the job security and cost-of-living adjustments measures the union proposed.

HARRISBURG, PA (SEPT. 6) UPI - The state has notified the federal courts it is appealing a federal judge's ruling striking down the major provisions of Pennsylvania's abortion control law, Attorney General Ernie Preate Jr. said Thursday.

Preate said a notice of appeal was sent to U.S. District Court in Philadelphia Wednesday, the first step in appealing District Judge Daniel Huyett's Aug. 24 permanent injunctions to the 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals.

The case, involving the most restrictive state abortion law in the country is expected to be appealed all the way to the Supreme Court as a challenge to Roe v. Wade, the 1973 Supreme Court ruling legalizing abortion.

In a 191-page opinion, Huyett said the law is unconstitutional under Roe vs. Wade. He criticized its claims of safeguarding maternal and fetal health as ''a pretense'' to restrict women's rights to abortion.

Signed last November by Democratic Gov. Robert P. Casey, the 1989 Abortion Control Act imposed a 24-hour waiting period on abortions, required wives to notify their husbands and barred most abortions after 24 weeks. Huyett struck down those provisions, as well as a parental consent provision in a 1988 law.

He had already imposed preliminary injunctions on most of the provisions, and made his ruling after a trial in Reading, Pa. in July.

Preate said Thursday that Huyett may have permitted his own views on abortion to let him overshadow the Supreme Court's recent decisions giving the states more latitude in restricting abortion.

''We believe that Judge Huyett, perhaps influenced by his personal views on abortion which he openly expressed in his opinion, failed to accord the deference to legislative policy decisions which the law now requires,'' Preate said.

Casey spokesman Vince Carocci said the governor concurs with the appeal.

American Civil Liberties Union lawyers, who sought the permanent injunction, predicted Pennsylvania's law or a far more restrictive law passed in the territory of Guam are the mostly likely cases to present the Supreme Court with a chance to review Roe.

Mikhail Gorbachev may become the first Soviet leader to ever visit Japan next April. And the trip could go a long way toward easing years of strained relations between the two countries. EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - U.S. military authorities Thursday unveiled a huge field hospital, a 500-bed network of air-conditioned tents built to deal with large-scale casualties should war erupt with Iraq.

Press tours have emphasized the huge numbers of U.S. troops massing in the region, but the sprawling tent city named Fleet Hospital Five graphically reminded visitors the Pentagon is also preparing for any eventuality.

''We hope that it's a brief, boring time over here,'' said Lt. Cmdr. John Duckett, 36, a lung specialist. Like many others at the hospital, he hopes to remain ''unemployed'' in Saudi Arabia.

''We are here to do good,'' he said. ''We hope that some guys pull through because of us, who would not otherwise.''

The hospital, with its rows of vacant beds that could someday be occupied, provides yet another example of the military's can-do spirit that has pervaded the U.S. operation in the desert kingdom.

Twelve days ago, a Maritime Preposition Ship stationed at the Indian Ocean base of Diego Garcia disgorged hundreds of containers holding tents and vast quantities of medical equipment.

Naval construction battalion teams swung into action, erecting the 20 by 100-foot caramel-colored tents that now shelter wards, operating theaters, laboratories and intensive care units.

A total of 24 tents stand on a 28-acre paved area beside the ocean, but when all ancillary structures such as administrative offices and mess halls are established, the total complex should have more than 100 tents.

Two hospital ships are standing by offshore in the gulf.

Capt. Richard Mayo, the hospital commander, said the 500-bed facility is larger than any naval ground facility in Vietnam. ''We have it all,'' he said. ''We are a little city.''

Virtually all of the equipment is new and Mayo predicted the state-of-the-art facilities could result in a ''substantially'' higher survival rate for any wounded than in Vietnam, where in turn the emergency medical facilities gave far greater chances for wounded than those in World War II.

Mayo said the hospital would be fully operational ''within the week'' and able to match virtually any American hospital with facilities that include surgery, X-rays, dentistry, laboratory work and psychiatry.

It has about 900 staff, of whom 800 are medical personnel, with doctors trained in full treatment of any type combat wound. There are also specialists for helping victims of chemical warfare, Mayo said.

One of the first patients admitted Thursday was a young Marine who had accidentally crushed his hand.

Nurses dressed in camouflage fatigues busily treated the patient inside a ward, the double-layer tent billowing under the cooling draft of an air conditioner. Helicopters clattered overhead, and this would be the main way wounded would be lifted to the hospital if conflict breaks out.

''This is a very large unit compared with a MASH unit,'' Mayo said, when asked how his facility compared with the Korean War Mobile Army Surgical Hospitals popularized by the television series. ''They did not have the luxury of air conditioning ... or the up-to-date equipment.''

The officer said the facility would also treat allied Arab soldiers ''if the case arose,'' but the primary responsibility was to treat American personnel.

''We are preparing for casualties,'' said Corpsman Alan Bowman, 36, of Millesburg, Pa. ''That's our job: taking care of the wounded.''

TOPEKA, KS (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush accepted an offer Thursday to deliver a broadcast on Iraqi television, calling it ''a real opportunity'' to get his message to the people of Iraq, a spokesman said.

White house press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to Topeka ''we have not heard from Iraq directly, ''

The Iraqi information minister Thursday announced Iraq was inviting Bush to address the Iraqi people.

''The president will tape a message in the next few days which will be provided to the Iraqi information minister,'' said Fitzwater.

Fitzwater told reporters: ''The president has a very distinct message that he wants to give to the people of Iraq (about) our purpose for being in the gulf. He thinks this is a good opportunity.''

Asked if the Iraqis would edit, censor or possibly renege on their offer, Fitzwater said ''we take them at their word.''

''We obviously will produce a complete message,'' he added. ''We assume that their offer means that we will broadcast it in its entirety, and certainly we will make it available to the rest of the world.''

He said he expected that the broadcast would be aired sometime next week.

In a sqeich prepared for delivery at a fund-raiser for Kansas Gov. Mike Hayden, Bush delcared the U.S. military mission in the Persian Gulf may not be easy ''but it will always be right'' and pledged to do whatever is necessary to restore peace in the region.

Bush made the remarks on the eve of his departure for the Helsinki summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

In the address, Bush touched briefly on what he called ''the issue central to our minds and hearts: the crisis in the Persian Gulf.''

He told the Republican gathering that the U.S. objectives in the military buildup in the gulf following the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait remain unchanged.

''We will not stand by while one country devours another unthreatening country whole,'' he said. ''We will stand firm against the aggression now condemned around the world.

''Our cause may not be easy, but it will always be right. So we will do whatever it takes to help our men and women restore peace and, thus, complete their mission.''

He noted that the United Nations, with 22 countries involved, is ''stading with us against a brutal aggression.''

Bush said that during their one-day meeting in the Finnish capital Sunday, he and Gorbachev will talk about the gulf crisis and other issues.

''This meeting can further expand cooperation between the United States and Soviet Union,'' he said.

In the meantime, White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater denied a report that Bush would offer Gorbachev aid if the Soviet Union pulls some 200 military advisers out of Iraq.

Fitzwater said that the United States is sticking to the criteria laid down at the Houston economic summit meeting in July that called for Soviet economic reform and progress in its transformation to a free market before financial assistance is given.

The president's speech dealt with a potpourri of domestic issues and a pitch for Hayden, as well as the gulf crisis.

Bush said time is running out for the budget negotiators to reach an agreement before the Oct. 1 deadline. Otherwise a cut of $105 billion in government spending has been mandated by law.

''I pledge to work with the leaders of Congress on both sides of the aisle to get an agreement that makes real cuts in the deficit and eliminates the deficit within five years,'' he said. ''The time for partisanship is past. The time for action is now. Let's fix this budget mess once and for all.''

Administration and congressional negotiators will go into seclusion at Andrews Air Force Base on Friday and Saturday for a showdown summit meeting to seek a compromise on proposals for slashing the deficit.

The administration still hopes to achieve the Gramm-Rudman goal of $50 million in spending cuts and tax increases for fiscal 1991, but some congressional summiteers are indicating that figure may have to be sliced because of the impact of the gulf mission.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The United States is hoping to begin an airlift from Kuwait within the next several days to evacuate the trapped 2,500 Americans from the Iraqi-held Persian Gulf emirate, the State Department said Thursday.

There were no details about plans for the operation, although the State Department said the airlift would be carried out from Kuwait through Baghdad and on to Amman, Jordan.

Through radio broadcasts, the State Department warned the American women and children in Kuwait not to try to drive to Baghdad without their husbands and fathers because of ''difficulties'' they would face making the trip and ''in light of the prospects for air evacuation.''

Americans in Kuwait were advised to contact the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait City by telephone if they have not been in touch with the embassy in the past three days, but warned against trying to get to the embassy compound. The broadcasts were carried by the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp.

''If you cannot get through, keep trying,'' the notification said. ''Do not, repeat, do not attempt to go to the embassy compound, where Iraqi military are still positioned.''

Iraqi forces surrounded the embassy several weeks ago after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein demanded that all of the embassies in Kuwait be closed in a move that would legitimize the Iraqi annexation of Kuwait.

The United States and other countries have refused the order and Ambassador Nathaniel Howell continues to hold out in the embassy with a small staff in the face of dwindling supplies of food and water. There was no indication if Howell and his staff would be evacuated with other Americans in Kuwait.

Notification of the possible air evacuation came two days after 25 Americans were among 300 other hostages who were airlifted from Baghdad to Amman aboard three Iraqi jetliners. All 25 were women and children.

The State Department said it was continuing to press Iraq to allow all U.S. citizens to leave Kuwait and Iraq, not only women and children.

''We continue to make plans for the orderly evacuation of American citizens out of the country,'' the broadcast said. ''We are hoping to start air evacuation within the next few days from Kuwait through Baghdad to Amman.

''Iraqi authorities have said that only women and children will be permitted to leave, but we are continuing to urge that all American citizens be permitted to leave Kuwait and Iraq.

''Women and children attempting the drive to Baghdad unaccompanied by their spouses may face difficulties. As a result, and in light of the prospects for air evacuation, we recommend that Americans do not attempt the overland journey at this time.

''Please monitor VOA for updates of evacuation plans.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - Seasoned American travelers picked American Airlines as the top domestic carrier and Singapore Airlines as the best of the foreign carriers, a survey reported Thursday. Russia's Aeroflot ended up at the bottom.

Foreign carriers dominated the Zagat Airline Survey, conducted by Research & Forecasts Inc. of New York.

Besides Singapore Airlines, the top 10 in ''overall ratings'' were Swissair, JAL-Japan Air Lines, SAS, Quantas, Lufthansa, KLM, British Airways, Air France and Varig.

In addition to American, the top 10 domestic airlines in best overall ratings were Delta, United, Midway, Piedmont, TWA, Pan Am, Northwest, US

Air and Continental.

Aeroflot was named the flying public's least favorite airline with the lowest ratings in all service and comfort categories.

Financially beleaguered Eastern received the lowest ratings in all categories for a domestic airline - comfort, service, punctuality, food, and ''bang for a buck.''

''The airline ranked number 11, but clearly the highest-rated U.S. domestic airline was American Airlines,'' the survey said.

In a special ''bang for a buck'' rating relating the cost of flights to good service and comfort, Virgin Atlantic and Midway airlines led the list.

Tim Zagat, who publishes national restaurant, hotel, and rental car guides with his wife, Nina, said at a press conference he hoped the airline industry ''will look at this data, take it seriously and act on it where warranted.''

Nicholas Tortorello, chairman of Research & Forecasts, said the survey drew on responses from 4,462 ''educated'' frequent travelers who were asked to rate 27 major U.S. and foreign carriers, list major irritations and suggest innovations.

He said that in selecting the best airlines, some respondents said the picked ''only the best of a bad bunch.''

Half of those surveyed said their biggest complaints centered around delays, no matter what the cause.

''The views of Zagat travelers suggest that the spate of airline mergers and acquisitions has not helped the traveling public and travelers feel their choice of carriers, routes and service has dwindled,'' Tortorello reported.

''Many feel that airline concern for them is diminishing as well. They are increasingly feeling like hostages to airlines and their connecting hubs. They want more comfortable seating, consistent pricing, better food and fewer delays.''

Tortorello noted that although 10 foreign airlines outranked American in overall ratings, the number of travelers who rated American Airlines tops was close to six times the number who rated Singapore as the world's best.

He said this reflects a far broader base of Zagat travelers who were familiar with American and who travel more domestically than abroad.

Singapore was lauded by travelers for treating passengers like ''honored guests'' or ''oriental royalty,'' and JAL was singled out for ''cleanliness'' and ''gracious service.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Biology education starts too late in American schools and classes offered in later grades ''almost seem designed to snuff out interest'' in the vital science, a report said Thursday.

''We do not start teaching science early enough, and we reduce science to a language of foreign terms to be memorized,'' warned a panel of experts convened by the National Research Council.

In a 152-page report, the committee called on the research council to create a standing commission devoted soley to improving science education in the United States. ''The necessary changes cannot be made unless there is a permanent organization to monitor and organize them,'' the report said.

The experts called for instruction in biology and other natural sciences to start as early as kindergarten, with science being considered a basic subject like reading, writing or mathematics. The 13- member panel suggested ''science stories'' be integrated into reading and other language arts classes.

For most U.S. students planning to go to college, their first exposure to biology comes in middle school and about 75 percent of all students go on to take a high school biology class.

However, the quality of biology education most middle school and high school students receive is not very good, the committee found.

''We do not have a teaching corps trained for the task and we introduce students to science ... with a curriculum that seems almost designed to snuff out interest,'' the report said.

Furthermore, the committee said: ''We teach from textbooks that are often too long, are abysmally crafted, and are written with little or no understanding of biological concepts and with the implicit aim of avoiding offense to a scientifically illiterate segment of the adult population.''

Standardized tests that focus mainly on the memorization of biological terms also came under attack, with the experts saying such an approach fails to show students that science is a ''an intellectual voyage of exploration.''

Half of high school students who never take a class in biology do as well or better on standard biology tests than 40 percent of students who completed biology courses.

''Most students leave the experience with the conviction that further exposure to science is something to be avoided if at all possible,'' the report said.

Timothy Goldrmeth, chairman of the committee and a biology professor at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., said a solid background in science is growing increasingly important as our society comes to rely more heavily on technology.

''We must have an educated citizenry that can lead healthy lives, help to preserve a threatened environment .. and sustain our competetiveness in world markets,'' Goldsmith told a news conference.

The scientific community is partly to blame, along with parents, educators and politicians, for the sorry state of science education in the United States. ''Individually, many scientists have worked to improve education. Collectively, however, the profession has been too aloof from their dedicated colleagues in the schools,'' Golsmith said.

The National Research Council is the research arm of the National Academy of Sciences, a private organization chartered by Congress to examine questions of science and technology.

DRAPER, UT (SEPT. 6) UPI - Authorities stepped up the search Thursday for a double murderer and a career criminal who escaped from the Utah State Prison apparently by riding in a hidden compartment of a state pickup truck.

The truck was discovered abandoned Wednesday afternoon in the South Fork area of the American Fork Canyon, near the Utah-Wasatch County line, about 15 miles from the prison, but the felons remained at large.

The escape at the prison 20 miles south of Salt Lake City occurred about 9:40 a.m. MDT Wednesday.

The escaped convicts were identified as Gerald Paul Brown, 47, of Lehi, Utah, convicted twice of murder; and Rick Don George, 38, of Avalon, Calif., who went on a spree of armed robberies in Salt Lake City when he escaped in July 1985.

Utah Corrections Department spokesman Dave Franchina said a large section of the American Fork Canyon remained sealed off as law enforcement authorities combed the area where the truck was found.

Franchina said a search of the pickup revealed ''a tool bin portion of the utility bin had been altered to create a small compartment in which the two inmates were able to conceal themselves when it went through the gates and inspection.''

''We're trying to determine when it (compartment) was made and who had access,'' he said, adding authorities were on the lookout for the convicts in the rest of Utah and other states.

There had been no confirmed sightings of the escapees, and officials were unsure if they remained in the canyon area. Franchina said he could not confirm a report of a break-in Wednesday to a cabin in the area, and said it was unclear if an accomplice was involved in the escape.

Brown was sentenced to die but his death sentence was commuted in March 1980 to life in prison by the Utah Supreme Court.

George had served previous prison terms for robbery and aggravated robbery and was sent to prison most recently in 1985 for robbery and being an habitual criminal. His next parole hearing was set for 2004.

TORONTO (SEPT. 6) UPI - Ontario Premier David Peterson and his government faced possible defeat Thursday at the hands of socialist challengers as millions of voters cast ballots in a provincial election.

Peterson, Ontario's premier since 1985, admits his governing Liberal party is in a tight race with the socialist New Democratic Party.

''This has come down to a two-way horse race,'' Peterson told supporters Wednesday. ''We've got to keep fighting to the end. It's going to be close.''

Polls close at 8 p.m. EDT and results are expected to be available about an hour later.

The Liberals seemed headed for a huge win when Peterson called the election July 30, but into the voting Thursday they trailed the left- wing NDP in the polls.

Although Peterson denies it, polls indicate he is trailing the NDP candidate in his own London Center riding by 14 percent. Peterson has held the riding since 1975.

Voter disgust with an election being called years before legally required to do so, growing skepticism about the government's integrity and anger over tax increases and policies like no-fault car insurance have worked against Peterson and the Liberals.

On July 30, the Liberals held 93 of the Ontario Legislature's 130 seats, the NDP 18 and the Progressive Conservatives 17. There were two vacant seats.

But last week, a poll indicated the NDP would form a minority government, wherein a party does not hold a clear majority of seats in the Legislature but holds more than any other party. Opposition parties, who combined may hold more seats than the government, can vote together in the Legislature at any time to defeat the government.

Many Canadians favor minority governments, perceiving them to be more responsive, active governments.

The Progressive Conservatives are running third due largely to a disorganized party structure and a new, unknown leader in Mike Harris who is viewed as a clone of the highly unpopular Progressive Conservative prime minister of Canada, Brian Mulroney.

The NDP surge in the polls has turned the normally upbeat, soothing sounding Peterson into a shrill doomsayer who warns NDP policies will wreak havoc on the economy of Canada's most prosperous province.

NDP leader Bob Rae countered that Peterson is scaremongering in a desperate bid to hold power.

''We intend to build confidence in the economy ... and we intend to do whatever we can to build an economy stronger than the one we have right now,'' Rae said.

Political scientists and Canadian businessmen say Americans shouldn't fear an NDP government.

''Ontario is going to be a good or bad place for Americans no matter who is in power,'' said Gord White, a political science professor at the University of Toronto.

Although the NDP advocates closing corporate tax loopholes, scrapping the Canada-U.S. free trade deal and raising the minimum wage, ''it's going to be hard for them to make sweeping changes,'' White said.

David McFadden, president of the Toronto-based Canada-U.S. Business Association, said while the NDP platform is worrisome, the American business community will likely wait and see how party policies translate to reality.

''You can't defy economic gravity,'' he said.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait.

U.S. diplomats in Iraq and Kuwait investigated Thursday a report that Iraqi troops shot and wounded an American man in Kuwait. President Bush has said he would hold Iraqi President Saddam Hussein responsible for the welfare of U.S. and other Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, being held to guard against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force in the region.

PARIS - More than 153 former hostages, including 105 French women and children, arrived at Orly Airport Thursday from Amman aboard an Air France jetliner. The Foreign Ministry said among the passengers were 28 British citizens and 12 Americans, three Belgians, two Spaniards, two Italians and a West German.

BAGHDAD - Iraq was calling up more reservists. Baghdad Radio said reserve officers and men born in 1953 were called up for ''active duty.'' But Cairo Radio said Iraqi reservist officers involved in ''chemical warfare had not been called up'' to boost Baghdad's 1 million-strong army, parts of which are facing U.S.-led troops across the Saudi border.

India, China and Iran indicated Thursday they may supply Iraq with food and medicine despite U.N. sanctions imposed after Baghdad invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.The United States has said U.N. sanctions allow for delivery of emergency food and medicine but contends there is not yet an emerency and no shipments should go through.

TOPEKA, Kan. - President Bush accepted an offer to deliver a broadcast on Iraqi television, calling it ''a real opportunity'' to get his message to the people of Iraq, a spokesman said. The invitation followed Bush's complaint that U.S. television has given Saddam ample opportunity to tell his side of the crisis but that Iraq had not reciprocated.

Secretary of State James Baker was reported on his way to Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Europe before attending the Helsinki superpower summit. Baker was apparently solicting contributions for the upkeep of the U.S-led multinational force in the oil-rich kingdom. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady was on a similar mission to South Korea and Japan, Paris and London.

AMMAN, Jordan - U.N. officials called for international aid for about 60,000 mostly destitute Asian workers from Iraq and Kuwait trapped without adequate food, water or shelter in the desert along the Iraq- Jordanian border. Jordan said it cannot cope with the refugees and has been allowing only 20,000 refugees in a day.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA - U.S. military authorities Thursday unveiled a huge field hospital, a 500-bed network of air-conditioned tents built to deal with large-scale casualties should war erupt with Iraq. Press tours have emphasized the huge numbers of U.S. troops in the region but the sprawling tent city reminded visitors the Pentagon is also preparing for any eventuality.

WASHINGTON - The United States is hoping to begin an airlift from Kuwait within days to evacuate the 2,500 trapped Americans from the Persian Gulf emirate, the State Department said Thursday. There were no details about the operation but the State Department said it would be carried out from Kuwait through Baghdad and on to Amman, Jordan.

BRUSSELS, Belgium - The world faces ''grave danger'' of aggression from a widening number of dictatorships if Iraq does not withdraw from Kuwait and release all hostages, NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner said Thursday in a speech. He said if Iraq succeeds in holding on to Kuwait it will encourage other dictatorships with sophisticated weapons to do the same with their neighbors.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - The United States is still trying to find out all it can about reports that an American has been shot and wounded by Iraqi troops in occupied Kuwait. The unidentified man is said to be in a military hospital. He reportedly was shot while trying to avoid arrest by Iraqi troops near his home.

The secretary general of NATO warns that if Iraq is NOT stopped in its current aggression than other dictatorships around the world may feel they are free to do what they want when they want. Manfred Woerner made the comments in a speach at a conference in Prague , Czechoslovakia.

President Bush plans to use Republican fund-raisers in Kansas and Florida to drum up support in his budget fight with Congress and re- affirm U-S resolve in the Persian Gulf. Bush spends today on the road, campaigning in Topeka for Kansas Governor Mike Hayden and in Tallahassee for Florida Congressman Bill Grant.

Engineers are looking at the possibility that a faulty pump unit may be responsible for yesterday's scrub of the shuttle Columbia's astronomy mission. They've drained the fuel tank and are now looking for specific answers. If the pump package is found to be at fault, Columbia could be rescheduled for launch in about one week.

Forecasters say tropical storm Isidore in the Atlantic Ocean continues to gain strength and may become a hurricane by tomorrow. Miami forecasters say there's also a chance Isidore may turn more to the north and avoid land, but it's too early to tell. At last report, the storm was 800 miles west-southwest of the Cape Verde Islands with top winds of nearly 60 miles an hour.

PRAGUE, CZECHOSLOVAKIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - A high-ranking committee of Roman Catholic and Jewish representatives Thursday condemned anti-Semitism as ''a sin against God and humanity'' and called for active efforts by the Catholic hierarchy to oppose it.

Several dozen representatives of the International Jewish Committee on Interreligious Consultations and the Pontifical Commission for Religious Relations with Jews met for three days in Prague to lay the basis for a Catholic document on the growing phenomenon in Eastern Europe.

The group, which last met in Rome in 1985, acknowledged that ''certain traditions of Catholic thought and teaching practice in the Middle Ages contributed to the creation of anti-semitism in Western society.''

''In modern times, many Catholics were not vigilant enough to react against manifestations of anti-semitism,'' said its closing statement, which was distributed at a news conference.

''The Catholic delegates condemned anti-semitism as well as all forms of racism as a sin against God and humanity and affirmed that one cannot be authentically Christian and engage in anti-Semitism.''

The conference recognized the importance of the Second Vatican Council in improving Catholic-Jewish relations as well as later efforts by church officials.

It also heard personal testimony from witnesses to the Holocaust during World War II, both of courageous Christians as well as ''those who failed themselves as well as Jews and other victims'' in responding to Nazism and fascism.

''(The fact) that anti-Semitism found a place in Christian thought and practice calls for an act of Teshuvah (repentance) and of reconciliation on our part,'' said Archbishop Edward Cassidy, president of the pontifical commission.

The committee called for active efforts to fight anti-Semitism, including setting up special courses for priests to fight it, translating and disseminating all relevant church documents on Judaism in Eastern Europe, and monitoring and countering events which threaten an upsurge of anti-Semitism.

''A new image and a new attitude in Jewish-Catholic relationship are required,'' the group said. ''The liaison committee hopes that the new catechism for the universal church, now in preparation, could serve as an effective instrument to this end.''

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Workers in Perth Amboy, New Jersey, are trying to clean up some of the oil that spilled yesterday from a six-Million-gallon storage tank... while others are busy transferring what's left in the tank to other storage areas. Authorities up to one-Million gallons of the heavy fuel oil spilled from the tank, but only about five-thousand gallons went into the Arthur Kill Waterway.

Health Secretary Sullivan released the nation's 289 health goals for the year 2000, saying good health is a benefit that should be available to all. Sullivan indicates the nation should focus on reducing the number of AIDS cases... curbing sex among teen-agers... cutting tobacco use... and promoting healthier diets and more exercise.

South African police say at least one person was killed and up to 20 people injured when factional fighting raged across platforms of a rail station and into the path of a slow-moving train. SEATTLE (SEPT. 6) UPI - Constantine ''Tony'' Baruso, who for nine years avoided implication in the deaths of two anti-Marcos Filipinos despite the fact his gun was used in the slayings, was finally behind bars Thursday facing two counts of aggravated first-degree murder.

New evidence tying Baruso to the murders was evidently behind his arrest, although prosecutors did not initially release the information. Prosecutors and family members of the victims planned to hold news conferences later Thursday.

Dan Donohoe, a spokesman for the King County Prosecutors Office, said Baruso was charged Wednesday, arrested Wednesday night and was being held on $500,000 bail in the King County Jail. His arraignment was scheduled for Friday.

Baruso was president of Local 37 of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union on July 1, 1981, when three men burst into the local's Pioneer Square offices and gunned down Silme Domingo and Gene Viernes.

The two had worked to clean up the union's illegal gambling practices in Alaskan canneries and also had persuaded the union to pass a resolution opposing the repressive regime of Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos.

Family members of the victims and police long suspected Baruso hired the three hitmen and was the one who accepted $15,000 sent by the Marcos government through its U.S. agents to eliminate Domingo and Viernes.

When Baruso's Mac-10 .45 caliber submachine gun was identified as the murder weapon, he was briefly taken into custody in the fall of 1981. But he claimed the weapon had been stolen and, for lack of evidence, was released uncharged.

Three local Filipino gang members, Pompeo ''Ben'' Guloy Jr., Jimmie Ramil and Fortunato ''Tony'' Dictado, were convicted of killing Domingo and Viernes, who were of Filipino descent but were born and raised in Washington state. The three hitmen were sentenced to life in prison without possibility of parole.

A fourth man who accompanied them to the union hall but did not go in, Boy Pilay, testified against the killers at their trial. Pilay himself was murdered in January 1983.

Baruso invoked the Fifth Amendment 130 times during the trial, in which King County prosecutors contended the murders were the result of the Tulisan gang attempting to reassert its control over the union's illegal gambling activities.

But late last year, the families of the victims succeeded in their long quest to prove the murders were an attempt to squelch anti-Marcos sentiment in the United States.

A federal court jury found the late dictator's estate liable for $15.2 million in damages after deciding the plaintiffs' civil lawsuit had proved the Philippine government's involvement.

The families contended that Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and Gen. Fabian Ver, former chief of Philippine security, sent undercover agents to the United States to establish and operate a network of loyalists to work against anti-Marcos dissidents.

Last February, U.S. District Judge Barbara Rothstein ruled that Baruso and Dr. Leonilo Malabed of San Francisco, a friend of the late dictator, were liable for an additional $8.32 million in damages to the familes of Domingo and Viernes.

In her ruling, Rothstein wrote, ''The court concludes that plaintiffs have provided clear, cogent and convincing evidence that the Marcoses created and controlled an intelligence operation which plotted the murders of Domingo and Viernes and that funds were paid to Baruso and used to perpetrate the murders.''

Rothstein also said Baruso's claim that his submachine gun had been stolen before the murders had been ''thoroughly rebutted'' by his insurance agent Lucho Singe.

Malabed, who moved from the Philippines to San Francisco in 1954, was alleged by plaintiffs to have established the Mabuhay Corp., a radio station, in 1978, to serve as a slush fund for the pro-Marcos movement in the United States.

The plaintiffs also were able to show that Baruso was in San Francisco at the time of the murders and several days later deposited large sums of money into his bank accounts in Seattle, the judge said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - One Democrat and 11 Republicans - including two GOP leaders - Thursday were dubbed the ''Dirty Dozen of 1990'' by an environmental group that called them the ''worst polluter pals'' in Congress.

Environmental Action, the group that draws up the list each year, also presented its first ''lifetime achievement award'' to Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who was originally named to the Dirty Dozen list in 1978 and who faces a tough re-election fight this year. Helms was not included in the 1990 Dirty Dozen listing.

Ruth Caplan, executive director of Environmental Action, said Helms was being singled out because of his long-standing opposition to a wide variety of environmental legislation.

''Jesse Helms was dirty 12 years ago and he's dirtier today,'' Caplan said.

Caplan said those named to the 1990 Dirty Dozen list were chosen on the basis of their voting records and ''acts of leadership'' against the environment. All those on the list are up for re-election.

''Every one of these guys is an enemy of the environment,'' Caplan said. They are the polluters' pals. They put special interests ahead of the health of their constituents. Their sorry environmental records ''tuents. Their sorry

In naming its dozen, Environmental Action came under fire itself from an anti-abortion group that said the environmental group wrongly included congressional votes on population control issues as a factor in compiling its list.

In particular, the National Right to Life Committee said lawmakers should not be penalized by environmentalists for voting against U.S. funding for a United Nations program that backs ''coercive abortion and ''oercive abortion and

''It is an outrageous distortion to claim that a congressman is anti-environment because he opposes compulsory abortion,'' said Douglas Johnson, the committee's legislative director.

Some - but not all - environmental activists have supported population control efforts, saying the rising human tide threatens to overwhelm Earth's natural systems.

The two most prominent lawmakers on Environmental Action's list for 1990 were House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois and Assistant Senate GOP leader Alan Simpson of Wyoming.

Caplan said that in Environmental Action's assessment of key environmental votes, Michel never voted the ''environmentalist'' position. She also charged Michel spearheaded efforts in past sessions to weaken the Clean Water Act and other anti-pollution laws.

Simpson, a vocal critic of environmental activists, was cited for his ''rabid anti-environmentalism'' both in the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee and as a key player on the Senate floor. Caplan said Simpson opposed five major amendments to strengthen the pending clean air bill while adding a provision weakening regulation of radioactive emissions.

Others named were:

-Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama, the lone Democrat cited. Heflin was criticized for opposing stricter pesticide regulation as a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee and voting against greater protection for streams in Alaska's Tongass National Forest, which includes the nation's only temperate rainforest.

-Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., cited for voting to open Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil exploration and for opposing strengthening amendments to the clean air bill.

-Rep. Larry Craig, R-Idaho, who is running to fill the Senate seat being vacated by retiring Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho. Craig was criticized for being a ''relentless crusader'' for mining, logging and ranching interests as a member of the House Interior and Insular Affairs Committee.

-Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., blasted for being the sole member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee to vote against the clean air bill; for seeking to limit public participation in nuclear plant licensing; and for voting to limit the rights of toxic waste victims to sue polluters.

-Rep. Bill Emerson, R-Mo., who was criticized for voting against strengthening amendments to oil spill legislation even though his district suffered one of the worst inland oil spills in U.S. history in 1988 when a Shell Oil pipeline near the Gasconda River ruptured.

-Rep. Clyde Holloway, R-La. Holloway was accused of doing little about toxic pollution even though his district has a high concentration of heavily polluting petrochemical plants and higher than average cancer rates.

-Rep. James Inhofe, R-Okla.. Caplan said Inhofe was ''waving the green flag'' in an Earth Day mailing to his constituents, but then voted against strengthening amendments to the clean air bill and sponsored legislation undercutting protection for the Tongass National Forest.

-Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., who was cited for his ''pro-development'' stance as a member of the House Interior Committee. For example, Parris was criticized for supporting a highway in his district that would destroy valuable wetlands.

-Rep. Denny Smith, R-Ore. Smith was denounced for siding with the timber interests in their efforts to open up more federal lands to logging. Smith also was accused of opposing enactment of the Oregon Wilderness Act and Columbia Gorge Act.

-Rep. Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., who was cited for repeatedly trying to weaken water pollution laws.

DHAHRAN, SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker arrived in Saudi Arabia Thursday on the first leg of a Mideast tour prior to his attendance at the superpower summit in Helsinki, Finland, U.S. diplomats said.

Before leaving Washington, U.S. administration officials said Baker would discuss with Saudi King Fahd and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak developments in the Persian Gulf crisis and its possible consequences for the region.

Baker was expected to stay overnight in the Saudi Red Sea port of Jeddah before heading on Friday to the Saudi resort of Taif, where Kuwait's exiled emir is living.

The trip is partly to line up financial support for the U.S. military operations in Persian Gulf and to help nations such as Egypt, which are financially harmed by the economic embargo against Iraq.

After Saudi Arabia Baker was scheduled to fly to the United Arab Emirates for talks with UAE leaders Friday before arriving in Cairo and holding talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid later the same day.

Baker was expected to hold talks with Mubarak in Egypt's Mediterranean city of Alexandria Saturday morning before heading for Helsinki later the same day.

After Helsinki, Baker was expected to head for Brussels and Moscow for the two-plus-four ministerial meeting on a united Germany. The U.S. official was then expected to stop over in Bonn and Rome before returning to Washington.

In Washington Wednesday, the first signs of congressional reservations about U.S. policy in the Persian Gulf crisis emerged as Baker outlined U.S. plans to isolate Iraq and prevent future aggression.

Most members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday echoed the praise that came one day earlier at a House Foreign Affairs Committee meeting, where Baker and President Bush were lauded for their moderation and firmness in the crisis, as well as their willingness to use international rather than American pressure.

Before the Foreign Relations Committee, Baker outlined the American goals just as he had the day before in the House: rolling back the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait; the restoration of Kuwait's ''legitimate government;'' the protection of the lives of American hostages; and a continuing American commitment to the protection of the Persian Gulf.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., said the military operation raises an unsettled constitutional question that will persist as long as a dispute continues between the legislative and executive branches over the War Powers Resolution.

President Bush did not invoke the resolution in sending troops to the gulf because he said he believes hostilities were not imminent.

Biden told Baker, ''I'm with you. I just want to know where we are going.''

Biden, Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., and others raised questions about whether the United States should be using its great weight to re-install the autocratic, unelected emir of Kuwait and his family-run government.

SAN FRANCISCO (SEPT. 6) UPI - The California Supreme Court Thursday reversed 12 perjury convictions against ex-San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock and opened the way for possible reversal of a more serious conspiracy charge by permitting a hearing into alleged bailiff misconduct.

If Hedgecock is retried again on the perjury counts, involving his alleged failure to report 1983 campaign contributions, it would be his third trial.

The conspiracy conviction could be reversed if a new San Diego trial judge finds a bailiff at his second trial tried to influence jurors to reach a speedy verdict and supplied alcohol to the sequestered panel members after their daily deliberations.

The judge first must be persuaded the hearing into juror misconduct is necessary, however.

The state's high court, in its 5-2 vote to reverse the perjury convictions found that the trial judge, William Todd, erred when he instructed jurors that Hedgecock's failure to report all his mayoral campaign contributions were significant misstatements that constituted perjury.

The issue should have been a question for jurors to decide, according to Justice Joyce Kenndard in the majority decision.

Hedgecock's first trial ended with jurors deadlocked 11-1 for conviction. But in his second trial, Hedgecock was convicted on the dozen counts of perjury and one count of conspiracy for failure to report $360,000 in contributions from the 1983 campaign that put him in the mayor's seat.

Hedgecock was sentenced to one year in jail and fined $1,000 but remained free on bail pending the outcome of his appeals. His license to practice law has been suspended pending the outcome of his appeals. He is currently a radio commentator in San Diego.

Hedgecock has used his talk show to criticize the criminal justice system, especially the lengthy appeals in the San Diego death penalty case of Robert Alton Harris, even though Hedgecock's own lawyer, Charles Sevilla, also defends Harris.

The charges against the former mayor stemmed from allegations that illegal donations were funneled into his campaign warchest from the now- defunct J. David & Co. firm.

Hedgecock was tried twice in 1985 on accusations he failed to report the $360,000 in illegal donations from the once prestigious La Jolla investment firm that later was revealed to be a sophisticated ponzi scheme.

Two principals in the case, J. David Dominelli and Nancy Hoover, pleaded guilty to conspiracy charges in the Hedgecock case and were sentenced to federal prison on fraud convictions related to the ponzi scheme.

Sevilla maintained that bailiff Allen Burroughs nudged the jurors toward conviction by plying some jurors with liquor and reminding them how much it was costing the county to house and feed the sequestered panel.

Burroughs also allegedly tried to define the law for jurors giving them a faulty example of what constitutes ''reasonable doubt.''

The bailiff also allegedly supplied alcohol at a party with jurors the night before the guilty verdict was returned, according to Sevilla.

Burroughs denied any misconduct.

A new trial judge must now consider whether Hedgecock should have a hearing into whether the bailiff's alleged actions prejudiced the verdict on the conspiracy charge.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The grounding of the space shuttle Columbia by another mysterious hydrogen leak fueled criticism Thursday of NASA's attempts to get the shuttle program back off the ground and overall approach to space flight.

''It's sad and frustrating that we're reduced to - as a measure of success - getting one of these things off the ground,'' said John Logsdon, director of the Space Policy Institute at George Washington University. ''It just wasn't supposed to be this way.''

NASA scrubbed Columbia's scheduled launch Thursday on a 10-day astronomy mission when high levels of hydrogen gas were detected in the spaceship's engine room.

A previous hydrogen leak scrubbed the shuttle's launch in May and the entire fleet was grounded in July when another leak was detected in the shuttle Atlantis before its scheduled blastoff on a secret military mission.

NASA engineers thought they had traced the leaks to a defective fuel line valve and believed they had repaired the problem in Columbia by replacing the faulty equipment.

''They wheeled this thing back into the hangar for several weeks and then they roll it back out (to the launch pad) again and they've got another hydrogen leak. It's troubling,'' said Robert Park, a physics professor at the University of Maryland.

''You don't undertake any program of this complexity without some unexpected problems showing up and it takes a while to solve them. But the shuttle's been around a long time now. And to have these kinds of fundamental problems still coming up - the shuttle simply hasn't served its purpose,'' Park said.

Park's comments came after a hearing sponsored by the Federation of American Scientists on the future of the space agency, which has come under increasing criticism because of a series of setbacks, including the leaks, the defective Hubble Space Telescope and design problems with the proposed space station.

''For a long time they would say publicly when there was criticism of risk or cost, 'Well the shuttle's a success-oriented program,''' said Richard Garwin, a space expert at IBM. ''What they really meant in a disingenuous, sneaky way of talking was, 'Well, we're only giving you the bill and the schedule for if we meet success at every point and we'll be back in case anything goes wrong for more time and for more money.'

The latest setback bodes poorly for the agency's prospects of getting its proposed $15 billion budget approved by Congress, said John Pike, a space analyst for the federation.

''It's more bad news at a time when NASA needs good news. It's certainly one in an unfortunately continuing series of demonstrations of technical shortcomings by an agency that we're paying for technical virtuosity,'' Pike said.

''It certainly does not reduce their political problem of having had a lot of bad news at a time when they are trying to get a major budget increase '' he said. ''I think that at this point part of the political reaction is going to be, 'Well as long as they aren't going to do anything they can not do it on $8 billion as easily as they can not do it on $15 billion.'''

But Stanley Rosen of the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics defended the agency, saying problems are inevitable during complicated projects.

''There is a general of lack of understanding in the public and in the government sometimes about the difficulty of certain engineering projects. We expect ... magic,'' Rosen said. ''We are not participants in magic. We are trying to actually carry things out that are very difficult.''

Logsdon agreed problems like the fuel leak had to be expected because of the complexity of the shuttle. But he said the leak illustrated the need for alternatives to the shuttle.

''We don't have a space program to launch shuttles. We have shuttles to have a space program. We made a massive policy mistake in this country to depend totally on the shuttle for access to space,'' he said in a telephone interview.

EASTERN SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - Iraqi anti-aircraft batteries daily train their sights on U.S. and Saudi fighters sweeping the skies over occupied Kuwait, a region allied pilots have come to call ''the junkyard.''

It is a reference to the jumble of electronic signals used during the high-technology hide-and-seek duels above the desert, pilots said Thursday.

Officers of the III Marine Aircraft Wing are eagerly absorbing all the information at hand because if war breaks out they want to destroy Saddam Hussein's radar in minutes, his air power within 36 hours.

''We want about three to five minutes, and we're going to give him the most violent three to five minutes he's ever seen,'' said Maj. Gen. Royal N. Moore, the wing commander. ''We don't want to stay over the target for hours and hours.

''I'm not going to ever predict that it's going to be a cakewalk,'' said Moore. ''Its going to be very messy up there. A lot of lead's going to be in the air ... (but) if we do it right, the casualties will be light.''

The marine wing has more than 300 aircraft of eight varying types that include top-range F/A-18 fighters, A-6E bombers, Huey ''Cobra'' helicopter gunships and big transport choppers.

The marine air wing has a binding esprit d'corps, meaning the men in the skies care deeply about taking care of their comrades on the ground.

''Our friends who we went through training with are down there,'' said Capt. Tom Chaney, 33, of Los Angeles, who flies a Harrier jump jet. ''When we go up on a combat mission, we go up to protect the marines. We are their aerial canons.''

Moore was talking to a visiting group of reporters at the facility, the forward-most fixed-wing aircraft base to the Kuwaiti border. Its daily sorties are always being locked onto by Iraqi SAM-2 and SAM-3 anti-aircraft batteries.

''They have gone to the shoot phase, but nothing has gone off the rails,'' the general said. ''If he wants to turn on, we will take all the intelligence he can give us.''

Moore and pilots said the missiles inside Kuwait and Iraq have a 30-mile range, and they never fly closer than 80 miles. Other pilots have told of daily ''cat and mouse'' duels with Iraqi fighters, which retreat when locked on by U.S. and Saudi weapon systems.

''The Iraqis have set up a formidable air defense network, not only in their own country, but also in coastal Kuwait,'' said Capt. Rod Vonlipskey 33, an F/A-18 pilot from Philadelphia. ''They have indicated that they have something there to protect.''

In the event of war, a Marine EA-6B would enter the heavily monitored airspace and pinpoint where the Iraqi target acquisition radars are located. An Air Force F4-G ''Wild Weasel'' would then fire HARM or SHRIKE missiles that are designed to home in on the radars and possibly blind Baghdad's air force.

''This is the king of the junkyard,'' said Moore, climbing aboard an EA-6B which is coated with gold leaf to shield its pilots from a mix of radiation caused by powerful on-board electronics.

''Us and the weasel guys,'' Moore said.

About 60,000 Marines are scheduled to deploy in Saudi Arabia, and one of their possible missions could be to stage a seaborne assault on the Kuwait coast, reported to be bristling with defensive Iraqi weaponry.

Air power would be vital in such a risky operation, but Moore said if the U.S. force buildup continues, there will soon be enough ground power to retake Kuwait.

''There is always a back door,'' he explained. ''You can't defend everything. We have a theory along with the air force and others that we could roll back those guys, and I think we could do it very, very effectively. I'm talking about hours before the invasion.''

Moore said he believed Iraq's air power could be devastated within one and a half days, or even sooner if the United States attacked first and at night, when the Iraqi defense capability is less.

But he said there would still be a threat from so-called ''leaker'' aircraft that may sneak through air defenses by hiding behind commercial planes, a tactic he said was used by Baghdad during the gulf war with Iran when the USS Stark was hit by an French-built Exocet missile, killing 37 American sailors.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Striking teachers ended walkouts Thursday in California, Michigan and Illinois as nearly 4,000 other unionized educators manned picket lines in wage and benefit disputes affecting more than 61,000 students nationwide.

Teachers in Michigan's Engadine school district reached tentative agreement Thursday on a contract for 48 teachers, ending a two-day strike. Classes for the Upper Peninsula district's 350 students were scheduled to resume Friday.

Strikes continued for a third day in five other Michigan districts. The walkouts involved 1,937 teachers and 33,200 students in Saginaw, Troy, Gwinn, Cheboygan and St. Igance. Bus drivers in Gaylord also remained on strike.

Classes resumed Thursday in Darien, Ill., a day after a DuPage County judge ruled a school strike illegal because teachers did not give five days notice of their intention to strike as required by state law.

The district's 110 teachers walked out Tuesday, extending summer vacation for 1,721 students. Talks with a mediator were scheduled for Saturday to resolve differences over salaries in the second and third years of a proposed contract.

''Hopefully we will be settled then,'' said Warren Johnson, the district's assistant superintendent.

Some 2,325 students and 117 teachers remained out of class a seventh day in the Mount Zion school district in Illinois. No new talks were scheduled.

Schools in Fremont, Calif., kept their doors open as 1,200 teachers completed a two-day walkout and prepared to return for classes Friday. The walkout was the fourth in six months for Fremont, which has 27,000 students in 42 schools.

In Rhode Island, 360 members of the North Kingstown school district began considering a contract offer hammered out in a 16-hour negotiating session officials said. Both sides declined to reveal details of the offer.

About 4,500 schoolchildren in the North Kingstown district had been scheduled to begin classes Wednesday but remained home because of the strike. School administrators postponed the start of classes until at least Friday.

North Kingstown teachers Tuesday overwhelmingly rejected an offer from the School Committee. Union President Joseph Mercurio has said the teachers want a 7.3 percent raise in the first year and oppose a phased- in pay increase.

Teachers in two New Jersey school districts defied back-to-work orders in a second day of picketing.

A strike by 303 teachers and 28 secretaries in Deptford Township has disrupted classes for 3,330 students. Substitute teachers were hired in Deptford and in the South Orange-Maplewood School District, where a strike by 390 teachers and 182 support staff affected 4,800 students.

In Pennsylvania, seven school districts were on strikes involving 854 teachers and affecting 13,783 students. Teachers in the West Branch School District, with 74 faculty and 1,299 students, voted to go on strike Wednesday night after a bargaining session failed to produce an agreement.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 6) UPI - Talks between Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev resulted in little or no progress toward a solution of the Persian Gulf crisis, officials of both nations said Thursday.

Iraq requested Wednesday evening's surprise meeting in Moscow so Aziz could brief Gorbachev on the Iraqi position before the Soviet leader meets President Bush in Helsinki Sunday.

Aziz told a news conference before leaving Moscow Thursday there were still major differences between the two former allies over Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

The Iraqi official said he and Gorbachev had a ''constructive, cordial and frank exchange of views'' and praised the Soviets for being willing to listen to the Iraqi side even though Moscow has condemned the invasion.

''Of course we know that we have different views vis-a-vis the situation in the (gulf) region,'' Aziz said. ''We respect the views of our Soviet friends and what we ask, what I have asked, is understanding of our view and our situation.''

The Soviets have insisted in previous meetings with Iraqi officials that Baghdad immediately withdraw its troops from Kuwait as the first step to ending the crisis and avoiding all-out war. Moscow has been disappointed by Iraq's refusal to comply.

Soviet Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennady Gerasimov, in a lukewarm Soviet reaction to the meeting, said any talks were helpful in a time of crisis and added, ''I don't think it was a step backwards.

''As to whether it was a step forward, I think we should wait and see,'' Gerasimov said.

''When you exchange views you have the hope that maybe there will be something changed in the exchange,'' Gerasimov said. Asked if any change had been seen in the Iraqi position, he replied: ''I haven't noticed it.''

The surprise visit by Aziz came four days before Gorbachev and Bush were to meet in Helsinki to discuss the crisis that began with Iraq's invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

''I did not ask President Gorbachev to convey a message to President Bush '' Aziz said in answer to a question. ''We just had an exchange of views about our positions and it is up to him (Gorbachev) to use the information I gave and the arguments I put. I leave it to his judgment.''

Soviet officials, saying they hoped to use Moscow's ''special relationship'' with Baghdad to help negotiate a settlement to the crisis, have maintained contacts with Iraqi officials despite the Kremlin's condemnation of the invasion and support for U.N. sanctions.

''Contacts when conducted in a cordial constructive manner help in understanding each other's position,'' Aziz said. ''It doesnt necessarily mean full agreement but it leads to better understanding of the positions.''

He criticized the United States and Britain for what he called their ''negative, arrogant'' refusal to consider negotiations unless Iraq withdraws from Kuwait.

The Soviet Union has expressed disappointment at the results of talks last week in Amman between Aziz and U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar, and Soviet officials have said they are hopeful the Gorbachev-Bush summit will be a step forward toward a solution.

The official Soviet news agency Tass said Gorbachev spoke by telephone with French President Francois Mitterrand Thursday as part of the continuing diplomatic effort to solve the gulf crisis, but no details were released.

''If the Soviet government would like to play a more active role in this issue we would welcome it,'' Aziz said.

He said in talks with both Perez de Cuellar and Gorbachev he had pushed Iraqi President Saadam Hussein's Aug. 12 proposal to tie the issue of Iraqi occupation of Kuwait with that of the Israeli-occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

''We the Arabs feel we are being abused,'' Aziz said. ''There is a double standard.''

Aziz said he felt the talks with the U.N. leader failed because Perez de Cuellar ''came to Amman in a straitjacket'' due to pressure from the United States and other powers in the Security Council.

Moscow cut off arms shipments to its onetime close ally in the gulf after the invasion of Kuwait, joined in nearly universal condemnation of the action and is supporting U.N. economic sanctions.

Aziz said Thursday the estimated 6,000 Soviet workers in Iraq, including 193 military advisers, were free to leave if they wanted to.

Soviet officials have responded to questions about the continued presence of military advisers by saying only they were in a ''delicate situation'' and would stay to complete their contracts.

Gerasimov said the Soviet workers were leaving Iraq as their contracts expired and added, ''I hope that minister Aziz is as good as his word when he said today Soviet specialists are free to leave.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said Thursday after meeting with President Bush that Bush had agreed to provide Israel with the Patriot surface-to-air missiles it had requested.

''I'm leaving happy,'' said Levy, who also met Thursday with White House national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and held talks Wednesday with Secretary of State James Baker on the Persian Gulf crisis and other Middle East issues.

No details on the sale were available and at the Pentagon, spokesman Bob Hall said, ''I can't confirm anything on that (sale).''

Levy disclosed the administration had acquiesced to Israel's bid for the sophisticated weapons while on Capitol Hill for meetings with members of the Senate and House.

''The administration has repeated their undertaking to carry on and continue maintaining the qualitative edge for Israel's security and supply what it needs, including the Patriot,'' Levy said.

Speaking in Hebrew with an English translor, Levy told reporters at the White House that Bush agreed to supply Israel with ''the needs for its security.''

He said his 15-minute meeting with Bush centered on the joint role the U.S. and Israel will play in the Persian Gulf crisis sparked by Iraq;s invasion and occupation of Kuwait.

''Our goals are common and Israel is a partner and ally in all this challenge,'' he said.

LONDON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher urged members of Parliament Thursday to send a unified and unequivocal message to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that he must withdraw unconditionally from Kuwait and she vowed to use military force against him if necessary.

She also said she was considering sending more military forces to the Persian Gulf to join naval and air forces already there. No elaboration as offered.

The gulf crisis caused the House of Commons to return from recess - something it hadn't done since Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands in 1982.

In a speech opening the two-day debate, Thatcher called Saddam's invasion of his tiny neighboring emirate Aug. 2 - capturing land and a lucrative oil field - ''an outrageous breach of international law'' and ''a flagrant and blatant case of aggression.''

The prime minister said she hoped that economic sanctions imposed by the United Nations would prove adequate to force an Iraqi retreat, but also said Britain was not precluded from using military force to repel further attacks by Saddam's troops.

Howls of protest were heard from a minority of left-wing opposition Labor Party members.

The extremists, led by MP Tony Benn, received a pledge from Speaker Bernard Wetherill for a vote at the conclusion of the debate Friday afternoon. They planned to call for an assurance that Britain will not go to war without specific authorization from the U.N. Security Council.

Benn, one of the few vocal political opponents of the Falklands war, urged Thatcher to use extreme caution in the gulf.

''She knows the real anxiety, people think America may go to war and Britain, which is quite a minor part of the operation, will be dragged into it before the House resumes,'' he said.

Opposition Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock, who was largely supportive of Thatcher's handling of the crisis, said military action ''could shatter the unity that has been established,'' and urged that if further force is necessary, ''it should be taken under the full authority of the United Nations.''

Thatcher said U.N. Resolution 661, ''expressly affirms the inherent right of individuals to collective self-defense in response to the armed attack by Iraq against Kuwait.

''To undertake now to use no military force without the further authority of the Security Council would be to deprive ourselves of a right in international law expressly affirmed by Security Council Resolution 661, it would be to do injustice to the people of Kuwait who are unable to use effective force themselves, it would be to hand an advantage to Saddam Hussein, and it would be to put our own forces in greater peril.

''For these reason, I am not prepared to to limit our legitimate freedom of action,'' Thatcher said. ''Such a man must be stopped and we will persevere until he is.''

Kinnock said the world cannot risk letting Saddam continue to spread anti-West propaganda in the Arab world.

''The outcome that is necessary for security in the gulf and stability in the world cannot be limited only to the liberation of Kuwait, the freeing of the hostages and the removal of Saddam Hussein's ability to mount further military aggressions.

''The outcome which is necessary extends to completely depriving Saddam of any extra status and gains to his reputation in the eyes of other Arabs,'' he said.

CUMMING, GA (SEPT. 6) UPI - A ''well-mannered'' teenager from ''a very nice home'' marched into school with two guns Thursday and held 40 classmates hostage before swapping his captives for candy and soda and surrendering to police.

No one was injured in the nearly five-hour standoff at South Forsyth Middle School between police and Randy Addis, a high school junior, said Forsyth County Sheriff Wesley Walraven.

''The hostages were threatened but not injured,'' Walraven said.

Addis seized control of a classroom and up to 40 students about 8:25 a.m., a Forsyth County sheriff's dispatcher said.

After a short round of negotiations with law enforcement officers, Addis freed most of the female students. He eventually released most of the male students as well, granting them freedom in exchange for Coca- Cola and candy bars, said Joyce Shadburn, the secretary of Forstyh County School Superintendent Rick Case.

School officials said just six students were in the classroom when Addis surrendered. One of those students was a female friend who had been offered freedom but stayed inside the room in hopes of persuading Addis to surrender.

''She stayed of her own accord,'' Shadburn said. ''She knew the boy and figured she might could help some way.''

The incident began when two coaches confronted the suspect after spotting him carrying a rifle, a sheriff's dispatcher said.

Witnesses said one of the men disarmed the boy, but Addis then pulled a handgun, fired at least one shot and took students hostage in a classroom.

At one point in the negotiations, the youth demanded a bus with blackened windows.

Witnesses said the crisis ended about 2 p.m. when a hostage grabbed the weapon away from the gunman and forced Addis to surrender.

''He laid his gun on the desk,'' said an unidentified hostage. ''Some guy ... grabbed the gun and pointed it at him and said, 'It's over.'''

Officers promptly arrested Addis, a high school junior, and took him to the Forsyth County jail.

Walraven said Addis suffers from health problems. ''We would anticipate that played a part in it,'' the sheriff said.

Gloria Way, the mother of hostage Billy Way who is the suspect's best friend, said the incident could have been triggered by Addis' desire to go to Mexico.

''He's well mannered, has just super parents ... from a very nice home,'' she said. ''He just loves weapons. I don't know why. For some reason, Randy has hopes of going to Mexico. He told someone he wanted my son to go with him. I don't want my son to go to Mexico.''

Classes at South Forsyth, which houses both middle and high school students, were canceled, and parents were told to pick up their children at the front gate, Shadburn said.

Students milled around a parking lot at the opposite end of the school from where the hostages were, while waiting for their parents to pick them up.

Several parents who were unable to find their students among the crowd collapsed from heat exhaustion in the 90-degree weather.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 6) UPI - More than a month after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, the international troops deployed in the Persian Gulf region wait for their leaders to decide whether they fight.

A leading Egyptian military analyst said Thursday that their battlefield fate will be decided by their firepower, not their numbers.

U.S. forces cull electronic signals and other details from Iraqi weaponry, getting to know their potential opponent. If war erupts they hope to destroy Iraqi radars in five minutes and its air power within 36 hours, U.S. military officials in Saudi Arabia said.

''The firepower now between the two parties is uncomparable, either from the fleet in the gulf, from the airplanes, from cruise missiles and other kinds of missiles,'' said retired Maj. Gen. Ahmed Abdel Halim, of the National Center for Middle East Studies in Cairo.

Despite characterizations of a battle-tested 1 million-strong Iraqi army, forces deployed in Kuwait apparently have reached no more than 170,000 and Iraq's war experience against Iran during eight years of fighting cannot be widely used against its new opponent, Abdel Halim said.

''The reality is this kind of experience doesn't count,'' Abdel Halim said in an interview. ''The opponent is different. The nature of war is different because the experience (during the Iraq-Iran war) has been in defending in trenches.

''The weapons systems are completely different. The strategic thinking is completely different.''

The United States leads troop deployment in the region with American forces estimated at more than 40,000 to aid Saudi Arabia's 95,000-strong military. Washington plans to deploy thousands of troops more. Britain, France, Egypt, Syria, Morocco, Pakistan and Bangladesh also have stationed ground or air forces in the region and other countries have promised troops.

After a visit last week to American forces deployed in eastern Saudi Arabia, U.S. Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said Iraqi forces were in a defensive mode but were receiving reinforcements and were capable of staging a swift assault. In talks with American officers at an air base command center, the overall commander of U.S. forces in Saudi Arabia gave the Iraqi military the thumbs down.

He described Iraqi military commanders as ''a bunch of thugs'' and gave a droll assessment of Iraqi morale.

''Let's face it. If (Saddam) dares to come across that border and comes down here, I'm completely confident that we are going to kick his butt when he gets here,'' Schwarzkopf told the officers.

Questions stand out in the military scenarios of a possible confrontation: Will Iraq use chemical weapons? Will Saddam Hussein believe an attack on Israel is advantageous to Iraq?

Abdel Halim, 51, a retired major general and recipient of 1985 international fellowship to the National Defense University in Washington, D.C., considers the two options long shots.

On the issue of chemical weapons, surprise is the key and if the opponent is prepared the effect would be minimal, he said. Advanced monitoring techniques by the United States also would wipe out most possibilities for Iraq to use missiles or airplanes to deliver the chemical weapons, Abdel

Halim said.

Concerning a strike against Israel, the retired military officer said he did not believe Saddam ''is that stupid'' because such an attack would further isolate him. Arab nations siding with the West against Iraq but technically at war with Israel, would not have time to change their alliances.

The next critical date is Sunday, Sept. 9, when Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and U.S. President Bush met in Helsinki.

''Next Sunday a decision should be taken and a consensus should be reached. Meanwhile, the military preparedness goes on,'' Abdel Halim said.

Military scenarios may come to naught if diplomatic moves win out, but Saddam's unpredictability and hard-headedness remain the live wire in the crisis, Abdel Halim said.

''The solution for the whole situation is in his (Saddam's) hands,'' Abdel Halim said. ''So far he is very stubborn. Nothing has changed.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The National Association of Manufacturers predicted Thursday the U.S. economy will suffer through what would be the mildest recession in over two decades and rebound in mid-1991 despite the Middle East crisis.

"I think there's more good news than bad news," said Jerry Jasinowski, president on the industry group, in noting the United States was flirting with recession before Iraq's Aug. 2 inflation of Kuwait set off an international crisis that roiled global financial markets.

While the confrontation in the Persian Gulf is "a crisis in a political and human sense, I think it is an overstatement to indicate it is a crisis in an economic sense," he said.

The group's forecast follows Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's call to the people of Egypt and Saudi Arabia, both key U.S. allies, to overthrow their leaders and wage a holy war against the "infidels and their lackeys."

Nonetheless, as foreseen by the manufacturers, a U.S. recession would be "extremely mild, the mildest since the 1960s." This, he continued, would set the stage for a "nice, healthy rebound in 1991." Among the highlights of the manufacturers' forecast:

- Higher oil prices of approximately $24 to $27 a barrel in the wake of the invasion of Kuwait will trigger a recession starting this month that will last eight months.

- The federal budget deficit will worsen on higher military spending for Operation Desert Shield and lower tax revenues as the recession takes its toll on the domestic economy.

- The nation's trade deficit will shrink on a decline in the dollar and weaker consumer demand for imports, while exports will rebound and "show a total improvement of $40 billion," adjusted for inflation.

The forecast also warned higher energy prices will "have serious implications for economic and political stability" for the emerging democracies of Eastern Europe and "put a damper on growth" in industrialized Western Europe.

He says Bush will tape a message in the next few days which will be issued to Iraq's information minister.

Bush is traveling today to Kansas and Florida to garner support for U-S policy in the Persian Gulf. During speeches at Republican fund- raisers, Bush is expected to touch on the U-S objectives in the military build-up in the gulf after Iraq invaded Kuwait August 2nd. The gulf crisis is also among the issues to be discussed when Bush and Soviet leader Gorbachev talk Sunday in Helsinki, Finland.

The State Department says the United States hopes to begin an airlift from Kuwait within several days to evacuate 25-hundred Americans trapped in the occupied Arab state. The government says the airlift would be carried out from Kuwait through Baghdad and on to Amman, Jordan. The State Department in radio broadcasts warned American women and children in Kuwait NOT to attempt driving to Baghdad without their husbands and fathers because of ''difficulties'' they would face making the trip.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami continue tracking the growth of Tropical Storm Isadore in the eastern Atlantic. They say it could reach hurricane strength later today. The storm now packs winds of 70 miles an hour, just four miles an hour under full hurricane force. At last report, Isadore was 800 miles west of the Cape Verde islands and moving northwest at 15 miles an hour. .

The national weather report is a mixed bag of heat, rain, lightning and floods... with just about everything possible for the day. Northern Lake Michigan was swept by heavy thunderstorms that produced lightning displays and brought out storm warning flags. The West is baking under sunny skies while New England prepares for rain tomorrow.

ABOARD AIR FORCE ONE (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush made his maiden voyage Thursday aboard the new Air Force One, marveling at its high tech wonders and admitting that despite his combat pilot training ''I wouldn't understand how to start this thing.''

''This is really something, so much roomier (than the old Air Force One). My heavens,'' Bush gushed during a tour of the modified Boeing 747, the most expensive transport jet ever produced.

He made the inspection while en route from Washington to Topeka, Kan. for a GOP fundraiser.

Seated in his new rectangle office in the sky, Bush said ''this is marvelous in every way, latest technology. Certainly, very comfortable.''

Dubbed by some a ''flying Taj Mahal,'' the jumbo jet stands six stories high and is equiped with a secure worldwide communications system and anti-nuclear defense shield plus two galleys able to serve 100 meals at a sitting. It carries the same distinct blue and white color scheme chosen by President John Kennedy for the 707.

When asked as he toured the cockpit whether he had any interest in flying it, Bush, who was a torpedo bomber pilot in World War II, replied: ''I wouldn't understand how to start this thing.''

The plane, likened to the ''doomsday'' jumbo jets that were created as flying command centers in case of a nuclear war, has midair refueling capability. Asked by reporters when he might take a flight that requires in-flight refueling, the president said: ''Have plane, will travel.''

He will take his second journey on the plane Friday evening when he flies eight hours overnight to Helsinki, Finland for a Sunday summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

When he was seated at his desk in his rectangular ''office in the sky,'' Bush had his seat belt on. The belt buckle was engraved with the presidential seal.

''My pilot's training,'' he said. ''I always wear a seat belt for takeoffs and landings.''

Despite the aircraft's state-of-the art communications system, there were big glitches for wire service reporters traveling with the president. When reporters attempted to make in-flight calls to dictate stories on Bush's maiden voyage and decision to make a television broadcast to the Iraqi people, their calls were broken off three times.

The new plane, which was built by Boeing and designed by the Air Force, can hold a crew of 23 and 70 passsengers, about double capacity of the 707s.

Its wing span and deck space are 195 feet and 4,000 square feet respectively, compared with 145 feet and 1,260 feet for the old ones. It also has a complete medical unit, a built-in stairs and baggage loader.

The new presidential planes will nest at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., in a hangar built for two - and at a cost of $47 million.

The modified plane is the first of two new models of Air Force One that will replace a pair aging presidential 707's, one dating back to Kennedy, the other to Richard Nixon. The second 747 is to come on line next June.

The jetliner was two years overdue for its inaugural flight and cost an estimated $365 million over budget, but the cost-overrun was absorbed by Boeing.

Told he had done well, Bush said ''thank heavens somebody else did well for me five years ago.'' He referred to his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, who ordered the plane but never got a chance to fly in it.

During its initial flight, Air Force stewards, who are very proud of the plane, admonished cameramen ''get your feet off the wall, we're trying to keep it nice in here.''

Special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh appealed Thornburgh's actions only to lose in two courts.

A federal judge in Baltimore dismissed a three-and-a-half-Million- dollar

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Consumer caution produced lackluster performances by U.S. retailers in August, with many major companies reporting modest single-digit increases in same-store figures, analysts said Thursday. "We are seeing a slowdown in consumer spending," said Janet Magnano, vice president of research for Jesup, Josephthal & Company in New York.

"We have been seeing it for well over a year on big ticket-items such as automobiles and houses, and now it's affecting discretionary items. Consumers are exercising great caution; there are fears of a higher cost of living."

Analysts said the Middle East crisis also was responsible for dampening consumer spending, but that the domestic economy was the underlying reason for the retailers' performance.

Alan Silverman, managing director of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. in New York said, "I think it's not just Iraq. There is some economic weakness outside that."

Daniel Barry, senior vice president and retail analyst for Kidder, Peabody & Co., in New York, said the figures were a little better than he expected but indicated a continuing slowdown in the economy.

He said some retailers reported a particular slowing in sales of big-ticket items, a trend he attributed to the Middle East crisis, but that apparel had not been significantly affected. He added he saw a continuing slowing of retail sales for the rest of the year and a sluggish Christmas season before a modest upturn in 1991.

Wal-Mart Stores Inc., based in Bentonville, Ark., outperformed its major competitors Sears, Roebuck & Co. and K mart Corp., reporting revenues of $2.7 billion - a 30 percent increase over August 1989 - and a 13 percent increase in same-store sales, the figure that reflects the performance by stores open at the same time last year.

Chicago-based Sears, with revenues of $2.6 billion, reported a 4.7 percent increase in revenues and a 4.1 percent rise in same-store sales. Also among the nation's big three retailers was K mart, based in Troy, Mich., which reported a 11.1 percent increase in revenues to $2.3 billion.

"It appears to me the numbers are not exciting," said Hugh Johnson, chief economist for the First Albany Corp., in Albany, N.Y. "If you were to adjust them for inflation, some of them would be flat." He said the figures should normally be bolstered by back-to-school sales increases. "That may be the reason the stocks are performing poorly," he said.

Both Sears and K mart said apparel sales were strong, with K mart citing back-to-school sales that "more than offset some softness in electronics and other big-ticket categories." Wal-Mart was the "standout performer," Magnano said, benefiting from a strong presence outside major metropolitan areas and good merchandising.

Other apparel retailers, such as The Limited Inc., based in Columbus, Ohio, suffered from a predominance of cold-weather merchandise in the stores at a time when much of the country was experiencing warm weather, Magnano said. The Limited reported an increase of 14 percent in sales to $408.3 million, with a one percent increase in same-store sales.

San Bruno, Calif.-based retailer The Gap, however, posted a strong 14 percent increase in same-store sales and a 24 percent increase in overall revenues to $166 million for the period.

Among other major retailers, Minneapolis-based Dayton Hudson Corp. said sales were up 19.9 percent to $1.19 billion, while the same-store figure rose eight percent.

J.C. Penney, based in Dallas, reported a 1.2 percent decline in sales, with a total figure of $1.2 billion, and a same-store fall of 2.4 percent. Chairman of the Board William R. Howell said the comparison was on the basis of an "exceptionally strong" performance in August 1989. He said this year's strong sales categories included women's dresses, men's suits and men's athletic apparel, while furniture sales were off substantially.

In New York, the Woolworth Corp. reported a same-store sales increase of 2.5 percent, while overall sales rose 13.2 percent to $858 million. The May Department Stores Company in St. Louis said sales for August were up 12 percent to $762.4 million. Same-store sales were not available.

Among other retailers, Neiman-Marcus, based in Chestnut Hill, Mass., said sales were up 3.9 percent to $124.1 million, while same-store revenues fell by 1.5 percent. In Miami, Claire's Stores Inc. reported revenues increased 46 percent to a record $20.4 million, with same-store sales advancing ten percent.

Carter Hawley Hale Stores Inc. of Los Angeles reported a one percent sales increase for August to $199.7 million and a miniscule 0.1 percent in same-store sales. Sales for Charming Shoppes, Inc. of Bensalem, Pa., rose 14 percent to $72.2 million and seven percent on a same-store basis.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 6) UPI - Atlantic Richfield Co. introduced a new gasoline Thursday, touting it as the cleanest-burning high-octane automobile fuel ever made for Southern California, the nation's smoggiest region.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Lodwrick M. Cook said the gasoline, called EC-Premium, emits less benzene, carbon monoxide and reactive organic gases than conventional premiums while meeting the needs of "today's high-performance engines."

EC-Premium costs about four cents a gallon more to produce than super unleaded premium gasoline, but this cost will be absorbed by the company, Atlantic Richfield said.

"While it's costing more, the point is we're aiming at recovering by increasing our share of the market," Atlantic Richfield spokesman Douglas Elmets said.

With an octane level of 92, EC-Premium will replace Atlantic Richfield's 91-octane super-unleaded gas at more than 700 service stations and other outlets from Santa Barbara to San Diego.

EC-Premium will enable Atlantic Richfield to take "a great step toward our goal of converting all our gasolines to low-emission formulas," Cook said.

Last September, Atlantic Richfield introduced its EC-1 Regular as the nation's first reformulated gasoline. That brand, designed for older cars running on leaded regular gas, has so far reduced emissions by 73 million tons, the company said.

According to Atlantic Richfield's tests, EC-Premium will reduce emissions in Southern California's skies by 43 tons a day. "It's the best environmental gasoline out there at any price," Cook said at a news conference.

He said Atlantic Richfield is committed to converting all of its gasolines to low-emission formulas - but cautioned that could take five or six years and an investment of perhaps $2 billion.

About 18 percent of Atlantic Richfield's sales are of premium unleaded. "We felt that at least being able to put out this next slice to part of our customer base was desirable rather than waiting until we could offer it to all of our customers," Cook said.

Henry Weeda, a local air-quality official, gave Atlantic Richfield high marks for its efforts to come up with cleaner-burning fuels. "When a corporation using their own resources, imagination and initiative take unprecedented steps to reduce the amount of pollution in the air we breathe, we should all stand up and take notice," Weeda said.

With EC-Premium, Atlantic Richfield has reduced the benzene content of premium unleaded to only one percent - a drop of 55 percent from the super-unleaded brand. That reduction was achieved through refinery processing changes.

In the reformulation process, the company said it has also reduced total aromatics anolefins - a group of chemical components that react in the presence of sunlight to form smog - by 25 percent.

According to tests conducted for Atlantic Richfield at independent laboratories, EC-Premium generates 28 percent less carbon monoxide and 21 percent less exhaust hydrocarbons.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Millie, President and Mrs. Bush's English springer spaniel, is being treated for lupus, a degenerative disease, but is in ''complete remission,'' the first lady's spokeswoman said Thursday.

Speaking of the nation's No. 1 dog, spokeswoman Anna Perez said, ''She's in complete remission. She's doing fine and chasing squirrels (on the White House grounds).''

Perez said Millie is being treated for lupus, an unusual disease for canines. To doctors, the disease is known as systemic lupus erythematosus, a serious disorder of the connective tissue caused by the immune system attacking the patient's own tissue.

The symptoms most commonly associated with the ailment are arthritis and changes in the skin and internal organs.

Millie, whose life story has been recorded in a new book titled ''Millie's Book as Dictated to Barbara Bush'' will go on sale on Wednesday, has been ailing all summer.

Aides earlier said that Millie was afflicted with lead poisoning exposure from licking the solvent on her paws from paint chipped from the exterior of the White House in a two-year renovation project.

But that condition has ''corrected itself naturally,'' Perez said.

Bush recently adopted one of Millie's offspring, Ranger, as his special pet. Ranger had originally been given to Bush's son Marvin and his wife, Margaret, who have two young children.

DURHAM, NH (SEPT. 6) UPI - Troubled Data General Corp. told its 125 Durham employees Thursday it is closing its facility there by the end of the year.

The computer maker laid off 40 employees immediately and will cut another 30 or so by the time the development site is shut, probably around the end of the year, said James Dunlap, a spokesman.

Up to 55 other employees will be transferred to the company's Westboro, Mass., headquarters, where it will continue the personal computer development currently carried on at Durham, Dunlap said.

The closing and layoffs are part of a worldwide consolidation announced recently, in which the company said it plans to slash more than 2,000 workers, Dunlap said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - The U.S. government is trying to minimize the impact of the economic sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait on innocent third parties by granting limited approval to certain groups to sidestep the embargo, a Treasury official said Thursday.

"The objective of the sanctions was to deprive Iraq of any economic and financial benefits as a result of its illegal occupation of Kuwait and to preserve and protect the assets of the government of Kuwait," said the official, who requested anonymity. He was one of nearly a dozen speakers at a three-hour session sponsored by Baker & McKinsey law firm and North American International Business.

The official said the question was "how to maximize the impact of U.S. sanctions through the development and coordination of multinational activities" ... "while minimizing the effect on innocent third parties and the legitimate government (of Kuwait)."

President Bush, after the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq, issued two executive orders that imposed an economic embargo against Iraq and blocked both Iraqi and Kuwaiti government property within U.S. jurisdiction or under the control of American citizens.

On Aug. 6 the U.N. Security Council voted to impose sweeping economic sanctions agaist Iraq and Kuwait. The Treasury official said Bush also extended to Kuwait all economic sanctions in effect against Iraq, "bringing this program into conformity."

He said the U.S. government has issued licenses, giving access to frozen assets to some third parties, particularly the Kuwaiti government in exile. "Most of the licenses granted by the United States arise from the need to safeguard and preserve the value of existing frozen assets," he said.

"Licenses have been either general, that is, applicable to defined categories or transactions ... or specific, that is, applicable to individual situations such as unblocking of specific accounts used by the legitimate government of Kuwait." But he said there were safeguards "to assure transactions ... no way benefit the government of Iraq."

The official said most of the licenses issued so far arise from the need to safeguard the value of existing frozen assets of the government of Kuwait. "These are the investments themselves that would cause immediate and unneccesary diminution of the value of the assets, that would cause irreparable harm by forcing immediate liquidation of property ... such as fixed assets."

He also said the U.S. government is "coordinating closely" with the Bank of England on the sanctions issue. Kuwait's foreign investment arm, Kuwait Investment Organization, is based in London.

The United States also is working with foreign enforcement offices, such as Japan's Ministry of International Trade and Industry, to make the sanctions stick. "We are seeking to reduce conflict between states," he said. "We need U.N. members to cooperate fully."

To that end, he said, "We are working to establish guidelines such as used in the programs concerning Cuba and Panama. We are seeking to reduce transfers (of assets) where there may be weak compliance. We are working to develop common lists of agencies ... to adopt common definitions."

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA (SEPT. 6) UPI - More than 120 underground nuclear tests and 44 atmospheric tests conducted by France over the past 24 years have rocked the palm-covered Polynesian atoll of Monuroa, killing people, causing birth defects and contaminating food, a recently published book claims.

Despite the devastation the tests have caused the French territory in the Eastern Pacific, few victims have spoken out because they feared punishment from the government, according to the book's author, Swiss doctor Andy Biedermann.

The 72-page book, ''Testimonies - Witnesses of French Testing in the South Pacific,'' is published by the Greenpeace environmental group, of which Biedermann is a member.

The book, based on interviews with people who have worked at Moruroa or lived on neighboring islands, describes harmful effects the tests have had on the more than 166,750 people living on the 130 islands of French Polynesia.

Through interviews, mostly with Polynesians, it speaks of mysterious illness, unexplained death, stillbirths and a startling increase in children born with mental handicaps since the testing began in 1966.

Tehiura, 68, is one interviewee. Tehiura worked as a docker at Moruroa during the early stages of the nuclear testing and describes a day he and his friend, Basinas, worked near a contaminated zone shortly after an explosion.

''After lunch, he (Basinas) went and got some shellfish and a coconut to eat and then, only a few hours later, he became sick,'' Tehiura said in the book. ''He vomited and had diarrhea and his body started to itch all over. He scratched himself so much he had sores all over.''

Basinas was taken to a hospital. His condition worsened and, according to Tehiura, he was secretly removed from area upon his death.

''I know of other people with similar problems who vanished,'' Tehiura said.

The book was released in New Zealand and excerpts were made available in Australia. French officials, both in Wellington and Canberra, have declined to comment on the publication.

''Sometimes we had to work in the contaminated zones and we got extra money and worked shorter hours if we did,'' said Manutahi, who worked as welder on Moruroa. ''That was because of the radiation danger and the main problem was inhaling the radioactive particles.''

The tests, which the book charges are still being conducted at a rate of six per year, also poisoned most of the area's fish supply, on which the islanders depended heavily for food.

Many people livng near the Moruroa died from food posioning after eating contaminated fish, the book said. It also charged that the rate of stillbirths and children born with mental handicaps increased substancially since the testing began.

The book said the tests so polluted the land of Moruroa and nearby islands that they would unlikely sustain life again.

Dr. Biedermann, who was expelled from the territory for alleged ''interference'' in French defense affairs, charges the devastation goes beyond health problems.

His book describes the testing as a ''social bomb'' and says much of the current inflation, unemployment and slum conditions in Tahiti can be attributed to the economic distortions and social upheavel caused by the nuclear test program.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney disclosed Thursday that the United States now has ''over 100,000 U.S. military personnel'' in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf region as part of Operation Desert Shield.

It was the first time that Cheney or any Bush administration official has publicly stated the number of U.S. troops sent to the Middle East since the military operation began one month ago.

Speaking to a meeting of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in Hot Springs, Va., Cheney said, ''In about a month now we've deployed over 100,000 U.S. military personnel and their equipment to Saudi Arabia and the surrounding states, the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea.''

Cheney's remarks, which were broadcast to the Pentagon, came as he praised the U.S. ability to dispatch large numbers of troops quickly to a potential area of conflict.

Pentagon officials who have asked not to be identified said there are about 70,000 U.S. ground forces in Saudi Arabia, and that about 150,000 total are expected to be in place by the first week of October.

Cheney, with his references to the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea, included naval forces in his number. The United States has more than 50 warships in the region, including three aircraft carriers with a crew of 5,000 each.

Cheney said the military buildup in Saudi Arabia would continue and he defended the deployment of the large number of U.S. troops to the deserts and seas of the Middle East.

''The worst sin of all would be for us to deploy forces out there that could get into trouble but not strong enough to deal with any eventuality that may arise,'' he said.

In response to a question, Cheney said President Bush gave the military a threefold mission: to deter an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia; to defend the oil-rich sheikdom should deterrence fail; and to enforce the U.N. economic sanctions against Iraq.

''We've not been given an offensive assignment (to attack Iraq),'' he added.

He also defended the efforts by the Bush administration to seek help, financially or militarily, from its allies and friends around the world for Operation Desert Shield.

''It is appropriate for us to remind our friends around the world ... that in fact, there's no free lunch here,'' Cheney said, adding that some nations need to be told to ''step up to the counter and contribute more than some of them have indicated they'd be prepared to contribute.''

MOSCOW (SEPT. 6) UPI - Crews of nuclear-powered ice-breaking ships staged a brief strike Thursday and quickly won their demands for hard currency payments and other benefits, the official Tass news agency reported.

Tass said the icebreakers came to a halt on the northern sea route where they prepare the way for supply ships heading for the Chukchi Peninsula and the Siberian coast.

''The strike resulted from the government's refusal to meet the demands of sailors working in the arctic for parity with their colleagues sailing abroad,'' Tass said.

The icebreaker crews were angry that sailors on transport vessels receive part of their pay in hard currency while those on the icebreakers that clear the way for the freighters from Europe to Asia were paid only in Soviet rubles.

Tass reported later Thursday that Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov signed an order granting their demand for hard-currency pay and the sailors returned to work.

Crews had threatened to shut down the nuclear reactors on the icebreakers if their demands are not met within 24 hours, Tass said.

AMMAN, JORDAN (SEPT. 6) UPI - International aid agencies Wednesday announced new contributions of food, medicine and other relief in the struggle to help tens of thousands of Asians stranded with little food and water in camps in Jordan and its desert border with Iraq.

The new assistance came as thousands more refugees from Kuwait and Iraq reportedly poured into the tiny kingdom, whose limited resources have been severely strained by the massive exodus sparked by the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Officals put the total number of refugees in camps in Jordan and the 30-mile ''no man's land'' strip between its frontier and the Iraqi border at more than 120,000, an estimated 80,000 of them in three desert camps.

Virtually all of the refugees are from India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, the Philippines and Thailand, and worked in manual labor or service industry jobs in Kuwait, from which they have fled for fear of war or lack of work.

Jordan is restricting the number of refugees from entering its territory until a reduction in the massive backlog of people who have accumulated in camps in Amman and other areas because of insufficient repatriation programs.

International efforts to provide relief and repatriation flights have been slow in gearing up for lack of funds and because Jordan did not request assistance from the United Nations and other donors until Aug. 22.

The World Food Program announced that it was transfering 50 tons of rice from its stocks in Bangladesh to Jordan to help feed refugees. It said the supplies would arrive Thursday night on the return flight of an Soviet-made Antonov aircraft that brought hundreds of Bangladeshis to Dhaka on Wednesday.

The aircraft has been chartered by the International Organization for Migration, which is coordinating repatriation flights that are ferrying an estimated 6,000 people home per day.

The WFP said Bangladesh agreed speedily to the rice transfer and permitted free-of-charge loading.

It said it is providing another 3,000 tons of food from its stocks in Amman.

The organization said it is planning to bring in a 250,000-ton shipment of rice next week from Thailand and buy 216 tons of red lentils from Syria.

The U.N. International Childrens Education Fund said it was kicking off a second phase of a relief program that will involve providing 36 water tanks, 6,000 jerry cans, 60,000 bars of soap and other goods.

It said it had also begun installing latrines and water tanks at two camps in Jordan and at new camp in the desert strip.

The group said it has already distribute 13 tons of antibiotics, blankets and tents.

A delegation from the European Economic Community arrived in Amman for talks with Jordanian officials on the gulf crisis and the refugee problem. The EEC has provided aid totaling $29 million and plans to contribute $19 million more.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says President Bush intends to take the Iraqi government up on its offer to appear on Iraqi television. Speaking to reporters aboard Air Force One, Fitzwater says Bush views the unprecedented offer from Baghdad as- quote- ''a real opportunity'' to inform the Iraqi public why U-S military forces are positioned in the Persian Gulf.

Fitzwater says the president will provide Iraq's information minister with a videotaped message in the next few days. When asked if he thought Iraq would withdraw the offer, Fitzwater said Washington would accept Baghdad's offer at face value. The message could be broadcast to the Iraqi public sometime next week.

Iraq today said its troops shot an American man in Kuwait... breaking his leg. Baghdad Radio quoted the Iraqi director of information as saying the shooting ''was a mistake.''

British Prime Minister Thatcher today told Parliament that she is considering sending more military forces to the Persian Gulf. She rejected a proposal by Opposition Labor leader Neil Kinnock to limit further military action to that approved by the United Nations.

The standoff continues between an armed teen-ager and authorites in Cumming, Georgia. The suspect, identified as 17-year-old Randy Addis, reportedly took a classroom of fellow students hostage earlier today. A spokeswoman for South Forsyth Middle School says the suspect has freed all but six students... but adds that talks with the youth have stalled.

PONTIAC, MI (SEPT. 6) UPI - General Motors Corp.'s Oldsmobile division, in an effort to bolster dealer profits and reverse a dramatic drop in sales, announced Thursday a used-car warranty plan covering selected 1984-91 cars, including non-GM models.

The program, called "Value-Rated Edge," represents an expansion of Oldsmobile's customer satisfaction efforts and covers dealer-selected cars with under 50,000 miles.

Under the program, buyers are allowed to return their vehicles within 30 days or 1,000 miles for repair, free of charge, of any problem that should have been corrected by the dealer prior to the sale.

Also offered is a one-year/12,000-mile warranty covering any major components with a $100 deductible in effect, as well as one year of emergency road and towing service.

The bulk of Oldsmobile's 3,000 dealers are expected to offer the used-car guarantee, which, unlike new-car warranties, is good only at the place of purchase.

Oldsmobile General Manager J. Michael Losh, during a preview of the division's 1991 models at GM's Orion Assembly plant in Pontiac, Mich., said the Value-Rated plan is unprecedented at GM and should bolster new-car sales as well.

"This helps strengthen our dealer network and increases the involvement in used cars," Losh said, adding the used-car warranty may also familiarize potential buyers with a nearby Oldsmobile dealer when it comes time to buy new.

Each car must undergo an inspection and certification under Oldsmobile's program. Several other carmakers, mostly import brands like Jaguar and BMW have also been offering used-car programs under which selected vehicles are thoroughly reconditioned before resale.

Oldsmobile's dealers, who experienced a dramatic decline in profitability during the late 1980s, have managed to reverse that trend recently, Losh said, adding that 70 percent of dealers are now profitable and profits per dealer are up. But that is mostly because dealers are carrying less inventory and have restructured their own operations to the lower sales levels.

Dealers are apparently optimistic about the used-car program. It could help them remain profitable at a time when most are losing money on new-car sales in a brutally competitive market saturated with costly buyer incentives and are instead being supported by their service and used-car operations.

Losh, blaming the general industry decline and intensified competition, said he expects Oldsmobile's sales of 1990-model vehicles to shrink to about 500,000 cars and 21,000 vans by the close of the current model year this month, for about 5.5 percent of the total U.S. car market.

That marks a 20.2 percent decline from the 1989-model year, when it sold 653,127 units, for a 6.4 percent share of the U.S. car market - and a 52.6 percent plunge from a high of 1,098,685 cars sold during the 1984-model year, when it commanded 10.7 percent of the market.

Losh declined to make a sales prediction for the 1991-model year but said

Oldsmobile is looking for a slight rise in market share. "Our primary focus is to improve our share of the market," he said, adding that Oldsmobile's "new vision" is to offer "smart, contemporary vehicles that are refined, innovative, responsive and balanced."

New in Oldsmobile's lineup for 1991 is an aerodynamically styled version of its full-size, V8-powered Custom Cruiser station wagon, which starts at $20,495. Also new is the Bravada, Oldsmobile's first sport-utility vehicle based on the four-door Chevrolet Blazer and starting at $23,795. Oldsmobile's other 1991-models range in price from the Cutlass Calais compact ($10,295), to the Toronado Trofeo luxury coupe ($26,495).

DENVER (SEPT. 6) UPI - Doug Moe, whose 10 years with the Denver Nuggets marked the longest tenure among active NBA coaches, Thursday was fired as head coach.

The decision came Wednesday night at a meeting between Moe and several members of the Nuggets' front office staff. It was agreed that it would be in the team's best interests for Moe to leave, said Nuggets General Manager Bernie Bickerstaff.

''Last evening we sat down and discussed the pros and cons of the Denver Nuggets, and we all came to the conclusion that this was the best for all parties involved,'' Bickerstaff said. There was no immediate word from the team on who Moe's successor would be but former Atlanta Hawks Coach Mike Fratello's name has surfaced. Fratello this past summer signed to be part of NBC's inaugural NBA coverage team.

''We fully expect Mike Fratello to be part of our NBA telecasts this year '' NBC spokesman Ed Markey said.

Moe, who has been the Nuggets' head coach since the 1980-81 season, produced two division winners, and was named NBA Coach of the Year in 1988. He leaves with an overall coaching record of 609-492.

''I feel good about it,'' Moe said. ''I've been here for 10 years. For me it's been a great run, a great relationship. And I look forward to the future.''

Moe said he had no immediate plans to take another coaching job, but would consider an offer if one is forthcoming.

''My tenure with Doug Moe has been very, very short,'' said Bickerstaff, who took over the team's front office in July. ''My respect for him has not wavered at all, in fact it's been enhanced.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - To describe Martha Griffiths as outspoken is an understatement - and the Michigan lieutenant governor and ardent feminist did nothing Thursday to diminish that reputation now that she's in the midst of a political uproar in her state.

The 78-year-old Democrat, a former congresswoman, minced few words in a National Press Club appearance that concentrated on women's rights but also touched on subjects ranging from the deficit to the Persian Gulf.

And at each turn, the feisty Griffiths found a way to turn the subject to her lifelong argument that women have gotten a raw deal from a society dominated by white males.

''Hell, no,'' she said when asked if President Bush had done enough for women's rights.

''Absolutely,'' she declared when queried about whether women could do a better job at cutting the deficit than the male-dominated Congress. ''I was in purchasing in the Army. There isn't a woman on Earth who would pay $600 for a toilet seat.''

And her advice to women about what to do to when they run across judges who they fear are not protecting women's rights: ''Forget about whether he's in your party or the other party. He's an idiot. Try to recall him.''

''America was born out of the anguish and pain of women. Many died in childbirth. No bands ever played, no tributes ever sounded over the graves of these women,'' she declared. ''Memorials and tributes were niceties reserved for men who died killing other men.''

The only area in which Griffiths tread lightly was her own situation in Michigan, where Gov. Jim Blanchard in essence dumped her from his re-election ticket.

Asked why she was still supporting Blanchard, she noted, ''Well, he's been a good governor - and I know the other guy.''

She also repeated a line she has used before, trying to explain her feelings about Blanchard. ''I really didn't call him an S.O.B,'' Griffiths noted. ''All I said was one of the first problems of politics was that you help some son of a bitch and then he throws you off the wagon.''

KANSAS CITY, MO (SEPT. 6) UPI - The owners of Franklin Savings Association, who regained control of the thrift Thursday after a six-month conservatorship, said they would continue the business policies that were in place before the government took control. However, observers said they face problems that began well before the Office of Thrift Supervision took over Franklin.

The Resolution Trust Corp., which managed Franklin during the conservatorship, relinquished control of the Ottawa, Kan., thrift Thursday morning under orders from a federal judge.

U.S. District Judge Dale Saffels of Topeka, Kan., ruled the OTS had no statutory grounds for imposing a conservatorship on Franklin on Feb. 16. In an opinion issued Wednesday, he said the savings and loan was not insolvent, and there was no fraud, corruption, or self-dealing by Franklin management. The key issue in the case, Saffels said, was a dispute over proper accounting procedures.

Franklin will essentially remain under the court's jurisdiction for 90 days. A second OTS takeover during that time would require Saffels' approval. The OTS Thursday sought a stay of Saffels' order in an appeal filed with the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver.

The agency, citing Franklin's reliance on "high-risk assets financed by... brokered deposits" said in a statement Wednesday it acted properly in taking over Franklin, "an institution that was being operated with insufficient capital and in an unsafe and unsound manner." The OTS also said Franklin had depleted its capital with no prospect for replenishment without federal assistance.

Franklin, with $11.4 billion in assets at the time of the takeover, was considered an innovator in the thrift industry because of its hedging and arbitrage practices. The thrift, Kansas's largest, had moved away from the traditional S&L focus on home loans.

Franklin officer John Scowcroft, president of Franklin Savings Corp., the thrift's parent, said Thursday Franklin Savings would continue to be run as it was before the conservatorship.

"We had all our business policies pretty well laid out. We bought assets that had minimal risk and hedged their interest rate risk. All those policies were not questioned," he said. "Like the judge said, it boiled down to an accounting issue, which the judge basically agreed with us on. We'll be taking the same basic approach and just apply it to the situation we find here."

Scowcroft said he and Chief Executive Officer Ernest Fleischer, who returned as senior management, were told there were "no emergencies" at the thrift and that Franklin has adequate liquidity.

But a financial analyst at Ely & Co. in Alexandria, Va., Bert Ely, said he thought Franklin was insolvent when the OTS took over and continued to lose ground under government control.

"My sense is they're (owners) not going to be able to turn it around," he said Thursday. He said Franklin had problems before February, citing negative net interest margins at the thrift in three of the last five quarters before the OTS takeover.

"They weren't making it, and for very good reason," Ely said. "All good arbitrages come to an end. They never found an encore. Basically what happened is they kept searching for new ways to make money, couldn't find them, and made mistakes and took losses."

Jack Gaumnitz, finance professor at the University of Kansas, said Franklin's owners have no choice but to follow their previous business practices, "given the nature of their investments."

Gaumnitz said he has not seen Franklin's results for the three months ended in June, but does not expect them to be positive. "I think they've got a Herculean task that they have to face to avoid the government authorities in the future," he said.

Gaumnitz said Franklin needs to address a number of problems, including the OTS's refusal during the conservatorship to pay interest on bonds issued by Franklin.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - Stocks closed sharply lower Thursday as oil prices staged a relentless advance, but trading, as has been the case for more than a week, remained very light.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 14.85 Wednesday, tumbled 31.93 to close at 2596.29. The Dow was down as much as 44 points at its low.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index eased 1.87 to 176.06. The price of an average share fell 32 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 3.93 to 320.46.

Declines led advances 951-506 among the 1,948 issues crossing the NYSE tape. Volume amounted to about 125,620,000 shares, up slightly from the 120,610,000 traded Wednesday.

Stocks drifted with modest losses until midmorning, when the market extended its losses as oil prices began to rise sharply. October crude-oil futures closed up $1.66 to $31.43, breaking the $30- and $31-a- barrel marks.

Analysts said the steady advance revived fears of inflation and concerns that the Federal Reserve, even though faced with a faltering economy, may be caught between a rock and a hard place - unable to cut interest rates.

Certain market sectors and stocks were hit especially hard in the sharp decline, with weak August sales reports making it a tough day for major retailers. In the technology sector, Motorola plunged more than 10 percent amid reports that analysts at several brokerages have expressed concerns about the strength of its business in a weakening economy.

But Dennis Jarrett, chief market strategist at Kidder, Peabody & Co., downplayed the significance of the marekt's decline, citing the very light volume.

"People were not throwing stock away, not dumping stock, not with 125 million shares traded," he said. "And I guess I'm looking at the glass as half full, but given how much oil has come up in the last few days it oculd be worse."

Jarrett acknowledged the steep rise in oil prices, but he attributed the drop in stocks to "an absence of buyers stepping in. "When the market stabilized over the last three or four days, it seemed to be because sellers weren't around rather than any great buying.

The Dow has closed within a trading range of about 40 points since the start of last week. The key to whether stocks will move sharply higher or lower, said Jarrett, "will be whether buyers or sellers get a catalyst first. Till then, we could run in place."

On the trading floor, Motorola was the most active issue, plunging 7 5/8 to 61 1/2. The Limited followed, down 1 1/8 to 15 5/8. The retailer reported a rise of just one percent in August sales among stores open at least a year.

Wal-Mart was third, down 7/8 to 27 1/2, after reporting a 30 percent rise in sales from August 1989 but a rise of only 13 percent in sales at stores open more than a year. Exxon was also active, off 1/2 to 50 3/8, despite the rise in oil prices.

Among other retailers, J.C. Penney lost one to 45 7/8, K mart fell 3/8 to 27 1/8, Sears dropped 1/2 to 29, and Woolworth fell 7/8 to 24 1/2.

Among the blue chips, AT&T fell 5/8 to 31 1/2 and IBM lost 1/8 to 102 3/8, while Merck lost 1 3/8 to 79 7/8, General Motors slumped 7/8 to 37 3/8, and Coca- Cola fell 1 1/4 to 41 1/4.

Other oil companies were mixed, but among the gainers were Texaco, which added 1/4 to 64, and Mobil, which advanced 1/2 to 66 1/4.

Elsewhere, Valhi tumbled 1 1/8 to 10 1/4 after a deal was announced to merge with NL Industries valued at about $411 million. Valhi already owns about 66 percent of NL. The two companies are controlled by Dallas investor Harold Simmons.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 152,685,590 shares, compared with 144,643,050 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices fell in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index lost 0.91 to 324.59. Declines led advances 308-197 among the 758 issues traded. The price of an average share fell three cents. Composite volume totaled 12,128,400 shares vs. 12,050,000 traded Wednesday. PaineWebber's call warrants on the Tokyo market's Nikkei index led the Amex issues, up 7/8 to 8 3/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 3.66 to 378.78.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - Assets of the nation's 520 money market mutual funds fell by $770.0 million to $406.55 billion in the week ended Wednesday, the Investment Company Institute reported Thursday. Average fund yields dropped.

The Washington-based institute said broker-dealer fund assets decreased $410.9 million to $164.96 billion, assets of general purpose funds increased $422.6 million to $143.69 billion and institutional fund assets fell $781.7 million to $97.90 billion.

"Relative stability of stock and bond prices in the last two weeks has found its reflection in the moderation of weekly changes in the level of money market fund assets," said Jacob Dreyer, vice president and chief economist at the institute.

"After seven weeks of sharp increases during which these assets rose $25 billion, last week, like the week before, assets shrank by some three quarters of a billion dollars. Also as the week before, the entire decline occurred among institutional funds."

Mutual fund assets were revised for Aug. 29 to $407.32 billion. The increase reported Aug. 29 was revised to $679.3 million.

The Investment Company Institute, a national association of the American investment company industry, reports the assets of money market funds to the Federal Reserve Board each week.

The Donoghue Organization, of Holliston, Mass., said average seven- day simple yields were 7.47 percent, down from 7.48, and 30-day simple yields eased to 7.49 percent from 7.50 the previous week. The average maturity of fund portfolios was 46 days, up from 45.

The Bank Rate Monitor, of North Palm Beach, Fla., gave average rates as follows: money market deposit accounts, 5.89 unchanged; Super- Now accounts, 4.97 percent, down from 4.98; six-month certificates of deposit, 7.51 percent, down from 7.53 percent; 1-year CDs, 7.61 percent, down from 7.62; 2 1/2-year CDs, 7.67 percent, down from 7.69; and five- year CDs, 7.79 percent, down from 8.80.

The average rate for a one-year, adjustable-rate mortgage was 8.28 percent down from 8.30 percent.

The average rate on a 15-year, fixed-rate mortgage fell in the latest week to 9.77 percent from 9.81 and the average rate for a 30- year, fixed-rate mortgage fell to 10.08 percent from 10.12.

The average rate for a four-year automobile loan was 12.26 percent, down from 12.27 percent.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - The dollar closed generally lower against major world currencies in lackluster trading Thursday, as traders braced for Friday'srelease of U.S. employment figures for August.

Late in the New York trading session, the dollar was quoted at 1.5565 German marks, off from 1.5585 Wednesday, and at 140.65 Japanese yen, off from 141.65 Wednesday.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.2975 Swiss francs, up from 1.2955; 5.2150 French francs, down from 5.2205; and 1,161.50 Italian lire, down from 1,162.50. The British pound fell to $1.9125 from $1.9404 Wednesday.

Many market participants remained sidelined to await the U.S. employment data, expected to reflect more evidence of a slumping domestic economy, due to be released Friday morning, analysts said. Many - but not all - have expected a weak employment report could prompt the Federal Reserve to ease up on monetary policy.

"There's a small touch of squaring, a little short covering of some positions in front of tomorrow's figures," said Bob Hinton, vice president of foreign exchange at Harris Trust & Savings Bank.

Anticipation of a Fed easing was "making people a little bit jittery," he said. However, he and other analysts said they were finding a growing scepticism that the Fed would have enough leeway to ease, despite the employment numbers.

Comments by Fed Chairman Alan Greenspan, who said battling inflation would continue to be a priority in policy setting, added to the scepticism, they said.

Given Greenspan's comments and the day's rise in oil prices, "I think we would have to say that tomorrow's easing will not take place unless it is an incredibly bad number," said Michael Guarino, chief dealer at Algemene Bank Nederland. "I think the dollar will head up as the economic numbers don't point to Fed easing," Guarino said.

In European trading, the U.S. dollar fell against most major currencies despite Greenspan's signal that interest rates may not fall in the near future.

Analysts said the U.S. unit surged early in the day after Greenspan made his remarks but weakened again because of underlying fears of a downturn in the U.S. economy and costs associated with the nation's military presence in the Gulf.

The dollar lost ground in light trading in Frankfurt, down to 1.5590 German marks from Wednesday's close of 1.5625, and was lower in Zurich, at 1.3010 Swiss francs vs. 1.3035. In London, the pound ended higher against the dollar, at $1.9070 from $1.8975.

The dollar slipped in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively: 5.2055 French francs vs. 5.2420, 32.010 Belgian francs vs. 32.185 and 1,158.9 Italian lire vs. 1,168.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar fell to its lowest level this year against the yen, brought about by selling pressure triggered by concern about an interest rate cut in the United States and by the Persian Gulf crisis.

The dollar closed at 141.65 yen, down from Wednesday's closing rate of 142.30,the Bank of Japan said.

Foreign-exchange dealers said the market's volatile movements reflected concern about the timing of the Fed cutting interest rates and by the murkysituation in the Persian Gulf.

Dealers said institutional investors, mainly banks and insurance firms, were seen selling the dollar actively to purchase the yen.

Gold closed higher in both Zurich, at $387.50 an ounce against Wednesday's $386.50, and in London, at $389.75 an ounce against $387.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $390 an ounce, up from $387.25 Wednesday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $389.70 an ounce, up from $386.10.

Silver closed in Zurich at $4.80 an ounce, up from $4.75, and was up in London at $4.89 an ounce vs. $4.79.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.795 an ounce, up from $4.77. Comex silver finished at $4.77 an ounce, up from $4.735.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Securities and Exchange Commission filed a civil suit Thursday against Power Securities Corp., accusing the Las Vegas penny-stock firm of fraud and of raking in millions of dollars in illegal profits. A spokesman for the firm was not available for comment, and an SEC investigator said the company was no longer involved in retail sales.

The action named Chief Executive Officer Richard Marchese, as well as Eric Monchecourt, a vice president, and Orville Sandberg, the firm's former president, and a number of former employees and business associates.

The SEC said the National Association of Securities Dealers assisted in the investigation leading to the civil suit. The government alleged that Power Securities and the others "engaged in an unlawful scheme to mislead and defraud the investing public" from late in 1987 to the autumn of 1988.

The SEC accused the firm of "knowingly or recklessly inducing customers to invest in selected low-price securities, commonly referred to as 'penny stocks,' through the use of materially false or misleading statements or omissions."

The agency also charged that Power Securities and the others made "investment recommendations without a reasonable basis in fact" and used "high-pressured, coercive sales practices."

The defendants were also accused of insider trading in certain securities, manipulating stock prices and failing to make disclosures required by federal securities regulations.

Among other things, the SEC said that the firm engaged in activity called "flipping," in which which brokers "simultaneously recommend to customers the sale of one security and the purchase of another for the purpose of increasing commissions."

"The 'flips' occurred when the (brokers) offered to buy a customer's security at a premium price higher than the bid price in order to induce the customer to sell and purchase new securities," the SEC said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The government sued ABC television and the College Football Association Thursday for allegedly violating antitrust laws in a deal to televise dozens of Saturday football games.

ABC Sports disputed the FTC charges, calling them ''completely without merit.''

The Federal Trade Commission charged the CFA broke the law by forming a cartel of the nation's best college football teams, including such powerhouses as Miami, Texas, Oklahoma, Alabama and Nebraska and 58 other schools. ABC bought the exclusive rights to telecast CFA games on Saturday afternoons and evenings from 1991 to 1995.

''Every major football team in the nation except Notre Dame has signed up '' said Steven Newborn of the FTC's Bureau of Competition. Notre Dame signed an exclusive contract with NBC to broadcast its home games.

The FTC also charged that Capital Cities/ABC Inc., the corporate parent of ABC, was party to the violation by signing the contract with the CFA.

During the key Saturday afternoon and evening viewing time for college football games, even local stations, syndicates and cable television operators would not be allowed to broadcast CFA games. Outside that time period, individual CFA schools are free to make their own deals with broadcasters.

The contract prohibits other networks, CBS and NBC, from televising CFA games at any time.

The government contends that the CFA-ABC agreement deprives viewers of choices between televised games that would result from a more competitive environment.

In a statement, ABC Sports said its agreement with the CFA ''is designed to offer a broad selection of college football games to the widest possible audience. The number and quality of games available to viewers will benefit viewers, advertisers and college football,'' ABC said.

ABC plans to televise 55 games during the 1991 college football season compared with 42 games scheduled to be televised by ABC and CBS in 1990, according to an ABC spokesman.

ABC also has signed exclusive, long-term contracts to broadcast Big Ten Conference and Pacific Ten Conference football games.

''ABC has monopolized college football on Saturdays,'' Newborn said.

If the FTC rules that antitrust laws have been broken, after formal proceedings and hearings, it could rescind the CFA-ABC agreement.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - It looks like a natural match - a huge U.S. wheat crop at the same time some Soviet stores reportedly are running short on bread - but there are obstacles to the idea of selling more U.S. wheat to the Kremlin.

The Soviet Union, in the middle of harvesting its own near-record crop, has shown little interest in buying foreign grain. There have been reports the Soviets are short on cash.

The situation has prompted some farm organizations, including the National Association of Wheat Growers, to suggest the Bush administration should let the Kremlin take advantage of U.S. short-term export credit guarantees.

''It's becoming evident the Soviets are in dire need of food supplies,'' said Carl Schwensen, the group's executive director. ''We see this as an opportunity to stimulate U.S. exports while meeting the near-term needs of the Soviets.''

Although the Wheat Growers and the U.S. Feed Grains Council urged speedy action to make the credits available, administration officials have indicated there may be no concrete action at this weekend's summit meeting in Helsinki.

Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter said there has been no change in the U.S. position that Soviet emigration laws must be revised before the Kremlin could qualify for U.S. credit programs. A subordinate, who asked not to be identified, flatly dismissed speculation that a credit package would be offered at Helsinki.

However, Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kan., said President Bush should use the summit meeting to grant most-favored-nation trade status to the Soviet Union and to offer export credits.

''We can achieve our goals through a Soviet assurance on immigration from President (Mikhail) Gorbachev, enabling us to waive current Jackson-Vanik restrictions on trade,'' Roberts said in a letter to Bush.

Congressional staff workers and spokesmen for two farm organizations said there was no indication the administration was considering other possible steps if export credits were out of the question.

The Kremlin has not responded to a U.S. offer last June to sell 2 million tons of wheat at subsidized prices.

U.S. wheat prices have slumped in recent weeks because of the bumper crop and a slowdown in exports.

Analyst Andy Billingham of World Perspectives, a consulting group, said the Kremlin may not re-enter the world market until it has a chance to assess its domestic grain supply. In that case, he said, the precise timing of a U.S. offer of export credits is not so important. There is a widely held view the credits eventually will be offered.

During an interview, Billingham noted the factors that could encourage U.S. action: the Gulf crisis, a desire for successful Soviet economic reforms and steps taken so far to guarantee free emigration.

The Soviet Union has announced a number of reforms in the past year, including higher prices and, in some cases, payment in ''hard'' currency, to encourage farmers to sell more of their grain to the state.

A recent report from the U.S. agricultural attache in Moscow said with the harvest half-over, the Kremlin had procured 47 percent of the grain it had ordered. Soviet estimates of a bountiful crop have been clouded by reports of fuel and equipment shortages, as well as shipping snafus.

Even with a huge crop, the Soviets are projected to import 30 million tons of grain.

The American Farm Bureau and the National Corn Growers Association favor most-favored-nation status for the Kremlin, spokesmen said, but noted U.S. concern on emigration reform.

''Our hopes ... are tempered by realization of the position of the administration,'' said Farm Bureau spokesman Don Lipton. ''We're not telling the administration to abrogate Jackson-Vanik.''

(SEPT 6) - Crude oil prices shot up by more than a $1 a barrel and gasoline by nearly 3 cents a gallon Thursday as oil markets reacted to news of Iraqi troops shooting an American in Kuwait.

The value of U.S. crude has now increased $5.51 a barrel, or 21.2 percent, in the last five trading sessions, and analysts look for a further rise Friday.

''The market seems to have reacted to the shooting of an American in Kuwait. It's caused people to believe there will be some sort of retalition,'' said Robert Baker, senior energy analyst with Pruudential-Bache Securities Inc. in New York.

''It started overnight. The shooting of the American affected Asian and European markets, and that set the tone,'' said Michael Broder of Dean Witter Reynolds' International Energy Futures Group in New York.

Around midday, the market received an added boost when Iraq's Justice Minister was quoted as saying any foreigner caught trying to escape without an exit visa would be jailed for a term up to life, said Chris Bray of Paine Webber Inc., Andover, Mass.

''I think the market's going to go a lot higher,'' Bray said.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi government confirmed its troops shot an American man in Kuwait, calling the shooting an accident.

''Iraqi forces fired at an American national, breaking his leg,'' Baghdad radio quoted Iraqi information director Naji al Hadithi as saying. ''This was a mistake,'' al Hadithi said.

A friend of the injured American told U.S. consular officials the man was shot in the arm, not his leg, as he tried to flee his Kuwait City hotel room Wednesday during a roundup of Americans.

In addition to the jailing of foreigners caught trying to escape, Iraq's Justice Minister Akram Abdelkader Aliwas was quoted as saying that under a new Iraqi law they would also suffer confiscation of their property and other unnamed measures.

President Bush has said he would hold Iraqi President Saddam Hussein responsible for the welfare of U.S. and other Western hostages in Iraq and Kuwait, being held to guard against attack by a U.S.-led multinational force in the region.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery jumped $1.66 over Wednesday's close to $31.43 a barrel in trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange. WTI has risen in five consecutive Merc sessions from the $25.92-a-barrel settlement of Aug. 29.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery shot up 2.80 cents to 95.07 cents a gallon after trading as high as 95.75 cents a gallon.

Home heating oil added 4.87 cents to 88.24 cents a gallon.

On the European spot market, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped mainly to the Far East - edged up 10 cents to $27.80 a barrel, adding to its Wednesday rise of $1.10 a barrel.

Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent climbed $1.10 to $32.65 a barrel.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI gained $1.70 to $31.45 a barrel.

Three companies - Sun Co. of Radnor, Pa., as well as Du Pont's Houston-based Conoco Inc. subsidiary Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp. -raised the posted price they will pay for WTI - Sun by $1.50 to $29.75 a barrel and both Conoco and Marathon by $1.75 to $30 a barrel.

PARIS (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Francois Mitterrand pledged Thursday he would not negotiate with Baghdad for the release of ''the victims of an act of barbarism'' but cautioned France equally would not join the United States in an attack on Iraq without a U.N. mandate.

Speaking at a news conference broadcast live on four television channels, the Socialist leader stressed he hoped President Bush and Soviet counterpart Mikhail Gorbachev would promise to confine the prospect of military action against Iraq to the U.N. framework when they meet at Helsinki for a summit next week-end.

Mitterrand repeated his view first stated last month that ''the logic of war'' continues to prevail even if ''we are doing all we can to get out of it while respecting the rule of law.'' Only an ''implacable'' execution of the U.N. embargo against Iraq offered a hope for peaceful solution of the stand-off, he said.

Mitterrand called the news conference hurriedly at the Elysee Palace to put his views to the French in advance of the Helsinki summit.

Asked if he would commit French forces in the gulf to follow a U.S. strike on Baghdad, Mitterrand replied he ''will only engage France in the execution of dispositions of the United Nations.''

''For the moment France, has not received such a mandate,'' Mitterrand said.

France only would intervene militarily otherwise if Iraq attacked another country in the region or if controls by Western navies on a ship trying to break the embargo against Iraq led to what Mitterrand called ''a chain reaction'' causing a military conflict.

Mitterrand characterized France's stance as essentially defensive but pointed out France was the second largest Western force in the region. He said Paris was considering reinforcing its forces there if necessary.

The French leader insisted there was no question of France negotiating with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's government for the release of some 430 French hostages still being held in Iraq and Kuwait. These French hostages were ''victims of an act of barbarism,'' Mitterrand said.

''Our duty is never to abandon them but also never to cede to pressures of that sort,'' said Mitterrand, who came under heavy international fire this year for what was seen as negotiating with Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi for the release of a French women hostage, Jacqueline Valente.

Mitterrand shrugged off questions about differences within his government over policy toward Iraq and said that as president and commander-in-chief of French armed forces he decided ultimately on major defense issues.

There has been speculation recently that Defense Minister Jean- Pierre Chevenement may resign because he is at odds with the hawkish stance of Prime Minister Michel Rocard and Foreign Minister Roland Dumas.

Mitterrand said he had consulted with Chevenement and they had no differences of opinion.

''There is only one sole way forward and only one military policy of France.''

In another development, the newspaper Le Monde reported France has decided to suspend arms deliveries to Jordan pending a study of Jordanian policy.

However the newspaper admitted the gesture was largely ''hypothetical'' as the only arms Jordan has on order from France are 12 Mirage 1,000 warplanes and those were not to scheduled to be delivered until the middle of next year.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - Defending champion Boris Becker, starting slow on a hazy, hot day, fell behind by a set and a service break before fighting back for a four-set victory over Aaron Krickstein Thursday to gain a semifinal berth in the U.S. Open.

Becker, the second seed, also fell behind 3-0 in the fourth set before sweeping the final six games for a 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 victory.

The 22-year-old West German thus advances to the semis Saturday, when he will meet the winner of Thursday night's match between No. 4 Andre Agassi and unseeded Andrei Cherkasov.

Krickstein, who never before had won a set from Becker in four previous meetings, took the initiative in the opening set with service breaks in the fourth and sixth games. Becker contributed to his troubles with a double-fault on break point of the sixth game.

Becker managed to break only in the fifth game and Krickstein served out the set, yielding a single point on his final two service games.

Krickstein, who lost to Becker in the semifinals of last year's Open, broke service to start the second set and held at 15 to go up 2-0.

''He had 3-6 and 0-2, and I said I have to start to play,'' Becker recalled later. ''At the end he was tired, he had no energy and he couldn't go down for the shots.

''A best-of-five match goes over a couple of hours. You lose the first set you're not out of it. I hope I can keep my mind and try to fight every point.''

In the words of an admiring Krickstein, Becker ''raised his game to a higher level'' at this point.

''He gave me every opportunity to beat him, but I didn't take advantage,'' Krickstein said. ''You know he's tough on big points. He's a big-point player, and you have to take advantage of the opportunities. If I played well I had a good chance to go up two sets.

''When you come back in so many matches like he's done, he's probably got all the confidence in the world. He thinks he can win even when he's not playing his best.''

Trailing 2-0, Becker won the next five games and eight of nine, carrying him to 2-0 in the third set. After Krickstein squandered four break points in the fourth game, Becker broke again in the fifth and took the set easily.

Krickstein still had a good chance to pull even, jumping to a 3-0 lead in the fourth set. He broke in the second game at 30 when Becker sent a backhand volley out.

But Krickstein couldn't win another game, while Becker appeared to get stronger.

''I didn't play my best by any means,'' said Krickstein, 23. ''I missed some shots and all of a sudden, I started losing my confidence and he started serving better.''

Becker, who generally plays a reckless, daredevil style, was more contained on the hard courts of the National Tennis Center, engaging Krickstein in many long baseline rallies.

''He was playing deep and I had to wait,'' said Becker, who ventured to the net 45 times, winning 28 of the points.

Krickstein said Becker's strategy confused him.

''I thought he'd serve and volley more,'' he explained. ''That definitely threw me off a little bit. I should want that if I'm going to beat him.''

Becker delivered 10 aces but also had seven double faults in the 2 hour and 36 minute match.

In the other semifinal Saturday, unseeded John McEnroe, a four-time Open champion, will play 12th seed Pete Sampras.

The women's semifinals are scheduled for Friday with Steffi Graf, the two-time defending champion and No. 1 seed, playing No. 6 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario and No. 5 Gabriela Sabatini opposing No. 8 Mary Joe Fernandez.

The Australian team of Elizabeth Smylie and Todd Woodbridge won the mixed doubles championship with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Natalia Zvereva of the Soviet Union and Californian Jim Pugh.

Smylie and Woodbridge, seeded eighth, did not drop a set in five matches.

The only other team to sweep to the mixed doubles title without the loss of a set during the open era was Margaret Court and Marty Riessen in 1969, and they won their first two matches by default.

The winners share $42,500 and the losers divide $20,000.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - The Coca-Cola Co. has chartered a fleet of refrigerated trucks to bring 480,000 cans of the ''real thing'' across the desert to U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia as part of a $2 million effort by four U.S. corporations to support the USO, the military support organization said Thursday.

The USO, a civilian, non-profit organization created in 1941 to serve the off-duty needs of the U.S. military and their families, last month announced it needed to raise funds to finance its start-up operations in the Middle East during the Persian Gulf crisis.

Together with Coca-Cola, American Telephone & Telegraph Co., Anheuser-Busch Co. and insurer American International Group Inc. were the first companies to answer USO's call with donations of $500,000 each.

''We needed something big to begin our operations in the Middle East, and we figured that $2 million would get us started,'' said USO spokesman Kevin McCarthy. ''These four companies responded right away, but this is just the start and we don't know yet what budget we will need, depending on how long the conflict lasts. We might be talking about $5 million, or $10 million.''

On top of its financial contribution, Coca-Cola offered to supply U.S. servicemen with what might be most needed in the torrid Saudi Arabian desert - a cold drink.

''The U.S. forces insisted we should bring cold cans, so we chartered refrigerated trucks to distribute 20,000 cases of cold Coca- Cola,'' said spokesman Randy Donaldson. ''That's 480,000 cans which were distributed in cooperation with the U.S. military. In many cases, the trucks could not reach the camps far out in the desert and had to be towed by military vehicles.''

Donaldson said Coca-Cola distributed about $100,000 worth of soft drinks.

Until a year ago, Coca-Cola was not even sold in Saudi Arabia, which, like many other Arab countries, had boycotted the U.S. soft drink manufacturer because it was selling its products in Israel. The boycott gave rival Pepsico Inc. the competitive edge in the Middle East for a long time.

''Coca-Cola was put on a boycott list by about 20 Arab countries in the late 1960s, but half of these countries have since taken Coca-Cola off the list and we went back to Saudi Arabia a year ago, although most of the product sold there is manufactured in Oman,'' Donaldson said.

While Coca-Cola might end up gaining exposure in the Saudi market, the USO stressed that donating companies were not out to use the crisis as a publicity opportunity but were answering the call of national solidarity.

''It certainly is in times like this that all Americans, including U.S. corporations, keep up the tradition of this country of stepping forward to support the young men and women who volunteered for the defense of the nation and its ideals,'' McCarthy said. ''These four companies have long been supporters of USO in many ways. They were the first to respond and we needed to raise a lot of money in a matter of days.''

Anheuser-Busch, the producer of Budweiser, the best-selling U.S. beer, has no interest in Saudi Arabia, where drinking alcoholic beverages is banned altogether, he said.

''The USO has been a friend of servicemen and women in times of peace and in times of emergency for half a century,'' said Anheuser- Busch Chairman and President August A. Busch III. ''We are proud to be helping the USO as it reaches out to our troops in the Middle East at a critical time.''

The brewer has contributed a total of $3.5 million to USO over the past five years, including a scholarship for relatives of servicemen.

But McCarthy, the USO spokesman, noted that generous contributions could remind U.S. servicemen that, back in the United States, some corporations were more supportive of their efforts than others.

''We'll make public that these companies made donations,'' McCarthy said. ''We'll hang their banners at our concerts and events.''

The four companies themselves have kept a low profile about their tax-deductible contributions.

''It just seemed to us as the absolute correct thing to do,'' American International spokesman Michael Foreman said. ''It is not advertisement.''

Marilyn Monroe touring Korea probably provided the most glamorous page in the USO's entertainment history, but the organization said it was planning on bringing the very best to the U.S. servicemen in the Middle East.

''We'll bring awesome entertainment, whether it is rock, rap or urban music or anything else, provided it is acceptable to the U.S. military and local governments,'' McCarthy said.

The USO is not ruling out the possibility of organizing a super concert in the desert, in the recent tradition of large rock events celebrating major causes, such as the fall of the Berlin Wall, McCarthy said.

''But obviously this would raise problems in terms of logistics,'' McCarthy said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The United States plans to begin an airlift from Kuwait Friday using an Iraqi jetliner to evacuate some of the 2,600 Americans trapped in the beseiged Persian Gulf emirate, the State Department said Thursday.

The ''flight of mercy'' aboard a U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways jet marks the first agreement between the United States and Iraq to permit the evacuation of U.S. citizens from Kuwait or Iraq, other than diplomatic personnel and their families.

It was not clear whether American men would be allowed to join women and children being permitted to leave Kuwait. Iraqi troops, who invaded Kuwait Aug. 2 and deposed the government, have been rounding up Western males and shipping them to potential military targets in Iraq to use them as shields against an attack.

In the agreement struck by the U.S. Embassy in Baghdad, the plane is to pick up U.S. citizens in Kuwait, return to Baghdad for the issuance of exit permits at planeside, then fly to Amman, Jordan, the State Department said.

There was no indication whether the flight would be the first of many, how many Americans would be permitted to leave at one time, whether Iraq would receive anything in exchange or how much it cost to charter the aircraft.

''Obviously, this is a flight of mercy, a flight intended to help Americans who have been held hostage against their will,'' said Mark Dillen, a State Department spokesman.

''We plan to continue this procedure as long as we have U.S. citizens who want to leave Iraq and Kuwait,'' he said. ''So far, over 150 U.S. citizens have left Iraq by charter flights.''

''We only know of one flight for sure, and that's the one scheduled for tomorrow,'' Dillen said.

About 2,600 Americans remain in Iraq, he said.

At the same time, Dillen said at least 12 Americans were aboard a Canadian-chartered Iraqi Airways jetliner that had departed Baghdad to evacuate Westerners from Kuwait and Iraq.

The plane left Baghdad for Kuwait at 9 a.m. EDT to pick up Canadians and other Westerners for a flight to Ankara, Turkey. The jetliner was to stop in Baghdad on the way to Ankara for exit permits for the passengers, Dillen said.

The State Department has been notifying Americans in Kuwait through radio broadcasts to expect an airlift and to telephone the U.S. Embassy there for details.

''If you cannot get through, keep trying,'' the notification said. ''Do not, repeat, do not attempt to go to the embassy compound, where Iraqi military are still positioned.''

It also warned American women and children in Kuwait not to try to drive to Baghdad without their husbands and fathers because of ''difficulties'' they would face making the trip and ''in light of the prospects for air evacuation.''

The broadcasts were carried by the Voice of America and the British Broadcasting Corp.

Iraqi forces surrounded several Western embassies and cut off water and electricity after Iraqi President Saddam Hussein demanded that all embassies in Kuwait be closed, a move would bolster Iraq's claimed annexation of Kuwait.

The United States and other countries have refused the order and Ambassador Nathaniel Howell continues to hold out in the U.S. Embassy with a small staff in the face of dwindling supplies of food and water. There was no indication whether Howell and his staff would be evacuated with other Americans.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - A U.N. stamp depicting three bearded men in long black coats carrying sacks near a blazing house drew criticism Thursday from Jewish leaders, who called the drawing blatantly anti-Semitic.

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith asked that the stamp, part of a collection of six stamps issued by the U.N. Postal Administration, be recalled because of its resemblance to anti-Semitic caricatures of Jews, particularly in the Hitler era.

The stamps are to be released Sept. 13 by the United Nations.

The stamp shows three bearded men who have prominent noses carrying sacks that the ADL says represents money or stolen goods taken from a building they have apparently set on fire. The stamp is part of a series called ''Crime Prevention.''

ADL officials met with U.N. Postal Administration Chief Anthony Fouracre and asked that the stamp be recalled, said Justin Finger, ADL's associate national director.

The stamp's design, by Josef Ryzec of Czechoslovakia, has been described in a European paper as a portrayal of Charles Dickens' character, Fagin, in Oliver Twist.

''We have no evidence that these individuals were intended by the artist to be Jews, nor do we impugn the motives of your office,'' wrote Finger. ''Nevertheless, the troubling resemblance to historic anti- Semitic material has struck a chord throughout the international Jewish community.''

U.N. officials could not immediately be reached for comment.

The 36-cent stamp is aimed mainly at collectors and those mailing from the United Nations.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (SEPT. 6) UPI - Aggressive campaigns to develop new tobacco markets in the Far East are beginning to pay off in additional revenue to American farmers, the head of an industry group said Thursday.

The opening of cigarette markets in Japan, South Korea and Taiwan has generated an additional $287 million for American farmers over the past four years, said Farrell Delman, president of the Tobacco Merchants Association.

Delman, in a visit to the Kentucky Farm Bureau, said a new study by Princeton, N.J.-based TMA shows ''an additional 180 million pounds of U.S. tobacco, or a gain of nearly 25 percent over predicted Far East levels, cleared the auction floors from 1986-1989 due to market liberalization.''

For burley growers, the new markets expanded sales by $166.7 million as an additional 106 million pounds of burley was sold over the four years. Kentucky produces about 72 percent of all burley tobacco grown in the United States.

The report - titled ''U.S. Cigarette Exports to Asia 1986-1989: Multi-Million Dollar Gains for U.S. Tobacco Farmers'' - chronicles the gains U.S. tobacco farmers have made since the opening of the Asian cigarette markets.

Not only have growers sold more leaf to U.S. manufacturers since the market openings, they also benefited from increased purchases by foreign manufacturers who bought additional American tobacco to compete with high quality U.S. products.

U.S. tobacco farmers should view these increases as signs of future growth opportunities, Delman said. Gains in these markets are providing additional momentum for the worldwide demand of high quality American blend cigarettes and the large percentage of burley found in the blend.

Satisfying this demand for increased amounts of U.S. burley and flue-cured tobacco is further complicated by under-production of tobacco quotas by farmers.

Japan, South Korea and Taiwan have all been opened to U.S. cigarettes by the U.S. Government since 1986. Negotiations are currently under way between the United States and Thailand to permit sales of U.S. cigarettes in that country. The Soviet Union is currently considering the purchase of American tobacco products.

''In contrast to the large trade deficits that the overall U.S. economy generates with Japan, Taiwan and South Korea, the U.S. tobacco industry produces a significant trade surplus with these Asian nations,'' Delman said.

The tobacco industry's successful entry into the Asian market, however, was sharply criticized by the head of an anti-smoking group.

''We have one set of standards for our own citizens, and another set of standards for foreign peoples,'' said Patrick Reynolds, director of the Foundation for a Smokefree America, in a telephone interview Thursday.

''The Marlboro and Winston men are plastered on billboards all over Asia and Third World capitals giving millions of people the idea that Americans don't care about their health, but care only about extracting profits,'' said Reynolds. ''The tobacco companies know this and are exploiting these people to addict millions of new smokers.''

Reynolds, the grandson of tobacco magnate R.J. Reynolds, said that since 1968 smoking worldwide has increased 73 percent and in China it's growing at a rate of 9 percent a year.

''They are taking advantage of peoples eager for the U.S. products but whose awareness of the health consequences of smoking is far less than our own,'' he said. ''Farmers who cultivate tobacco could choose to plant crops that nourish people and not poison them.''

Kentucky Farm Bureau spokesman Gary Huddleston said the pro and con health issue of tobacco exports is simply a ''smokescreen.''

''We are not teaching them to smoke. They are smoking at a much higher rate as we are,'' he said. ''We are just trying to convince them that our brands are the best.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Thursday that the basic U.S. money supply, narrowly defined under the name of M1, fell $2.2 billion in the latest reporting week. The broader aggregates M2 and M3 respectively fell and rose in the period.

M2 decreased by $700 million and M3 rose by $3.9 billion.

M1, which is made up of cash, checking accounts and NOW accounts - money that is available for immediate spending - fell to a seasonally adjusted average of $815.4 billion in the week ended Aug. 27 from a revised $817.6 billion the week before.

Over the latest 13 weeks, M1 averaged $811.1 billion, a 2.7 percent rate of increase from the previous 13 weeks, the Fed reported.

The broader measure of money, M2, averaged an estimated $3,304.7 billion in the latest week, down from a revised!$?,305.4 billion. M2 includes M1, plus passbook savings, small time deposits, including money market deposit accounts, consumer money market mutual funds and certain other short-term assets.

M3, which includes M2 plus large time deposits, repurchase agreements longer than one day at banks and thrifts, and institutional money market funds, averaged $4,091.3 billion in the latest week, up from a revised $4,087.4 billion, the Fed said.

MIAMI (SEPT. 6) UPI - Tropical Storm Isidore churned in open Atlantic waters with top winds of 70 mph, and forecasters said Thursday they expected the season's ninth storm to strengthen into a hurricane.

At 6 p.m. EDT, Isidore was centered near latitude 15.7 north, longitude 36.3 west, or about 800 miles west of the Cape Verde Islands off the African coast, said Max Mayfield, hurricane specialist at the National Hurricane Center.

The storm was moving northwest at 15 mph and was expected to continue that motion for the next 24 hours.

Maximum sustained winds were 70 mph, just 4 mph below mimimal hurricane strength, and Mayfield said Isidore was expected to gain hurricane status by day's end.

''It has a lot of things going for it,'' Mayfield said. ''It's over warm sea surface temperatures. The upper-level environment is very well established for strengthening.''

Tropical storm-force winds extended as far as 115 miles from Isidore's center, but Mayfield said the storm still was far from land and its path was unpredictable.

''It's way, way too early to even start thinking about its potential effect on land,'' Mayfield said. ''It's turning more toward the northwest and away from any land, which is good news. But one of our computer models is showing that could turn back toward the west within a few days.''

Isidore is ''at least five or six days from the Caribbean, if it were to turn back to the west,'' Mayfield said.

Isidore, the ninth named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, developed from a tropical depression Wednesday. Three storms - Bertha, Diana and Gustav - have grown to hurricane strength this season.

Forecasters said the nine-storm total was two or three more storms than average for this time of year, but the impact of those storms has been minimal. The season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Industrial Bank of Japan Ltd. announced Thursday the formation of an American subsidiary, The Bridgeford Group Inc., to provide merger and acquisition advisory services.

The moves marks the first time a Japanese bank has established its own American mergers subsidiary.

The bank, Japan's largest long-term credit bank, has been involved in large mergers, including the $25 billion buyout of RJR Nabisco Inc. by Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co. in 1988.

The group will be uniquely positioned to provide services for mergers and acquisitions between the United States and Japan, the bank said in a statement.

John A. Herrmann Jr. will become president and chief executive officer of the group, the bank said.

''Through IBJ's cross-industrial client network, we will be able to advise Americans wishing to invest in or raise capital from Japan, or who are seeking Japanese business partners,'' Herrmann said. ''Our expertise as advisors will complement the strength of the bank's corporate clients, enabling us to counsel Japanese companies seeking co- investor, co-venturer or acquisition transactions in the U.S.''

Herrman has been a managing director in the mergers division of Lehman Brothers, the investment banking subsidiary of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc.

Fidelity said it will be taking over First Interstate's 25,000 accounts in Texas, California, Arizona, Oregon, Idaho and Washington state effective Sept. 17.

The purchase is the fifth Fidelity has made in the past 12 months, bringing the total number of its accounts to more than 100,000, the company said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - Democratic leaders scrambled Thursday, on the eve of their latest budget summit with Republicans, to come up with a deficit-reduction plan they had pledged to have ready by the opening of the talks.

President Bush planned to open the budget summit, scheduled to begin at 10 a.m. Friday at Andrews Air Force Base, before heading to Finland for a meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, administration officials said.

Bush, addressing a fundraiser in Kansas, softened the critical stance he had taken earlier toward the Democrats with a last-minute call for bipartisanship in the budget talks.

''I pledge to work with the leaders in Congress on both sides of the aisle to get an agreement that makes real cuts in the deficit,'' Bush said. ''The time for partisanship is past. The time for avoiding tough decisions is gone. ... Let's fix this budget mess once and for all.''

House Speaker Tom Foley, D-Wash., Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine and chairman of the budget talks, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., confessed at a midafternoon news conference that Democrats had yet to reach a consensus on a formula to reduce the federal deficit.

But the three leaders reaffirmed their commitment to a package that would lower the deficit by $50 billion in fiscal year 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and by $500 billion over the next five years.

The Democratic budget negotiators met in the Capitol all day and into the evening in an attempt to hammer out a comprehensive proposal for the talks.

There were reports in recent weeks that Democrats might seek a smaller first-year reduction due to the weakening economy and new costs associated with the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

''I was happy to see the Democrats have committed themselves to going back to the original game plan,'' House Republican leader Robert Michel, R-Ill. told reporters later.

As the budget talks drew near, both sides expressed determination to reach an agreement to avert $105 billion in automatic spending cuts that take effect Oct. 1 under the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction law without a settlement.

Those cuts would be split evenly between defense and domestic spending, with certain programs exempted, such as Social Security and most entitlement programs for the poor. Cuts in Mediare benefits cannot exceed 2 percent and Bush has exempted military personnel.

The budget negotiators have given themselves an unofficial deadline of Monday to reach a settlement. They plan to remain cloistered at Andrews Air Force Base, 15 miles east of Washington, for the entire weekend in an effort to avoid the distractions of Capitol Hill.

''We are prepared to do what it takes, whatever it takes, to reach an agreement,'' Mitchell said.

Michel and Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas said they were hopeful the talks would produce an agreement by Sunday or Monday, in time for Bush to give his stamp of approval when he returns from Helsinki.

''If we don't get a budget agreement, we're in real trouble,'' Dole said after a strategy session with Republican leaders.

Because the annual deficit-reduction targets set by law exceed the goals of the budget negotiators, any package they produce will have to extend the time it will take to balance the budget.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated the federal deficit at $168.8 billion, which under current law must be reduced to $64 billion in fiscal 1991.

Mitchell said support for a $50 billion-$500 billion package ''represents the unanimous view of the Democratic members of the negotiating group.''

''The hope is that both sides will have plans to present tomorrow morning '' Gephardt said.

The Democrats have pledged since earlier this summer, when some details of an administration deficit-reduction strategy were leaked, that they would have their own plan to put on the table when budget talks resumed in September.

Key elements of an administration plan disclosed in July by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., included a $10,000 cap on state and local tax deductions from federal taxes, a revenue-raising measure aimed primarily at higher-income brackets, and a $7.2 billion increase in alcohol taxes.

Assistant House Republican leader Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a budget negotiator, has proposed a broad-based tax cut, instead of a tax increases to stimulate the economy and ward off a recession.

TORONTO (SEPT. 6) UPI - John Labatt Ltd. Thursday reported first-quarter 1991 earnings of $42.5 million, 48 cents a share, up 14 percent from $37.4 million, 47 cents a share, in the year-ago period.

Revenues at the food and brewing company increased to $1.25 billion up from $1.12 billion in the first quarter of 1990.

Labatt said higher earnings in its food segment resulted from increased revenues and a one-time gain on the sale of certain dairy assets.

Brewing segment earnings were reduced as the company's Canadian industry volume declined 2 percent due to ''unseasonably cool, wet weather in most regions,'' Labatt said.

Labatt USA had another strong quarter with its Rolling Rock brand continuing to grow in a flat market, the company said.

Labatt is a primarily a food and brewing company but also has interests in broadcast, entertainment and other businesses. Labatt operates Canada's sport cable network, TSN, and has a partnership interest in baseball's American League East division Toronto Blue Jays.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 6) UPI - The government announced Thursday it had warned six food companies to remove unsubstantiated health claims from cereals, baked goods and other food products.

The six companies have 10 days to respond to letters warning them that their produces contain health messages that violate the federal Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act, said Food and Drug Admnistration spokesman Jeff Nesbit.

The action was taken against:

-Oat Chex, a cereal made by the Ralston Purina Co. of St. Louis.

-Toasted Oat Bran Shake, which is made by J&J Snack Foods Corp. of Vernon, Calif.

-Rice Bran Oil, made by Select Origins, Inc., of Yaphank, N.Y.

-Oatmeal Goodness Bread Wheat Oatmeal, which is made by Continental Baking Co., of St. Louis.

-Vita Fiber Rice Bran, made by Pacific Rice Products, Inc., of Woodland, Calif.

-Oat Bran Fruit Jumbo Cakes, made by Health Valley Foods, Inc., of Irwindale, Calif.

Health and Human Services Secretary Louis Sullivan proposed a new policy in February aimed at eliminating the proliferation of unproven health claims from food labels.

Although the policy has not yet officially taken effect, the FDA had interim authority to begin enforcing the policy, Nesbit said. The warnings to the six companies is the first such action, he said.

''The actions taken against these six companies fall within the scope of FDA's interim enforcement policy,'' said Acting FDA Commissioner James Benson in a statement. ''All of these products make health claims that are not adequately supported by science.''

In the case of Oat Chex, the company said eating the oat bran cereal ''may help reduce cholesterol levels,'' the FDA said.

That statement suggests ''a serving of the product provides a nutritionally significant amount of fiber, and particularly soluble fiber, which is contrary to fact,'' the FDA said.

Even if scientific evidence eventually supports a link between eating oat bran fiber and a reduction of coronary heart disease risk there is not enough fiber in Oat Chex to justify the claim, the agency said.

TOPEKA, KA (SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush accepted an offer from Saddam Hussein Thursday to deliver a broadcast on Iraqi television, calling it "a real opportunity" to explain the stern U.S. response to the invasion of Kuwait.

White house press secretary Marlin Fitzwater told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to a campaign stop in Topeka, ''We have not heard from Iraq directly, (but) we accept this offer to broadcast a message to the Iraqi people.''

The Iraqi information minister announced Thursday that Bush was being invited to address the Iraqi people. During a brief session with reporters on the plane, Bush said of the invitation, ''It's a real opportunity.''

Fitzwater said the broadcast message would be translated by the State Department and likely be delivered to Iraqi officials the middle of next week.

''We'll handle the entire package,'' he said. Brushing aside concerns Iraqi President Saddam would renege on the offer or censor Bush's message, Fitztwarer said, ''We assume that their offer means that they will broadcast it in its entirety, and certainly we will make it available to the rest of the world.''

At a later stop in Tallahassee, Fla., Bush offered a possible prelude to his Iraqi TV message, saying, ''Our argument is not with the people of Iraq. Rather it's with Iraq's dictator, who uses innocent travelers as shield'' - a reference to thousands of Americans and other Westerners being held against their will in Iraq.

With more than 100,000 American troops in Saudi Arabia and 50 U.S. warships in the region, Bush said, ''We seek a peaceful solution to this crisis, but on one point, let me be clear. There can be no compromise when it comes to the sovereignty of Kuwait.''

Saddam has made regular appearances on American television and in a recent CBS interview said he wanted to debate Bush over the military confrontation sparked by the occupation of Kuwait.

''I say he can put an empty chair there as far as I'm concerned,'' Bush replied at an Aug. 30 news conference.

But Bush also has noted since the Aug. 2 invasion that Saddam has had ample access to the U.S. airwaves and he has complained about the high profile exposure given Saddam and other Iraqi officials.

In a speech at a Topeka fundraiser for Kansas Republican Gov. Mike Hayden, Bush declared the U.S. military mission in the gulf may not be easy ''but it will always be right'' and pledged to do whatever is necessary to restore peace in the region.

At the Tallahassee fundraiser for Rep. Bill Grant, R-Fla., Bush again focused attention on the gulf and his weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev in Helsinki, Finland.

''The squeeze is on - Saddam Hussein is up against a united front,'' said Bush, noting that forces from 25 nations stand side by side in the gulf against Iraqi and countries worldwide are headinf xhe United Nations embargo against Baghdad.

''The world is united against this aggression and I am glad that the Soviet Union is on our side,'' Bush paid.

On a related point, Fitzwater denied a report that Bush wuld offer economic aid to the Soviet Union if Gorbachev pulls some 200 military advisers out of Iraq.

Fitzwater said the United States is sticking to the criteria laid down at the Houston economic summit in July that called for Soviet economic reforms before Western financial assistance is given.

At both stops, Bush also referred to budget negotiations that are to resume Friday between congressional leaders and administration officials. If they fail to meet an Oct. 1 deadline for resolving the deficit-cutting standoff, more than $100 billion in automatic spending will be imposed on government programs.

''The time for partisanship is past. The time for action is now,'' Bush said. ''Let's fix this budget mess once and for all.''

The negotiators were to meet at Andrews Air Force Base and Bush planned to visit the talks Friday morning before leaving for Helsinki.

PROVO, UT (SEPT. 6) UPI - The brother of a young tourist slain during a New York subway mugging challenged city officials Thursday to ''get in touch with the people'' to prevent another such killing.

Todd Watkins, who was with 22-year-old Brian Watkins when he was stabbed near the heart by one of eight reputed gang members, was near tears as he read a prepared statement quoting the Bible and urging the city to train employees ward off similar tragedies.

''(We) challenge the government to get in touch with the people ... to work on developing a more stringent system,'' he said during a gathering at a Holiday Inn in the family's hometown. ''We challenge the people of New York City and everywhere to get involved.''

''(We) challenge the government to get in touch with the people ... to work on developing a more stringent system,'' he said during a gathering at the family home. ''We challenge the people of New York City avd everywhere to get involved.''

Karen and Sherwin Watkins, accompanied by their sons Brian and Todd and Todd's wi&e, were on their way to a restaurant Sunday night following a day at the U.S. Open tennis tournament when the gang descended.

Watkins was fatally stabbed as he went to the defense of his mother.

''A greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends,'' Todd Watkins read from the Bible, as other family members sat quietly, appearing tired and depressed.

New York Police Commissioner Lee Brown called the challenge ''appropriate.''

''What we must do is take that challenge and all of us in New York work together to make sure that we stamp those who choose to violate the law,'' he said at a news conference where he also announced the arrest of 240 people in midtown Manhattan on drug charges.

Brown said the estimated 20 million tourists who visit the city each year should realize that the stabbing was ''the exception, not the rule'' on a subway system that handles about 3.5 million riders a day.

Todd Watkins said the family's Mormon faith was helping them through the tragedy.

''This has been a very difficult time for our family, as you can imagine '' Watkins said as his parents sat nearby with their arms entwined. ''All we know through this hour is that God lives.''

''God has blessed us in these past days with strength, courage, friends and each other,'' he said. ''We have chosen to take the more difficult path of faith and patience, and not embitterment toward God. The Mormon Church believes that families will be together, even after death.''

Eight members of the FTS gang, which allegedly requires members to commit a mugging as an initiation rite have pleaded innocent to murder charges. The suspects range in age from 17 to 20.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (SEPT. 6) UPI - The sale of Pebble Beach's world-class golf resorts to a Japanese-owned company bucks a recent slowdown in Japanese buying of U.S. real estate, particularly ''trophy'' properties, analysts said Thursday.

Ben Hogan Properties, a subsidiary of Japan's Cosmo World Co., said Wednesday it would buy Pebble Beach Co. from the Los Angeles partnership of Miller, Klutznick, Davis & Gray.

The deal, estimated to be worth between $800 million and $1 billion, gave the Japanese-owned company control of some of California's best known private real estate, including the scenic 17-Mile Drive along the Monterey Peninsula as well as the Spyglass Hill, Pebble BeaSh, Del Monte and Spanish Bay golf resorts.

The 0urchase went against a national trend that saw Japanese investment in U.S. real estate fall last year to $14.77 billion from $16.54 billion in 1988, according to the Kenneth Leventhal & Co. accounting and consulting firm.

The sale showed that Japanese investors have not backed away from high-profile U.S. acquisitions but are only being more selective, said Jack Barthell, a managing director in Leventhal's Los Angeles office.

''The Japanese are saying that even though an acquisition may be a symbolic national asset and could arouse some concern, that acquisition should be done when there is a clear business purpose for it,'' Barthell said.

Last year, Japanese investors reportedly shied away from trophy purchases in the United States because of public outcry over what some saw as the ''selling of America'' to foreign buyers.

In a year-end survey released in March, Leventhal found that many Japanese buyers sought secondary properties or development partners in 1989 to avoid the publicity around trophy deals.

Today, those concerns appear to have largely died down, analysts said.

''We're becoming used to everything,'' said Jack Cooper, managing director of investment real estate for Bank of America. ''I think we are much more tolerant of foreign investment now as a nation.''

Many observers had expected Cosmo to initially buy just a 49 percent interest in Pebble Beach. Changing attitudes about foreign ownership may have convinced the company to swing the deal all at once, Barthell said.

! -everal analysts doubted that an American investor could have afforded to pay nearly $1 billion for Pebble Beach, which despite its glamour posted a net loss of $8.7 million last year, largely because of debt burdens.

''This would only be sold to the Japanese today,'' Evans said.

The Japanese may try to boost earnings by selling private memberships to the golf courses to people in Japan - where a club membership can cost more than $1 million. Ben Hogan said it planned no major operational changes but hoped to expand the facilities.

''I don't know that there is a lot of profit for them there from a cash flow point!oj view,'' Bank of America's Cooper said. ''But there is not a lot of cash flow there when you by a Rembrandt either, and that's just what they've done here.''

SHARPES, FL (SEPT. 6) UPI - A University of Florida freshman suspected in the serial killings of five college students was charged Thursday with two assault charges for campus incidents that occured a day before the first bodies were discovered.

The University of Florida police obtained arrest warrants several hours after a Brevard County judge refused to reduce a $1 million bond set for suspect Edward L. Humphrey, 18, saying he may be psychotic and a danger to the community.

Humphrey was being held in the Brevard County Detention Center on a charge of aggravated battery in the Aug. 30 beating of his grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, 79, of Indialantic.

''We secured warrants for the arrest of Edward Louis Humphrey for two counts of aggravated assualt in connection with two separate incidents that occurred on the University of Florida campus on Aug. 25, 1990,'' said UF Police officer Janet Gerrity.

On Aug. 26, Gainesville police discovered the bodies of the first victims at an apartment complex just 2 miles from campus.

''It's the university's case, but we're looking at it as additional information we will certainly explore. It's another piece of the puzzle,'' said Lt. Sadie Darnell. ''It concerns other people, not our ''adie Dar Bond on the new charges was set at $100,000, and details of the assault were sealed under a court order, Gerrity said.

Earlier Thursday, Brevard County Circuit Judge Martin Budnick denied the defense request to reduce Humphrey's $1 million bond.

''I'm not confident or comfortable that Mr. Humprhey is in full control of himself,'' Budnick said after a two-hour hearing. ''I see a great deal of acting out - neurotic, psychotic behavior - that concerns me. ... I think he may be a danger to the community.''

Humphrey, who appeared calm and lucid, said nothing except to give his name and age in response to the judge. Humphrey has a history of depression and has had the medication lithium prescribed for him.

Five college students, four from the University of Florida and one from Santa Fe Community College, were found stabbed to death in their apartments during a 48-hour period between Aug. 26 and Aug. 28. At least three of the bodies were mutilated and two of the students had also been bludgeoned.

The victims included four young women and a boyfriend of one of the victims. All lived within 2 miles of the University of Florida campus.

Humphrey once lived in the same Gatorwood apartment complex as some of the victims, but police have never released any evidence linking the young man to the killings.

During the hearing, Hlavaty testified she wanted the initial assault charge against her grandson dropped, saying she was willing to have him move back to her home.

''I just know that in my opinion he is not capable of doing what he did,'' said Hlavaty, who had a black-and-blue eye. ''I want to drop charges.''

Prosecutors allege Humphrey struck his grandmother at least twice, causing her eye to swell shut and bloodying her face.

But Hlavaty testified she was injured in a fall. ''I hit the floor, the concrete with linoleum on it. I can't remember,'' she said.

Brevard County State Attorney Norm Wolfinger argued for the $1 million bond, saying Humphrey ''is a suspect in the Gainesville murders and he knows that.''

Public Defender James Russo objected, saying the state presented no evidence linking Humphrey to the crimes. Budnick said the Gainesville slayings had no bearing on his decision to uphold the bond.

In conflict with Hlavaty's testimony, Brevard County Deputy Sheriff Douglas Hammack, who arrested Humphrey on the assault charge, testified that Hlavaty told him she did not want Humphrey in her house ''because she was afraid he would hurt her again.''

While in the patrol car, ''the defendant started to yell 'I'm sorry. I hit her. I hit her. I'm sorry.' He started hitting his head against my patrol car. ... He said he was going to kill himself,'' Hammack said.

The state also presented a document showing that deputies had been called to the family home 12 times between April 1989 and August 10, 1990.

Brevard County corrections officer Emily Glaab said Humphrey called himself ''John'' while in jail. The officer testified that once when being led past female inmates who were heckling him, Humphrey said '''That bitch is going to die.' ... He said that John doesn't take no prisoners.''

In Gainesville, police armed with a warrant searched the Hawaiian Village complex where Humphrey had lived.

Investigators refused to discuss the warrant, which was sealed ''primarily to preserve the integrity of the investigation. We don't want to risk anything at this point,'' Darnell said.

A task force also searched a motel room where Humphrey's grandmother supposedly stayed in August and the woman's Indialantic home, where investigators were looking for hair, fibers, weapons or clothing that might link the suspect to the killings, said Bruce McMann, an agent of the Florida Department of Law Enforcement.

Investigators also towed Humphrey's black Cadillac to a FDLE crime lab in Jacksonville.

Humphrey was charged Tuesday in a September 1988 sex attack on a young woman in Indian River County. The victim identified him as her attacker after seeing his picture in news reports.

PERTH AMBOY, N.J. (SEPT. 6) UPI - The Coast Guard said Thursday that nearly 1 million gallons of heavy fuel oil that leaked from a Hess Oil Co. storage tank had been contained and that a small spill into the waterway between New York and New Jersey posed no threat to wildlife.

Petty Officer Jodi Hoffmaster said about 5,000 gallons of the oil spilled into the Arthur Kill and Woodbridge Creek from Hess's Perth Amboy terminal and was being contained by absorbent booms.

Coast Guard officials said the 6 million-gallon tank began collapsing Wednesday afternoon, tearing piping and shattering a valve, allowing the thick oil to bypass the main containment area.

Hoffmaster said that nearly 100 Coast Guard members and cleanup contractors were on the scene cleaning up the oil and that more than 10,000 feet of containment booms were deployed to keep the oil from spreading.

The collapse left the top of the huge tank rippled and warped.

Hess said the cause of the accident was under investigation and theorized that pilings supporting the tank may have given way. Company representatives said that no problems were found when the tank was last inspected in February 1989 and that there was no way to inspect the pilings in the ground beneath the tank.

Hess spokesman Carl Tursi said most of the oil that leaked from the tank was contained by earthen dikes built by cleanup workers.

The Coast Guard said about half of the oil left in the tank had been transferred to other tanks and two barges by Thursday morning.

Clean Ventures and Clean Harbor Co-op, the commercial contractors on the scene, were working to clean up the oil with skimmers, vaccuum trucks and absorbent booms.

The Arthur Kill - the busy shipping channel between New York and New Jersey into which some of the oil escaped - was not closed to maritime traffic, and Coast Guard flights over the spill site spotted only a light sheen of oil beyond the containment booms.

New York Harbor, which includes the Arthur Kill, has been the site of a number of spills this year, including three ''major'' spills of more than 100,000 gallons.

Gov. Jim Florio said the spill could subject Hess to a $10 million fine under a state law signed July 21, which applies to spills of 100,000 gallons or more.

But it was not yet clear whether the fine would apply in the Hess spill because less than 100,000 gallons actually made it into the water.

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (SEPT. 6) UPI - Believe it or not, snow blowers are a hearty seller among Saudi Arabians looking to clear sandy driveways.

But finding a new use for a current product is the exception and not the rule for small to medium-sized firms looking to expand on a global scale, according to John D. Daniels, Indiana University professor of international business.

Instead, Daniels said companies setting their sights abroad should focus on marketing products with quality or a unique nature.

''U.S. companies have traditionally competed primarily from the standpoint of new and highly differentiated products,'' said Daniels, co-author of the top selling textbook on international business.

''Too much talk is being given to productivity, which is important, and competing on the basis of price,'' he said. ''If we change the name of the game in how we compete and start putting more effort into process technology, as opposed to product technology, then we may lose our traditional competitive advantage.

''We have to compete on a quality difference if we can get quality output, but not on the basis of price. If we try to get into that game we lose, because it's wage rates that make all the difference,'' he said.

Many smaller companies have found they can make a product that is unique and then find a market for it, Daniels said. Price becomes less of a factor as a result.

''If they look at their own products and see that they have some quality or characteristic difference that makes them better than competitors here, then there's a good chance that there's some quality or characteristic to make sales in foreign markets as well,'' the Indiana professor said.

But ''if they look at their ability to compete and it's based on something else, such as low transportation costs, then there's probably a good chance they're not going to be able to export.''

Daniels acknowledged that companies can be hampered by a lack of capital and expertise and offered these suggestions:

- Start with indirect exports such as through export management companies and glean from their expertise. For example, instead of learning export packaging and developing internal capacity, domestic firms can contract with a foreign freight forward to get the job done.

- Find larger U.S. companies that already have contracts abroad, instead of selling directly into foreign markets. By selling their product to a U.S. company with foreign distribution, companies can seek the exposure with less market risk. Daniels said that way, ''you learn more about the market and become better able to handle it yourself.''

- Establish strong ties with foreign firms on our home turf. For example, hundreds of foreign companies have located in the Midwest, many to serve the auto segment. Daniels believes that relationships now can be forged with many of these companies that could pay off as exports later.

- Take advantage of the federal and state agencies that offer assistance to exporters. Look into funding programs they offer that guarantee payments for non-convertibility of foreign currency.

- Consider whether the product needs to be improved or adapted for the new market, which will add expense.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - Defense Secretary Cheney today disclosed that the United States has more than 100-thousand U-S military personnel in the Persian Gulf region. This is the first time that any Bush administration official has publicly stated the number of U-S troops sent to the Middle East in the last month. Cheney broke the news to the International Institute for Strategic Studies in Hot Springs, Virginia.

British Prime Minister Thatcher told Parliament today she's considering sending more troops to the Middle East and will use military force if necessary. Opposition Labor Party leader Neil Kinnock says military action should only be taken with the authority of the United Nations. But Thatcher said such a limitation would give a great advantage to Iraq and would imperil British forces.

Secretary of State Baker is in Saudi Arabia, where administration officials say he will discuss the Persian Gulf crisis with Arab leaders. Baker is to meet with Saudi King Fahd before conferring with Kuwait's exiled emir tomorrow. Baker also is scheduled to see Egyptian President Mubarak before heading to Helsinki for Sunday's super power mini-summit.

(SEPT. 6) UPI - President Bush says the U-S objective in the Persian Gulf remains UNchanged. Speaking at a G-O-P fundraiser in Topeka, Kansas, Bush said the deployment of American forces to the region may NOT be easy, but he said the military presence... in his words... ''will always be right.'' Bush pledged to do whatever is necessary to promote the cause of peace in the Middle East and deter Iraq from more aggression.

Aid agencies say food, medicine, and other supplies are arriving in Jordan to help thousands of refugees from Iraq and Kuwait. Jordan says it is strained by 120-thousand refugees... almost all of them Asians. The World Food Program reports that 50 tons of rice from its stocks in Bangladesh will arrive in Jordan tonight. But thousands more refugees reportedly arrived today.

The U-N Security Council today urged U-N Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar NOT to give up on his efforts to end the Middle East crisis. Though Perez de Cuellar expressed disappointment at his talks with Iraq's foreign ministers during the weekend... the council asked him to continue diplomatic efforts. DALLAS (SEPT. 6) UPI - Dallas Mavericks star forward Roy Tarpley pleaded guilty Thursday to drunk driving and was ordered to serve two years probation, provide 100 hours community service and pay a $1,000 fine, lawyers and court officials said.

Prosecutors agreed to drop a resisting arrest charge against Tarpley stemming from his arrest last Nov. 15 on a North Dallas freeway. Tarpley, 25, agreed to drop his liability claim aganist the City of Dallas involving a broken nose and other minor injuries he said were inflicted at the hands of the arresting officers.

''Roy Tarpley is really pleased by these developments and wants to concentrate on trying to win an NBA championship for the city of Dallas,'' said Jay Ethington, Tarpley's lawyer. ''He is pleased with the ''rpley's lawyer. ''He Tarpley's injuries, allegedly suffered while being held in a choke hold with a police nightstick, ''were pretty traumatic for a 7-footer,'' Ethington said.

Tarpley's trial on the DWI and resisting arrest charges was scheduled to start Monday before Dallas County Criminal Court Judge Mike Schwille.

Mavericks officials said Tarpley's probation will have no effect on his status with the team since he was suspended for 33 games after his arrest for violating the terms of his drug aftercare program. It was the third time Tarpley had been suspended for drug and alcohol use.

Tarpley has two strikes under the NBA's drug policy. One more positive test for cocaine would result in a minimum two-year ban from the league. But Tarpley has tested negative for drugs and alcohol since the Nov. 15 arrest.

Results of a blood test taken by Dallas police after Tarpley was arrested placed his alcohol level at .12, just past the legal limit of .10.

Tarpley's probation requires him to submit to monthly drug tests, seek alcohol and drug treatment, attend Alcoholics/Narcotics Anonymous meetings three times a week until the court notifies him otherwise and attend a Mothers Against Drunk Driving ''victim-impact'' panel.

Schwille told Tarpley that if he fails to meet the terms of his probation, he would be sent to jail for one year.

''For a first-time offense, that was a pretty good sentence really,'' said Patty Wade, victim services assistant for the Dallas County MADD chapter.

Driving while intoxicated is a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to two years in jail and a $2,000 fine. Schwille said Tarpley received a slightly stiffer punishment than the usual $500 fine, two years' probation and 30 to 90 days in jail if probation is violated.

The 7-foot Tarpley, who averaged 16.8 points and 13.1 rebounds per game in 45 games last season, was unavailable for comment Thursday. The Mavericks begin training camp Oct. 5.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - Yes, Bo knows. And so does Boris.

Boris Becker knows when his opponent looks across the net, tennis is not the only matter at hand. There is psychological warfare to be waged, and at that endeavor the 22-year-old West German has no peer.

Becker knows this all too well. And so does Aaron Krickstein, bounced from the U.S. Open quarterfinals Thursday courtesy of a commanding comeback, a 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-3 decision that moved Becker one step closer to another title.

After dropping the first set, Becker found himself down a break in the second. No matter, Becker said. He has been in tighter spots. This, after all, is a three-time Wimbledon chalpeon and defending Open champion. He knows.

When there are tough points to be had, Becker summons the troops. Unfailingly, they respond, which does little for his opponent's peace of mind.

''That is a very important part of tennis,'' Becker said. ''Mental.''

Krickstein fell to Becker in the semifinals of last year's Open. In all, he had played Becker four times entering Thursday, and lost all four. In fact, he hadn't even managed to take a set.

This was not lost on Krickstein. After the match he looked tired and beaten, talking of lost chances, missed groundstrokes and big points that got away. He said there is probably no one playing tennis anywhere who can measure up to Becker when a critical point is to be won on center court.

''He was giving me every opportunity to take control of the match, but I didn't take advantage of it,'' Krickstein said. ''I lost confidence. You know he's tough on big points. He's a big-point player and you have to take advantage of the opportunities.''

For a while, Krickstein was moving around the court as if he were the defending champ. He put his signature on the first set with a finishing ace, then opened the next set with a break, urging a long ball by Becker past the baseline. He held to go up 2-0, and suddenly the afternoon got interesting. If Stefan Edberg and Ivan Lendl could be sent home, why not Becker?

But then Becker stirred, roaring to life with five straight games. He began pushing Krickstein around the court, coming to the net, passing him down the side.

''Even when I lost a set and was down a break I was not out of the match '' Becker said. ''I kept my mind. The other guys know that. It's a best-of-five match and goes over a couple of hours, you lose the first set you're not out of it.''

Becker moved ahead 5-1 in the third set, having taken 11 of 13 games. In the sixth game of the set, he rocketed an ace to go up 30-15 and blew on his hand. It might as well have been a smoking pistol.

''I just lost my rhythm in the middle of the match,'' Krickstein said. ''I'm not sure why I didn't hit the ball better.''

Krickstein was not without fight at the end. He held to open the fourth set, then broke. It seemed like much of the afternoon had gone between service breaks for Krickstein. He followed by holding at love to lead 3-0, only now there were big points to be had and Becker was more than ready.

He ran off six games in a row, not allowing the Michigan player more than two points in any of the games. This was Becker's court now, and he was calling the shots.

''At the end, he had no energy anymore,'' Becker said. ''His legs were tired. I ran him around too much.''

Said Krickstein: ''I thought I would have had a good chance if I won the fourth set.''

Krickstein is a strong five-set player, but Becker was not about to let him get that far. Krickstein must now wait for Becker somewhere else down the line. Becker goes on to the semifinals Saturday against Andre Agassi, who defeated Andrei Cherkasov in straight sets.

Becker says he can match Agassi, he of the dangling earring and lime green shorts, stroke for stroke.

Can he match his wardrobe?

''It doesn't fit me,'' Becker said.

Colors or size?

''Both,'' Becker said.

Boris definitely knows.

SALT LAKE CITY (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Mining Services International Inc. (NASDAQ:MSIX), announced Friday that product shipments from CYANCO's newly constructed, $11.5 million liquid sodium cyanide plant near Winnemucca, Nev. have begun.

CYANCO is 66.7 percent owned by MSI and 33.3 percent owned by Alta Gold through their respective subsidiaries. CYANCO owns and operates the plant which has a capacity of producing 28 million pounds of sodium cyanide per year.

''CYANCO is the first facility in the United States designed to produce liquid sodium cyanide for delivery directly into a mine's holding tank,'' said Dr. Lex L. Udy, president of MSI.

''CYANCO had previously signed about $11 million in contracts and purchase orders for delivery of sodium cyanide to more than a dozen Nevada mines, bringing the plant to 50 percent of annual capacity,'' said Udy. He noted that the new plant could produce about 20 percent of the sodium cyanide required by mines in the western United States.

With various delays in regulatory procedures which caused the plant to begin shipments a few months later than anticipated, and due to previously reported losses incurred in sales of dry sodium cyanide by the softening of sodium cyanide prices, MSI expects its earnings projections for 1990 to be in the range of break-even to $200,000. It is anticipated that revenues will still reach the projected $19 million to $22 million range.

Mining Services International Inc., is a leading developer of explosives technology and a supplier of high-quality explosives to the mining industry. The company markets its products and technology in five of the major mining countries worldwide. The company is also involved in the production of liquid sodium cyanide with its newly constructed plant outside Winnemucca, Nev.

DENVER (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - CREDO Petroleum Corp. reported Friday that for the third quarter ended July 31, 1990, net income increased 53 percent to $191,000, or 6 cents per share, on revenues of $443,000, compared with net income of $125,000, or 4 cents per share, on revenues of $445,000 last year.

For the nine months ended July 31, 1990, net income increased 27 percent to $463,000, or 13 cents per share, on revenues of $1,403,000, compared with net income of $365,000, or 11 cents per share, on revenues of $1,230,000 last year. Cash flow from operations increased 17 percent to $808,000 for the nine months ended July 31, 1990 compared to $693,000 for the same period last year.

James T. Huffman, president, said that 1990's results reflect the fourth consecutive year of substantial earnings increases. Nine months' results were favorably impacted by both increased product prices and increased production rates. Since 75 percent of the company's reserves are natural gas, we expect improving gas markets to continue to have a positive effect on the company, Huffman said.

Production volumes reached record levels in the first nine months of 1990. Gas sales volumes increased 7 percent to 247 million cubic feet compared to 230 million cubic feet last year. Oil sales volumes increased 3 percent to 29,000 barrels compared to 28,000 barrels last year.

Gas prices received by the company increased 7 percent to $1.50 per thousand cubic feet compared to $1.40 last year. Oil prices increased 7 percent to $17.73 per barrel compared to $16.57 last year. ''Iraq's invasion of Kuwait occurred after third quarter end and, thus, did not effect oil prices received during the periods,'' Huffman said.

At third quarter-end, total assets were $9,426,000. Working capital totaled $3,371,000 and shareholders' equity was $8,433,000.

During the third quarter the company increased its estimate of proved oil reserves by 78,000 barrels, or 26 percent, from 301,000 barrels to 379,000 barrels. ''The increase is based on results of a recent independent engineering study on the company's interest in a Yates Sand waterflood property located in the Halley-Emperor Field complex in West Texas,'' Huffman said.

Development of the deeper Queen Sand is also continuing on the property and is expected to result in further additions of proved reserves.

The company also said that it will provide a reserve against investment loss during its fourth fiscal quarter of 1990. ''The impact on 1990 earnings cannot presently be determined but is not expected to exceed $280,000,'' Huffman said.

The company's total portfolio of investments in near cash instruments, marketable securites and undeveloped oil and gas leases is approximately $4 million. ''Although the reserve will reduce 1990 earnings, it will not have any material effect on cash flow from operations or future operating results,'' Huffman said.

CREDO Petroleum Corp. is a publicly traded, independent oil and gas company based in Denver. The company's stock is traded on the NASDAQ System under the symbol CRED and is quoted daily in the ''NASD Bid & Asked Quotations'' section of ''The Wall Street Journal.''

HUNTINGTON BEACH, CA (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - TouchStone Software Corp., publishers of CheckIt, the PC industry's leading diagnostic software, Friday announced the release of CheckIt 3.0.

First introduced in November 1988, CheckIt is a software utility program that reports on a PC's exact configuration, runs diagnostic tests and measures performance using standard benchmarks.

CheckIt answers the need among users to quickly define a system's configuration, implement upgrades and troubleshoot problems. It runs on virtually any PC and can be operated with equal ease by people with technical or non-technical backgrounds.

Release 3.0 builds upon the testing and reporting capabilities introduced in CheckIt 2.1. The new features include a memory map which shows how RAM is being used, a virus-detection utility, DOS 4.0/486 support, improved RAM error dialog, benchmark comparisons, customizable tools menu, test summary report and floppy mechanics tests.

According to C. Shannon Jenkins, president of TouchStone Software: ''We've been listening to our customers. There are now over 50,000 licensed CheckIt users and the new version of CheckIt provides capabilities they requested -- particularly the memory map, virus checker and the floppy alignment tests.

''The simplified RAM error dialog and customizable tools menu also provide additional flexibility.''

The new memory map displays the first megabyte of address space, software interrupts, memory usage and unused address space. This facility helps hidden memory conflicts and TSR conflicts to be eliminated upon identification.

The RAM error dialog has been expanded to include a simple and advanced dialog for identifying the exact location of a bad chip, memory bank or problem RAM board without requiring users to have extensive memory knowledge.

The floppy mechanics tests feature a series of tests which determine whether the floppy drive alignment and mechanical functions operate within standard ANSI tolerances.

A customizable tools menu has been added, which allows DOS programs to be included and executed from within the tools menu as if they were part of CheckIt.

The new virus-detection utility includes a copy of McAfee Associates virus checker. This utility is capable of identifying over 200 different kinds of virus infections and can be run from the DOS command line or from the tools menu.

The benchmark comparisons graphic displays have been greatly improved. The benchmark comparison measures the PC's performance against the speeds of a standard PC-XT. The results can be saved or automatically compared with another system.

The test summary report has been included to provide a one-page report of the major system components and the pass/fail results of the diagnostic tests, which verify the PC's integrity.

The retail price of CheckIt 3.0 is $149. Current users of Release 2.1 can upgrade to Release 3.0 for $25.

CheckIt 3.0 will be available in French and German translations in October. TouchStone Software's commitment to international markets has accelerated as a result of its recent agreements with leading distributors and co-publishers in Europe, Canada and Australia.

TouchStone Software designs, develops and markets PC utility programs which assist in troubleshooting hardware and software components of IBM-compatible personal computers and which provide communication and compatibility between different types of computer systems.

FAIRFAX, VA (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - The TRW Foundation has awarded a $50,000 grant to the University of New Hampshire to be used to support a multi disciplinary earth science research program at the university's Institute for Earth, Oceans and Space.

John Stenbit, vice president and general manager, TRW Systems Integration Group, presented a check for $50,000 to Dr. David Skole, director of the institute's ''Fronts of Deforestation'' project, at TRW's Earth Observation System Data and Information System (EOSDIS) program office in Greenbelt, Md.

The University of New Hampshire at Durham established the Institute for the Study of Earth, Oceans and Space in 1985. The institute performs studies of the Earth as a system, its interactions with the sun and the environment of deep space.

It is a broadly interdisciplinary institute that brings together a wide range of expertise to gain an integrated understanding of the functions of the Earth and its space environment.

In presenting the check, Stenbit said: ''Understanding our environment and the effects of global change resulting from human activity is one of the most important challenges for the next century. The research effort at the University of New Hampshire is essential. In addition to the knowledge that it provides, the institute is a training ground for future earth scientists.

''Our sponsorship of this center of excellence is truly an investment in the future.''

In accepting the grant, Skole said: ''We want to make sure that the Earth Observing System Data and Information System (EOSDIS) is done and done well. We welcome this opportunity to have a positive impact upon this vital program. We and TRW have mutual goals and objectives.''

EOSDIS is an essential part of the NASA global change initiative. The Earth Observation System will be made up of polar orbiting space laboratories. It will monitor the entire globe and study changes in the Earth's ecological system, such as fluctuations in the ozone layer, activities along earthquake fault lines, changing global weather conditions and worldwide warming trends contributing to the greenhouse effect.

Tropical deforestation is an important but poorly understood component of global change. Skole's project will attempt to develop a tropical deforestation alarm system. To detect an anomaly in the ''normal'' trend or situation requires a basic understanding of the current situation and the ability to detect changes. The project will use test cases in Brazil and Thailand to prototype the alarm system.

Satellite data will be used to develop a geographic information system-based set of change-detection tools. Skole's project is part of the United Nations' Environment Program Standing Group of Experts on Assessing Tropical Deforestation Using Remote Sensing.

''The University of New Hampshire is a very worthy recipient of our attention and financial resources,'' said Philip N. Papaccio, vice president and program executive for the TRW Space and Defense Sector's Global Change Initiative activities. ''The institute has a solid reputation and is a leading research facility in the effort towards understanding global change.''

The TRW EOSDIS and Customer Data and Operations System (CDOS) programs, managed by David H. Barakat of TRW's System Development Division, are located in Greenbelt, Md., near NASA Goddard. These programs are part of the TRW System Development Division.

The division, located in Redondo Beach, Calif., is a component of TRW Systems Integration Group, an operting unit of TRW Inc.'s California-based Space and Defense Sector. TRW Systems Integration Group has headquarters in Fairfax County, Va.

The group performs systems engineering services and systems integration and develops and installs strategic and tactical command and control systems, information processing systems and security systems for federal government agencies, industry contractors and international customers.

Cleveland-based TRW is an international company that provides high-technology products and services to the space and defense, automotive and information systems markets. The company's 1989 sales totaled more than $7 billion.

EMERYVILLE, CA (SEPT. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Cetus Corp. (NASDAQ:CTUS) announced that a suit has been filed against the company by Erbamont Inc. of Stamford, Conn.

The complaint alleges patent infringement and includes a request for a preliminary injunction. The action relates to sales of one of the two forms of doxorubicin marketed as a part of the company's joint venture, Cetus-Ben Venue Therapeutics.

The complaint alleges infringement of U.S. Patent No. 4,946,831 which issued to a foreign affiliate of Erbamont in August. Erbamont asserts that the patent relates to ready-to-use solutions of doxorubicin. Doxorubicin is a widely prescribed chemotherapeutic agent.

Cetus said its attorneys are reviewing the newly issued patent and the complaint, and are formulating an appropriate response. The company is continuing to market the venture's generic form of doxorubicin solution. The venture is currently the only FDA-approved supplier of a generic form of doxorubicin solution in the United States.

Cetus and Ben Venue Laboratories Inc. of Bedford, Ohio, formed their joint venture in 1985 for the purpose of manufacturing and marketing generic anticancer products.

The complaint was filed in the United States District Court, Northern District of Ohio. It asks for damages, costs and other relief.

Headquartered in Portland, Benj. Franklin has 88 branches in four states, 66 of them in Oregon. It is the largest savings and loan in Oregon. In addition, Benj. Franklin operates 12 branches in Washington, nine in Idaho and one in Utah.

Services to Benj. Franklin's customers will continue without interruption when offices in all four states open as Bank of America, FSB on Monday, September 10.

''We're delighted to be extending our services in the expanding Northwest market,'' said BankAmerica Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Richard M.

Rosenberg. ''We welcome the opportunity to share our 86-year tradition of quality and responsiveness with customers and communities throughout the region.''

Under the terms of the transaction, Bank of America, FSB will acquire approximately $2.7 billion in deposits and about $3 billion in assets, including approximately $2.6 billion in loans. It has the option to return loans to the RTC that do not meet certain criteria. The Resolution Trust Corporation accepted a bid from Bank of America, FSB of a $162 million premium.

''Our winning bid reflects our view of the value of Benj. Franklin's businesses to BankAmerica shareholders,'' said Rosenberg. ''With customer relationships averaging seven years, Benj. Franklin represents an exceptionally strong consumer deposit base. In addition, we expect to retain more than $1 billion of Benj. Franklin's high quality loans, especially residential real estate loans made in the relatively strong Oregon and Washington markets.

''BankAmerica also obtains options to buy significant mortgage servicing business, with more than $1 billion of loans serviced, and a profitable insurance subsidiary that conducts a range of insurance agency activities and sells annuity and mutual fund products,'' added Rosenberg.

Within six months, Bank of America, FSB will be restructured into separate units in each state.

The twelve branches in Washington will be transferred to Seattle-First National Bank, BankAmerica's wholly owned Washington-based subsidiary. Seafirst currently has 188 branches in Washington.

The Oregon branches will be combined with Seafirst Bank Oregon and be known as Bank of America Oregon.

The Idaho branches are expected to become part of a newly chartered commercial bank, Bank of America Idaho, and the Utah branch is to be transferred to Bank of America Arizona, which already operates one branch in Utah.

Bank of America, FSB will operate as a subsidiary of BankAmerica Corporation and report to Vice Chairman Thomas E. Peterson, head of the Consumer Banking Group.

CARLSBAD, CA (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Cardiotronics Inc. reported sales of $66,281 and a net loss of $191,930 for the quarter ended June 30.

As Cardiotronics was formed by a business combination in August 1989, comparative results for the corresponding year-ago period are not available.

Cardiotronics previously announced that in May 1990, the company commenced a joint marketing arrangement with Hewlett-Packard Co. and received an initial purchase order for its TRIAD-EP cardiac treatment system. This joint marketing arrangement has substantially boosted Cardiotronics' sales rate in the third quarter.

Management anticipates that third-quarter sales may exceed those of the second quarter by as much as 100 percent and that its operating loss for the period should be reduced.

In addition to an improving trend in operating results, Cardiotronics reported on several other financial developments. The company indicated it is pleased with recent activity suggesting that a meaningful number of its Class B warrants to purchase Cardiotronics' common stock at 20 cents per share are being exercised. The company's Class B warrants expire Sept. 15, 1990.

Cardiotronics also announced it has renegotiated $300,000 in promissory notes payable to its chairman, which were originally due on various dates between Sept. 5, 1990, and Nov. 11, 1990. The company has now agreed to repay half of the principal amount of these notes on Sept. 20, 1990, and the balance over the next year.

In view of favorable financial developments and in order to minimize future dilution to the company's shareholders, Cardiotronics also announced that its Class C warrants to purchase Cardiotronics' common stock at 30 cents per share are being called and will be retired Oct. 8, 1990.

Cardiotronics Inc. develops, manufactures and markets disposable products and devices for the emergency electrical support of patients experiencing a heart attack. Based in Carlsbad, Cardiotronics common stock is traded over-the-counter by several makers. MILPITAS, CALIF. (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - System Industries Inc. (ASE:SYI) Friday announced revenues of $24,250,000 for the fourth quarter ended July 21, an increase of 6.2 percent from the $22,846,000 reported for the fourth quarter in fiscal 1989.

On these revenues, the company posted net income for the current quarter of $437,000, or 8 cents per share, primary and fully diluted, compared with a net loss of $1,473,000, or 28 cents per share, primary and fully diluted, for the comparable quarter in fiscal 1989.

For the twelve months of fiscal 1990, the company had revenues of $97,014,000, a 4 percent decrease from the $101,062,000 reported for fiscal 1989. On these revenues, however, the company posted net income of $209,000, or 4 cents per share, primary and fully diluted, which reflects a substantial improvement over the net loss of $32,605,000, or $6.29 per share, primary and fully diluted, reported in fiscal 1989.

This 1989 loss includes a charge to earnings of $10,844,000 for the discontinuance of certain operations and additional restructuring reserves of $11,985,000 reported in fiscal 1989.

''The company's fourth quarter and full year results reflect the company's turnaround progress. The revenue increase in the fourth quarter is significant, not only because it showed improvement from the comparable prior year period, but because it is also a 4 percent increase over the immediate prior quarter.

''The fourth quarter and full year results were favorably impacted due to the reversal of approximately $380,000 and $1,780,000, respectively, of certain restructuring reserves that were no longer considered necessary.

''Also during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, the company recognized a gain from the disposition of a discontinued operation of approximately $1,083,000 net of tax,'' said Andrew D. Wahl, vice president and chief financial officer.

Founded in 1968, System Industries Inc., provides innovative data storage subsystems integrated with comprehensive supporting services for the DEC operating environment. System Industries' corporate headquarters is located in Milpitas.

CALGARY, ALBERTA (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Intera Technologies Ltd. announced Friday the awarding of a $3.2 million Synthetic Aperture Radar (SAR) survey program with Malaysia's national oil company Petroliam Nasional Berhad (PETRONAS).

This contract involves the acquisition and processing of over 200,000 sq. km of high-resolution SAR data, covering the whole land area of the Malaysian states of Sabah and Sarawak on the equatorial island of Borneo.

Tropical equatorial regions such as Sabah and Sarawak are often shrouded in clouds and haze, hampering optical mapping techniques. Intera's STAR-1 SAR system creates photograph like images of the terrain by penetrating the clouds and haze using sophisticated imaging radar technology.

In Malaysia, Intera's STAR-1 data is to be used primarily for geologic mapping and interpretation of oil and gas exploration areas. Malaysia will also benefit from the planned use of the data for national programs in forest management, land use mapping, agricultural assessment, topographic mapping and environmental monitoring.

In addition, the company has been awarded eight projects from petroleum exploration companies that will be carried out on the way to Malaysia and in other S.E. Asian countries. The total amount of work awarded to Intera in the current quarter for STAR- 1 support of petroleum exploration now stands at $5.5 million. Work on these projects will begin immediately.

The company was also awarded two other petroleum-related using engineering and consulting services that totals $3 million. These are the first proprietary engineering projects exceeding $1 million in size funded directly by petroleum companies that have been awarded to ECL in the last five years.

The management of the company believe this is an indication of increasing strength in our petroleum market and expect that these projects will provide a strong start for our next fiscal year which commences Oct. 1.

The notes, which were executed Friday, Aug. 31, 1990, bear interest at a fixed rate of 9.92 percent with a ten-year final maturity and seven year average life.

Concurrently with the execution of the notes, Applied Power's bank group released certain security interests which had been structured into a five year revolving credit agreement put into place in June 1989, so that effectively all of Applied Power's debt is now unsecured.

In addition to providing a layer of longer-term debt, the placement complements the company's risk management activities by fixing a portion of its debt costs at a relatively attractive interest rate over the period.

Also, terms of the notes are sufficiently flexible to enable management to continue to aggressively pursue economically beneficial growth opportunities. Proceeds of the offering have been used to pay down shorter-term, floating rate bank debt.

Applied Power is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the APWRA symbol. Applied Power is a global company which manufactures and distributes tools, equipment, systems, components and consumable items to manufacturing, construction, transportation, mobile equipment, aircraft, natural resource, specialized machinery and office markets. Approximately 45 percent of the company's sales and assets are outside of the United States.

COLLINGWOOD, ONTARIO (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Keller Industries Limited (NASDAQ: KILSF (Shares); KILWF (Warrants)) (''the Company'') Friday announced financial results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1990.

For the three months ended June 30, 1990, sales increased 120% to $1,072,922 from $488,550 in the same period of 1989. Net income for the current three month period increased to $105,493 or $.02 per share compared to net income of $5,210 or less than $.01 per share in the second quarter of 1989.

For the six months ended June 30, 1990, sales rose 123% to $1,281,523 from $574,312 in the first six months of 1989. The Company reported a net loss for the first six months of 1990 of $175,308 or $.04 per share as compared to a net loss of $81,784 or $.02 per share in the comparable period.

The increases in revenues in the first half and particularly the second quarter of 1990 are the result of a higher level of contracting activities undertaken by the Company and an increase in equipment sales.

During this period, Keller participated in four cement mortar lining contracts in the United States through its wholly owned subsidiary, Keller Pipeline Rehabilitation, Inc. These include two contracts in Los Angeles, a contract in Louisville, Kentucky, and a contract in Boston, Massachusetts, which began in June, 1990.

In addition, through its 50% owned Canadian subsidiary, Clearline Cement Lines, Inc., Keller entered its second year of contracting CML work with the city of Etobicoke, Ontario. A higher level of net income in the current period reflects increased gross profit margins, which reached 26.4% in the second quarter of 1990 as compared to 25% in the second quarter of 1989.

This is due to increased sales volume and subsequent economies of scale which allowed for more efficient operations.

In addition, selling, general and administrative expenses as a percentage of sales declined to 15% in the second quarter of 1990 as compared to 26% in the same quarter last year.

The first quarter of the current year was adversely affected by start-up costs incurred in U.S. contract operations, compounded by a loss in the first quarter on the Los Angeles contract. These costs together with the expected slow winter months have impacted the results for the six month period.

Paul Church, Chairman of Keller Industries, commented, ''We are pleased to report profitable operations in the second quarter of 1990. Thus far in 1990, our first year of operations in the U.S., we have participated in four cement mortar lining contracts with total contract value of approximately U.S. $3.6 million. Total contract value, while not indicative of the revenue and profit we have derived from our portion of these contracts, is a yardstick to measure our progress and involvement in the total CML market.''

Additionally Kevin Murray, Managing Director commented, ''Based on our current order book, we expect to continue our growth in revenues through the remainder of the year. With careful contract management, we expect to continue the profitable trend.''

Keller Industries Ltd. repairs and rehabilitates underground watermain pipeline systems using the cement mortar lining process (''CML''), a cost-effective technique which requires minimal excavation.

The Company designs and manufactures a proprietary system of equipment for use with the CML process.

HOUSTON (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Landmark Graphics Corp. Friday announced the completion of letters of intent for the acquisition of Inverse Theory & Application Inc. (ITA), of Calgary, Canada, and Zycor Inc., of Austin, Texas.

These letters of intent outline acquisitions based on exchanges of stock.

ITA is an innovative software developer specializing in interactive, workstation-based approaches to the processing of geophysical data. Zycor Inc. is a leading software vendor for interactive mapping and modeling of subsurface geology.

ITA and Zycor will maintain their operations as wholly owned subsidiaries headquartered in Calgary and Austin, respectively. Under the terms of the proposed acquisition, Landmark will issue approximately 1.4 million shares of Landmark stock with a current value of approximately $23 million.

Landmark believes that the transactions, when completed, will increase its expected revenues for 1991 fiscal year over previous estimates by approximately 20 percent. The transaction is expected to reduce Landmark's fiscal 1991 first quarter earnings per share from original expectations while increasing its earnings per share for the fiscal year.

The decrease for the first quarter will result from the dilution attributed to the acquisitions and expenses incurred in connection with the transaction.

Landmark has been a leader in the computer-aided exploration (CAEX) industry since the introduction of its interactive 3D seismic software in 1984. Used primarily by oil industry geophysicists to visualize subsurface features in the search for oil and gas, the company's products have focused on utilizing seismic data.

A key element of Landmark's long-term growth plan has been to extend CAEX tools to geoscientists in complementary markets, where different data types -- such as well data or engineering data -- are used. Accroding to company officials, these acquisitions address the need to expand the CAEX distribution channel and are part of a long-term plan to capture the broad opportunity offered by the CAEX market.

The ITA acquisition recognizes that the boundaries between seismic processing and seismic interpretation are fading, partly due to the availability of interactive tools.

Landmark is the leading supplier of computer-aided exploration technology with systems installed in more than 27 countries. OpenWorks is a registered trademark of Landmark Graphics Corp.

MELVILLE, NY (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Legal Software Solutions Inc. (OTC:LSSI) named a new chief executive officer and reported substantial decreases in last year-end losses fueled in large part by strong sales from its new EasyCollect II legal collections product and through significant reductions in cost and expenses.

LSSI develops and markets integrated computer software systems to serve the nation's $36 billion debt collection industry. The company markets in EasyCollect litigation systems to law firms, financial institutions, corporate collections departments, federal, state and muncipal governments.

During 1990, LSSI sold 12 new software collection systems, eight of them the company's new EasyCollect II PC product. Revenues from the sales of computer software increased by $220,918, or 35 percent over the prior year. Computer hardware sales increased by $134,574 or by 68 percent.

Total sales for the year increased by 43 percent to $1,186,463. With costs and expenses reduced by $480,817, or 16 percent, the company's net operating loss for the year ending April 30, decreased by $836,309, or by 38 percent to $1,370,882.

Effective Aug. 16, Frank Murphy was named the company's new chief executive officer. Prior to his appointment, Murphy was executive vice president of Baxter Systems, a division of the Chicago-based Baxter HealthCare Inc. As such, he was responsible for field operations and for annual revenues of $35 million.

Murphy said he expected sales of the new EasyCollect II system to increase substantially during the year based on the lower cost of the product and on an increasing market trend to utilize the PC platform for debt collection purposes.

To spur system sales, the company earlier this year entered into a cooperative marketing agreement with Julius Blumberg Inc., a market leader in the sales of legal forms and supplies.

Though sales and earnings are moving in a positive direction, Murphy said that the company would require further financing to enable it to meet its capital requirements and to fund its marketing activities.

To that end, the company has recently received a commitment for a $300,000 investment from a group of investors for 2 million shares.

FORT WORTH, TX (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Justin Industries Inc. (NASDAQ:JSTN) announced Friday that its board of directors has rescinded a previously adopted amendment to the company's bylaws which increased the vote required to remove directors from office at a special meeting of shareholders from a majority (of the stock voted at a meeting) to 75 percent of the outstanding stock.

John Justin, chairman of the board, president and chief executive officer of the company said, ''On Nov. 3, 1989, the board of directors of the company adopted an amendment to the company's bylaws which required the consent of 75 percent of the outstanding stock to remove a director at a special meeting of shareholders.

''This was done to make it more difficult for a hostile raider to acquire the company without first negotiating with the board of directors. The board also believed that the amendment would make it more difficult for a corporate raider to acquire the company through a hostile tender offer at a price far below the true value of the company.

''However, in litigation, the Sutherland/Rosenstein group of shareholders has characterized the amendment and its nondisclosure as an effort to deliberately deceive the company's shareholders and strip them of their right to remove directors.

''Although the company vehemently disagrees with such a characterization, and intends to contest vigorously the claims made against it in such litigation, the company wishes to avoid any appearance of unfairness to any of its shareholders.

''Accordingly, the board voted today to rescind the previously adopted bylaw amendment and reinstate the prior provisions of the bylaws providing for removal of directors by a majority vote of shareholders (at any meeting at which there is a quorum of shareholders).''

TINTON FALLS, NJ (SEPT. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Concurrent Computer Corporation today announced financial results for its fourth quarter and fiscal year ended June 30, 1990.

The company reported a fourth quarter net loss of $38.0 million, or $2.05 per share, compared with a net loss of $.6 million, or 3 cents per share, in the previous year. Fourth quarter results include a restructuring provision of $24.2 million, or $1.31 per share, in connection with the previously announced strategic reorganization intended to better align costs and revenues and substantially reduce its break-even point. Prior year results included a gain of $3.6 million from the sale of a 40 percent interest in the company's wholly owned Japanese subsidiary.

The strategic reorganization and its associated provision includes the termination of manufacturing at the company's Ireland facility and reductions in its worldwide workforce. A downturn in business, reflecting the conditions of the industry, led the company to reduce excess manufacturing capacity and necessitated the other actions. The related restructuring provision of $24.2 million is primarily attributable to plant shutdown costs, severances and other related costs.

Net sales for the fourth quarter were $78.4 million compared with $85.6 million in the prior year. The company said that confusion and hesitation in the marketplace, caused by the accelerated trend towards standards-based products, resulted in delayed purchase decisions. In addition, unexpected customer requested delays and cancellations, specifically in government programs where uncertain conditions exist, contributed to the decline.

Net loss for the year was $41.7 million, or $2.28 per share, compared with a net loss of $24.7 million, or $1.43 per share, in the prior year. Restructuring provisions totaling $27.2 million and non-cash purchase accounting charges of $12.5 million contributed significantly to the most recent loss.

Net sales for the year were $340.1 million compared with $278.0 million a year ago. Prior year results did not inlcude three months of former Concurrent's operations due to the timing of the merger with the company.

The company said it continues to be constrained by its highly leveraged capital sturcture and, as previously announced, is working with Golman, Sachs & Co. to seek alternatives.

Based on the reported results, the company has entered into discussions with its senior lenders to adjust or waive certain covenant requirements.

Concurrent Computer Corporation, headquartered in Tinton Falls, New Jersey is the leading supplier of high-performance, real-time computer systems worldwide. The company's products, marketed through the Commercial Markets, Simulation/Training and Real-Time Technical Systems groups, provide real-time solutions to the financial, communications, public sector, technical, aerospace and simulation markets. Its common stock (CCUR) is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System.

ARMONK, N.Y. (SEPT 7) BUSINESS WIRE - A federal court in Philadelphia has ruled that copying by Allen-Myland, Inc. (AMI), of IBM software known as ''3090 microcode'' violated IBM copyrights.

AMI's copying was also found to involve the distribution of copies of the microcode with false and misleading labels which were intended by AMI to mislead customers into believing that the copies were created and distributed by IBM.

Additionally, the court found that AMI breached agreements with IBM relating to upgrades of certain 308X systems and breached an agreement for the purchase of a 3090 Model 400E ''split'' RPQ (request for a price quotation). A portion of one of IBM's counterclaims was not granted based on a technical interpretation of IBM's 1956 Consent Decree.

In his decision, U.S. District Judge Thomas N. O'Neill, Jr., ruled in part that ''...the evidence established that AMI has engaged in extensive copying of the 3090 microcode, both to stock its library and to supply the 3090 microcode to reconfigured or split 3090 systems.''

The court also found in IBM's favor on all claims asserted by AMI against IBM, including breach of contract claims relating to 3090 microcode licenses and 3090 system support, as well as IBM's alleged interference with AMI's 3090 split and memory upgrade activities.

Finally, the court dismissed AMI's remaining antitrust claim. The court had previously ruled in IBM's favor on AMI's principal antitrust claim in 1988.

The court directed that further proceedings take place to determine the precise nature of the injunctions to be entered in IBM's favor and to determine the amount of damages that AMI will be required to pay IBM.

BEIJING (SEPT. 7) - Steel producers' profits have slumped since the start of the year, despite substantial production increases, the China Daily reported Friday.

From January to August, steel production in China -- the fourth biggest steel producer in the world -- grew by 8.9 percent, compared to the same period in 1989, to 42.79 million tons, the English-language newspaper said.

However, the profits of the biggest state-owned steelmakers plummeted 26.7 percent in the first seven months of the year -- figures for August are not available -- an official from the Ministry of Metallurgical Industry said.

He said nine major state-owned steelmakers had been losing money since the start of the year, against three at the same period in 1989.

The profit fall was blamed on slower growth caused by the austerity programme in place since the end of 1988, and by a substantial rise in production costs, the newspaper said.

In the first eight months of 1990, supply exceeded demand for the first time in 10 years, it said, adding that the production rise was due to improved supplies of coal, electricity and iron ore.

If steel production followed current trends, China could produce 64 million tons (70.4 million tons) of steel this year, against 61 million tons (67.1 million tons) in 1989, the newspaper said.

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA (SEPT. 7) - The ANZ Banking Group Friday said it will cut its prime interest rate 0.25 percentage points to 17 percent from Monday.

The decrease brings the rate the ANZ charges its best corporate customers in line with that of the Commonwealth Bank and the National Australia Bank.

Australia's largest bank, Westpac Banking Corp., still has its prime rate set at 17.5 percent.

The announcement came a day after a surge in the unemployment rate, from 6.9 percent in July to 7.3 percent in August, sparked speculation that Canberra would ease its tight monetary policy to avoid plunging the economy into recession.

MANILA (SEPT. 7) - Philippine gross domestic product (GDP) growth fell to 2.69 percent in the first half of 1990 from 5.76 percent a year before, due largely to a drought and power shortages, the government planning agency said Friday.

The National Economic Development Authority (NEDA) said all major economic sectors suffered, noting that the growth in GDP, which measures a country's output of goods and services, was only slightly above the annual population increase of 2.31 percent.

The NEDA said the first-semester figures showed the agriculture, fisheries and forestry sector growing by only 0.17 percent.

Industry, which set the pace for growth in earlier years, expanded by only 3.64 percent and manufacturing by only 2.83 percent because of the severe power shortage that caused daily power cuts in Manila at the beginning of the year.

Gross national product (GNP), which includes GDP plus the foreign exchange earned mostly by an estimated one million Filipino workers abroad, also declined in the first semester to 3.4 percent from 5.43 percent in the same period in 1989, it said.

The Philippine economy is in for further shocks in the second semester of 1990 because of the Gulf crisis and a devastating earthquake in July.

SUVA (SEPT. 7) - The Reserve Bank of Fiji expects the country's trade deficit to reach a record 344 million Fijian dollars (254 million U.S.) this year, despite a 20 percent projected increase in exports.

The bank's deputy governor, Hari Pal Singh, told the Australia-Fiji Business council here that it was "important to safeguard Fiji's foreign reserves -- currently 400 million dollars (284 million U.S) -- since its exports base is small compared to its imports."

Sugar exports this year are expected to reach 230 million U.S. dollars, Mr. Singh said, while sales of gold, fish, timber and garments would take total exports to 451 million U.S. dollars.

Australia absorbs 25 percent of exports from Fiji, whose other large markets are New Zealand and Britain.

Imports in 1990 are projected at 1,110 million dollars (781 million U.S.) with Australia supplying 31 percent, followed by New Zealand and Japan.

Tokyo (SEPT. 7) - Japan Friday decided to give additional aid of 12 million dollars to help relief activities for Asian refugees in the Gulf.

The new aid pledge followed a one-billion-dollar contribution promised by Tokyo August 30 to the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the Gulf region.

The money is to be used to help Asian migrant workers mainly from Bangladesh, the Philippines, Pakistan and Sri Lanka, return to their home countries from Jordan and other Gulf nations.

TOKYO (SEPT. 7) - In an audience with Japanese Emperor Akihito, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze invited Akihito to visit the Soviet Union, imperial palace sources said Friday.

During half-hour meeting, Shevardnadze said the Kremlin intended to have Anatoly Lukyanov, Chairman of the Supreme Soviet, attend the emperor's coronation on November 12.

Shevardnadze was also quoted as saying he was able to discuss ''unsettled problems'' with Japanese leaders during his visit and the talks were ''useful''.

Although not specified, among such ''problems'' was believed to be that of a return to Japanese rule of the Kurile islands north of Japan, occupied by the Soviets at the end of World War II.

SEOUL (SEPT. 7) - A North Korean delegation headed by Prime Minister Yon Hyong Muk Friday ended a four-day visit to Seoul - the first official visit to South Korea by a Pyongyang deputation.

A spokesman for the North Koreans said the historic visit had brought relations ''a big step forwards'' between the two Koreas, which have been divided since the end of World War Ii.

While the talks saw no major breakthrough, agreement was reached to negotiate on the issue of a common seat at the United Nations, and on enabling relatives north and south to visit each other.

Other ''important points on the road to reunification'', as both sides called them, would be discussed at a follow-up meeting of the two prime ministers in Pyongyang in mid-October.

On the agenda would be disarmament, developing economic contacts, and changing South Korera's tough laws forbidding its citizens from visiting North Korea.

Jerusalem (SEPT. 7) - Israeli secret service agents have arrested over 90 Palestinians in what security sources termed Friday one of the biggest crackdowns on underground organisations since the start of the intifada almost three years ago.

The arrests were made in recent weeks and were claimed to have ruptured two of the biggest Palestinian nderground organisations in the occupied West Bank.

One regional organisation contained 90 members, was affiliated to the Democratic Front for the Liberation of Palestine headed by Na'if Hawatme, and had large amounts of explosives, security sources said.

BEIJING (SEPT. 7) - Typhoon Cecil killed 35 people and left 42 missing when it pounded the city of Wenzhou on Tuesday, the China News Service (CNS) reported Friday.

Cecil, the 17th typhoon to hit the Chinese coast this year and the third in as many weeks, destroyed thousands of houses and flooded large areas of farmland, CNS said.

It said officials feared the final toll would be much higher, and that a new warning signal had been hoisted with the approach of Typhoon Dot.

Wenzhou is in the southeastern province of Zhejiang, which was hit by typhoons Yancy on August 20 and Abe between August 31 and September 3.

Yancy claimed 101 lives and seriously injured 546, while Abe, the worst tropical cyclone to hit China in 34 years, left 108 dead, 40 missing and 850 injured, according to official figures.

PORT ADELAIDE, AUSTRALIA (SEPT. 7) - Australia Submarine Corp. (ASC) is about to launch a commercial push in Canada and has its eyes on Southeast Asia as a potential market to carry it into the 21st century.

ASC's corporate affairs manager, Ross Milton, said that submarine builders should in the future also regard aircraft manufacturers as potential clients.

"We are acquiring a unique expertise in the management of complex, multi-purpose machines and there is no reason in the wide world why we should not be building modules for airplanes or spacecraft," he said.

ASC is gaining its expertise in a grey hangar on the banks of Adelaide's Port River, where it is assembling Australia's new submarine fleet.

A private company partly owned by Kockums of Sweden, ASC was set up to bid for the four-billion dollar (3.2 billion U.S.) contract signed in June 1987 for six diesel-electric boats.

But, Mr. Milton said, "we no longer see ourselves as a single-project company. We are beginning to court the Canadian navy and are setting up an office in Ottawa next month."

The commercial push will involve Rockwell Ship Systems Australia, a subsidiary of the U.S. firm Rockwell International which designs and supplies the weapons system for the submarines under subcontract to ASC.

Kockums, the Swedish navy's submarine design authority, "have ambitions," Mr. Milton added, and "we see ourselves as something of a base for them on the other side of the world."

Swedish designers, he said, are trying to reduce what they call a submarine's "indiscretion ratio," the proportion of time it has to spend on the surface.

Nuclear-powered submarines can remain submerged for longer than diesel-electric boats, which must recharge their batteries.

The Swedish navy, however, has already commissioned one submarine with a new kind of engine, the Stirling V4-275R, which can remain under water for longer than conventional boats.

"Diesel-electric submarines are a growth business," Mr. Milton said, pointing out that Sweden and West Germany were among the 40-odd countries which preferred them to the nuclear-powered boats favoured by France and the United States.

"It's assumed by the submarine community that Canada will revert to diesel-electric submarines," he said.

According to Canadian officials in Canberra, Canada's submarine fleet already comprises three diesel-electric, Oberon-class boats, similar to those in commission in Australia.

Australia's six O-boats, the country's first submarines, were bought from Britain in the 1960's and 1970's and Australia has relied exclusively on British maintenance.

The Australian navy has not decided which company will refit its 2,500-tonne Collins-class boats, the first of which is due to hit the slipway in August 1993.

But while ASC seems an obvious choice, "refits would not be enough to sustain the company," Mr. Milton said.

Apart from Canada, ASC regards Indonesia, Malaysia, South Korea, Taiwan and Thailand as potential customers, although it is not yet at the negotiating stage.

For several years at least, any submarines on offer will be Swedish-designed. Although the contract specifies that 70 per cent of the Collins-class boats must be Australian -- except their weapons systems, which have 45 per cent local content -- Mr. Milton said "we are really assemblers of submarines."

The estuarine plain where welders are working on the first two submarine hulls lies a couple of miles from Gillman, designated by the South Australian government as the site for the Multi-Function Polis (MFP), popularly known as Australia's "science city of the future".

Mr. Milton sees ASC as "potentially an element" of the MFP, where the government wants to see new industries and research institutes as the focal points of interlinked villages.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 7) - Amgold, the investment company in the Anglo American stable, has seen its earnings for the six months to August plummet 38 percent to 100.9 million rand (39.3 million dollars), according to figures released here.

The directors of the company, which has gold interests in South Africa, South America, Australia and the Far East, attributed the poor interim showing to sharply reduced dividend distribution from gold mining companies.

The reduced earnings resulted in a 38 percent fall in the interim dividend per share to 400 cents (156 U.S. cents).

Amgold attributed the continued fall in mine profit margins to inflation-driven increases in working costs and a continued low gold price.

In a statement, Amgold's directors said that during the first six months of 1990, the gold price averaged 386 dollars an ounce, only 0.5 percent higher than the average price of 384 dollars an ounce in the previous half year.

Steps being taken to respond to "these adverse circumstances" include curtailment of capital expenditure, retrenchment programmes, elimination of non-essential costs, increased hedging operations and reduction in mining of lower grade ore.

"The results for the second half of the financial year will depend largely on the prevailing rand gold price and the extent to which costs can be maintained," the statement said.

SOFIA (SEPT. 7P) - Bulgaria is to ration electricity to both industry and private households in the coming winter, the Semja newspaper on Friday quoted an energy agency official as saying.

Industry will see its supply cut by between 10 and 20 percent under the measure, which will cover the whole country without exceptions.

The Bulgarian capital and some provincial areas have been experiencing power cuts since August 19 because of a shortage of electricity supply put at some 3,700 megawatts per day by experts.

The shortfall is due to a drought which has hit hydroelectric plants, a breakdown at the Kozloduj nuclear plant and a fall in production at other plants.

The energy shortage has been worsened by oil supply problems due both to a reduction in Soviet deliveries and the Gulf crisis.

Bulgaria had been turning to Iraq to make up for the reduction in Soviet supplies, but this source has now also dried up because of the U.N. embargo on Iraqi oil following Baghdad's invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

Electricity is not the only product being rationed here. Ration cards for sugar and edible oil were issued on Saturday, and other items could well join the list soon.

Queues for such items as meat, fish, pulses, shoes and soap are growing ever loner.

According to the statistics office, production in Bulgaria fell 9.4 percent in the first seven months of this year compared to the same period of 1989.

BUCHAREST (SEPT. 7) - Two people died and 29 were injured in an explosion at a chemical plant in Fagaras in central Romania Thursday night, hospital sources said on Friday.

The blast occurred in a part of the plant where TNT explosives were stored, causing major structural damagee to the building, according to sources at the plant contacted by telephone.

Prime Minister Petre Roman flew by helicopter to Brasov, some 60 kilometers (35 miles) from the plant, where one of three seriously injured workers was transferred, and was expected to visit the site of the accident.

Two other victims remain in Fagaras hospital, but the others were released after emergency treatment.

The cause of the accident in the plant, which produces primarily ammonia and chemical fertilizers, was not immediately known.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) - A group of 250 British women and children, the largest single group of hostages to be evacuated from Kuwait and Iraq, arrived here Friday and described the horrors of life in Kuwait in recent weeks.

The latest evacuees were among more than 300 foreigners who left Kuwait

Tuesday in a special convoy for Baghdad. From there they travelled to Amman aboard an Iraqi Airways plane chartered by the British Government before being flown back to London's Gatwick airport on a British Airways flight.

The Foreign Office here said some 50 British nationals who were also in the convoy were forced to remain in Baghdad because they had not yet been issued with exit visas.

The group was expected to get the visas shortly and would hopefully be repatriated in the coming days, a spokesman said.

The latest evacuees were met at the airport by family members and recounted stories of how they had been forced to hide from Iraqi soldiers in Kuwait who were rounding up Britons.

"We hid everywhere, under water tanks, on the roof, under the stairs, everywhere," said Miriam Tyler, 29, the mother of three children also evacuated.

Another released hostage, Hanam Allahou who left her Kuwaiti husband behind, said law was breaking down in the emirate.

Iraqi forces were "looting, they are taking everything," she said.

"They are destroying the country, they are burning trees and wrecking schools with bulldozers," Mrs. Allahou added.

Deborah Hodgetts, a 25-year-old airline stewardess, described the journey from Kuwait to Baghdad in a coach driven by a drunken Iraqi who demanded money and valuables from the hostages.

"He was drunk and swaying around," she said. "He took us off to find a place for drinks. We asked him to slow down and he stopped the bus and said he was not going on until he got money and valuables," she said, adding that at times the bus was travelling at more than 200 kilometers-per-hour (115 miles-per-hour).

Another flight of 158 evacuees arrived at Gatwick airport late Thursday with a number of Irish nationals aboard. They disembarked and were flown on to Dublin, officials said.

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 7) - India accused the world on Friday of insensitivity to human suffering in the Gulf conflict and urged the United Nations to allow food and medicine to reach Iraqi-occupied Kuwait before people die of hunger.

The international community had acted quickly in imposing sanctions against Iraq for annexing Kuwait, but failed to grasp the seriousness of hardships facing civilians in the region, the government said.

The more than 100,000 Indians among the thousands of foreigners trapped in the region were suffering from the U.S.-led economic blockade, and were New Delhi's main concern, a foreign ministry spokesman said.

"But Iraqis are human beings too," the spokesman said. "If it is the claim of the world that the Iraqis are not entitled to humanitarian treatment, then it is something else."

In a strongly-worded statement issued at a special briefing to journalists here, the spokesman denied that New Delhi's asking for food to be sent could be interpreted as trying to violate U.N. sanctions on Iraq for its invasion and annexation of Kuwait.

But he said it was "inhuman to expect political objectives to be achieved by starving people."

He urged the United Nations to recognise that civilians were suffering because of the blockade and to allow food and medicine to be sent to the region.

Countries spearheading the blockade did not appear to have realised that the "situation is bad enough," the spokesman said. "When do you decide this? When children start dropping dead?

"We hope that good sense will prevail on the international community and people are not allowed to die of starvation," he said.

STUTTGART (SEPT. 7) - The Porsche sports car company said here Friday its turnover reached almost 3.05 billion marks (1.95 billion dollars) in the 1989-90 up over 20 percent from the previous year's 2.5 billion marks.

The company said its earnings for the year ending July 31 had ''improved'' over the 1988-89 result, but did not disclose a figure. In 1988-89, Porsche reported pre-tax profits of 75 million marks, nearly double the figure of the year before.

Porsche said its turnover volume included other business activities besides car sales. The car division accounted for 2.56 billion marks of the total turnover, up from 2.14 billion marks in the 1988-89 business year.

Altogether, Porsche sales reached 31,235 cars in the 1989-90 year, up 7.6 percent from the year before.

While sales at home and in most foreign markets were strong, the United States, which had once been Porsche's chief export area, remained troublesome. The company said its U.S. sales plunged 23 percent to 7,852 cars in the year being reported.

Sales in Germany inceased 16.3 percent to 8,729, and sales to foreign markets besides the U.S. surged 29.5 percent to 14,654.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 7) - Responsibility for registering joint ventures in the Soviet Union is to be passed from Moscow to the finance ministries of the republics in January, the TASS news agency said Friday.

"Rumours that the Soviet Finance Minister will stop registering joint ventures on Soviet territory from September 10 are unfounded," it quoted Soviet Finance Ministry official Alexander Sokolov as saying.

The finance ministry recently handed over responsibility for registering joint ventures to the republican auhorities in Armenia and the Baltic republics at their requests, and they now exercise administrative control over joint ventures in their areas, Mr. Sokolov said.

He also said that the high level of applications to register joint ventures was creating delays. Some 2,180 joint ventures had already been set up at the rate of more than 100 a month.

BERLIN (SEPT. 7) - Some 2,000 East German miners on Friday occupied mines in southern East Germany used to extract uranium for Soviet nuclear weapons, protesting over the closure of the pits as a result of German unification.

The night shift underground workers, supported by several thousand colleaques on the surface, refused to leave the mines in the Thuringen and Saxony regions, the ADN news agency said.

They were demanding retraining for other jobs, environmental measures and a plan to set up new industry in the region to compensate for the loss of thousands of jobs due to the closure.

The mines are operated by East German-Soviet concern SDAG Wismut based at Aue in Saxony which employs 34,000 people.

West Germany and the Soviet Union have agreed that the mines, which are not competitive in terms of cost and do not conform with modern safety standards, should be closed.

SDAG Wismut, created in 1946 in what was then the Soviet-occupied zone in Germany to enable Moscow to build an atomic bomb, was shrouded in total secrecy until the beginning of this year.

It has been extracting between 3,000 and 8,000 tonnes of yellow cake a year for 34 years.

The SDAG Wismut management, union leaders and the works committee called in a joint statement for swift clarification on the company's future, ADN said.

SINGAPORE (SEPT. 7) - Singapore's exports of computers and related products to East Europe jumped more than 12 times from a paltry 3.2 million dollars (1.8 million U.S.) in 1987 to 40 million dollars (22.7 million U.S.) in 1989, the Trade Development Board said.

Singapore will be taking part for the first time in two computer trade shows in the Soviet Union and Hungary this month and next, the board added in its Tradespur magazine.

It said that exports of personal computers surged from zero in 1988 to 25.6 million dollars (14.5 million U.S.) in 1989 and constituted more than 71 percent of the republic's computer exports to East Europe for the year.

The Soviet Union was the largest East bloc market, importing 15 million dollars' (8.5 million U.S.) worth of computer products from Singapore in 1989 and accounting for more than one-third of Singapore-made computer exports to the bloc.

The Soviet Union's imports in 1989 represented a "significant" jump of more than 48 times from 307,000 dollars (174,430 U.S.) in 1987, the board said.

Poland took up 22 percent of Singapore computer exports to Eastern Europe, buying 8.8 million dollars (five million U.S.) in 1989, up from 514,000 dollars (292,000) in 1987.

Hungary followed with 15 percent, importing just over six million dollars (3.4 million U.S.) in 1989, up from 160,000 dollars (90,900 U.S.) in 1987.

EAST LONDON, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 7) - Senior members of the black nationalist African National Congress (ANC) and the South African Communist Party (SACP) on Friday joined attempts to resolve a strike at the Mercedes Benz South Africa (MBSA) plant here.

The National Union of Metalworkers of South Africa (NUMSA) said in a statement that Cape ANC leader Ray Mhlaba and senior SACP member John Gomomo would address striking workers Friday in an attempt to resolve the dispute.

Local NUMSA officials later confirmed that the two men were locked in day-long talks with the workers.

Production at the plant in this south coast town has been suspended since August 16 when a section of the workforce began a "sleep-in" to press demands that the company withdraw from a National Bargaining Forum backed by NUMSA.

Despite raising ANC banners from the company's flagpoles, the strikers, at times numbering up to 800, resisted all efforts by the ANC-aligned NUMSA to talk them into leaving.

Management eventually obtained a Supreme Court order which allowed police to evict the workers on Sunday, but the plant has remained closed.

The company has said production will only resume when damage done during the strike has been repaired, NUMSA has sorted out problems over the National Bargaining Forum and has brought its hourly-paid members into line with union and management agreements.

In addition, NUMSA and management would first have to agree on a process of ratifying the sacking of sit-in strikers, and on a practical disputes procedure.

The strike has cost MBSA at least 160 million rand (62.5 million dollars) in lost production, based on management claims that it had cost 121 million rand (47.2 million dollars) in the first 13 days alone.

Management had said the strike could jeopardise the existence of the plant, with 3,000 jobs at the East London factory directly at risk along with thousands of spin-off jobs at the plant's suppliers in the town.

TOKYO (SEPT. 7P) - The Japanese government decided Friday to allow oil companies to raise prices in view of higher prices on the world market because of the Gulf crisis, officials said.

But the government immediately called on oil product suppliers to limit the price hikes to a minimum to forestall inflation, they said.

Suppliers are expected to increase prices of gasoline, kerosene and other oil products next week, industry sources said without specifying the expected price levels.

The International Trade and Industry Ministry will ask oil firms to make further streamlining efforts to absorb as much of the added costs as possible, officials said.

Some of the 20 cabinet members opposed the hike saying Japan maintained crude oil stockpiles equivalent to 142 days' supply, which were built up when oil prices were at a low level, official sources said.

HANOI (SEPT. 7) - Vietnam is introducing a variable taxation plan for imports and exports under which tax rates will be adjusted depending on the country's economic needs, the official daily newspaper Nhan Dan reported.

The authorities have also decided to tax spare parts and semi-finished products imported for local assembly at between 50 per cent and 70 per cent of the rate that would apply to the same products imported fully assembled, the newspaper said.

This measure is designed to increase the number of local businesses assembling goods, tax experts said.

The new variable tax plan will increase or cut taxes -- to be determined by the Council of Ministers -- to adjust prices in line with world trends or to regulate imports according to Vietnam's needs, they said.

For example, the government will be able to set a ceiling tax for rice exports -- which are in a three to 10 per cent bracket -- when international demand is heavy, or a minimum tax when the market is stagnant, experts said.

They said the new arrangements allow tax adjustments on imports depending on the country's needs -- tax increases to protect local products, and tax cuts if higher domestic demand warrants it.

Nhan Dan said the new plan would mainly affect fuel and raw material imports, which would be taxed at between 15 and 30 per cent, and electronic components and integrated circuits, which would be taxed at between zero and 15 per cent.

For exports, rice would be taxed from three per cent to 10 per cent, but coffee, tea and pepper would be taxed at one to five percent, Nhan Dan said.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) - British sugar group Tate and Lyle said Friday it had made an offer to buy rival British Sugar, the country's leading producer of beet sugar, from troubled commodities house Berisford International.

Berisford put British Sugar on offer in July after announcing a 41 percent drop in taxable interim profit due to a disastrous diversification into the New York property market.

Tate and Lyle had made a bid for British Sugar in 1987 but it was blocked by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission as it would give Tate and Lyle control of 95 percent of the British sugar market.

Tate and Lyle had said it was studying a new bid, but withdrew in July after the opening of a Monopolies and Mergers Commission enquiry into the move.

"We hope that an MMC enquiry can be started quickly and completed within a foreshortened timescale given the work already undertaken on the previous referral," Tate and Lyle chairman Neil Shaw said Friday.

Tate and Lyle "welcomes the opportunity to purchase British Sugar without also acquiring the non-sugar assets.

Estimates of a likely price for British Sugar range between 700 million and 1.5 billion pounds (1.3 billion and 2.8 billion dollars).

Tate and Lyle shares were down eight pence at 245 in early afternoon trading in London, while those of Berisford were up a penny at 41.

Associated British Foods (ABF), which also has its eye on British Sugar, was down 16 pence at 402.

BUJUMBURA (SEPT. 7) - Pope John Paul spent the last day of his Burundi visit at a hospital for terminally-ill AIDS patients.

The Prince Regent hospital built in l950 when Burundi was still a Belgian territory is run by the Catholic church here for seriously sick people from all over the country who have no money.

Accompanied by Bishop Simon Ntamwana, director of the hospital, the pope placed his hands on most of the 40 patients, 20 men and 20 women, ranging from a 17-year-old girl to an aged woman both on the point of death.

He told the bishop the Vatican was donating 10,000 dollars for the patients' care.

More than 3,000 cases of AIDS (acquired immune deficiency syndrome) have been registered in Burundi, according to latest official figures, but doctors are sure many more remain undetected.

In addition, 15 per cent of the five million population is HIV-positive (is carrying the potential AIDS virus), with that figure rising to 18 per cent in the capital.

Wiesbaden (SEPT. 7) - Strong private consumption by West Germans and the surge in new consumer spending in East Germany triggered a real 14 percent jump in retail sales turnover in July compared to the same month last year it was reported here Friday.

The Federal Office of Statistics said that for the first seven months, German retailers improved their turnover by a real 7.2 percent over the January-July 1989 period.

The office said that in July, private car sales turnover was 30 percent higher than a year ago, while consumer electronics goods turnover was 26 per- cent higher.

Catalogue mail-order companies in West Germany experienced a 28 percent rise in turnover in July due to the additional demand from East Germany, the office said.

BERN (SEPT. 7) - Swiss inflation was running at 6.1 percent a year at the end of August, the Federal Statistics Office said here Friday. The announcement confirmed the provisional figure announced a week ago. The price index rose by 1.1 points in August from July, to 122.3 points, the Office said.

The announcement said that the inflation trend to the end of the year will depend, to a great extent, on trends in oil prices and rents. The latter are to be raised in November. Heating oil prices were up by 26.1 percent in August from July, and were 23.1 percent above the level of the year-earlier month.

LISBON (SEPT. 7) - The average salary in Portugal is 67,000 escudos (480 dollars) a month, according to a survey carried out by the Employment and Social Security Ministry and released on Friday.

The study shows that a little more than seven percent of the country's four million workers get only the minimum wage of 35,000 escudos (250 dollars) - 9.5 percent of women workers and 4.8 percent of men workers.

The highest salaries are paid in the banking and insurance sectors, with a monthly average of 112,000 escudos (800 dollars), while the building and public works sector is among the worst paid with an average monthly wage of around 45,000 escudos (322 dollars).

MANILA (SEPT. 7) - The military is seeking a 19.736 billion peso (789.4 million U.S. dollars) budget for 1991, the bulk of which will be used to support personnel services, the official Philippine News Agency (PNA) said here Friday.

The PNA quoted military chief General Renato De Villa as saying that 68.29 percent of the proposed budget or 13.478 billion pesos (539.12 million dollars) would go to personnel services with 27.61 percent for maintenance and other expenses and 4.1 percent on capital outlay.

Among the priority programs of the military in 1991 are the maintenance of a force structure of 169,900 regular troops, 82,000 militiamen, 22,204 civilian employees and 11,130 reservists, PNA quoted Gen. De Villa as saying. The budget is also intended to provide for the operation and maintenance of 228 sea vessels and 140 aircraft, the PNA said.

The Philippine military, which is one of the most poorly-equipped in the region, has been accused of devoting too much of its resources to support staff and not enough on front-line troops battling a nationwide communist insurgency.

President Corazon Aquino proposed a 254.4 billion peso (10.17 billion dollar) budget for 1991 last month but congress has vowed to cut this down.

BAGHDAD (SEPT. 7) - Iraq is ready to send a television crew and a journalist to Washington to interview U.S. President George Bush, an information ministry official said here Friday.

Naji al-Hadithi, a director at the information ministry, said Iraqi television wanted to question the U.S. president "about his point of view on the different current problems."

The television crew was "ready to leave for Washington at any moment, once it has received the White House's agreement for this interview," Mr. Hadithi told Agence France-Presse.

Mr. Bush has already welcomed Baghdad's offer to address the Iraqi people directly on television, but the White House said it would record the MOSCOW (SEPT. 7) - The U.S.-Soviet summit Sunday in Helsinki highlights the extraordinary superpower cooperation that has emerged since the advent of perestroika, despite some differences over the Gulf crisis.

"It's a sign that times have changed, it's very pleasant to see", a senior Western diplomat here commented.

From day one of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Washington urged Moscow to react. "In the hours that followed, Moscow announced it was halting arms deliveries to Iraq immediately, (where) normally it would have taken days to respond", the diplomat said.

President Mikhail Gorbachev had already shown his new thinking in foreign policy by facing up to the demise of communism in Eastern Europe and easing German unification.

But in the Gulf crisis, Soviet cooperation with Washington has reached such a degree that Moscow even went as far as giving the United States information on Soviet arms previously shipped to Iraq.

All was not smooth sailing. Recent articles and statements here expressed concern about the massive deployment of U.S. troops in the Gulf region "near Soviet borders".

And the continued presence of 180 Soviet military experts in Iraq following its August 2 invasion of Kuwait set off a stormy debate within the Soviet leadership, with opponents pointing to the "moral issue" at stake and calling for them to be brought home urgently.

Experts whose contracts have expired are already starting to return home, but the Kremlin, fearing Baghdad could grab the chance to default on its six billion dollar debt to the Soviets, is taking a cautious approach.

From his first public statement on the crisis August 17, Mr. Gorbachev condemned Iraq and mapped out a Soviet policy of strong action under the aegis of the U.N. Security Council, while calling for an "Arab solution".

Moscow backed the United Nations-decreed embargo against Iraq. "The Soviet attitude in the Security Council was decisive", the diplomat said, "They allowed almost unanimous votes, giving the Security Council a chance, perhaps for the first time ever, to work the way it should".

PRETORIA (SEPT. 7) - South Africa's gold and foreign reserves rose by 10 percent to 6.07 billion rand (2.35 billion dollars) in August from 5.43 billion rand (2.06 billion dollars) in July, the Reserve (central) Bank said here Friday.

The rise was mainly due to an increase of 429.8 million rand (166.7 million dollars) in foreign exchange reserves which totalled 2.75 billion rand (1.06 billion dollars) on August 31.

Gold reserves also rose - to 3.31 billion rand (1.28 billion dollars) from 3.10 billion rands (1.186 billion dollars) at end July.

SEOUL (SEPT. 7) - South Korean newspapers gave a positive assessment Friday to the first talks between the North and South Korean prime ministers, saying they laid the foundation for rapprochement.

Dong-A Ilbo, an influential evening daily, said in an editorial that the result of the talks here was encouraging because the two sides had agreed on further discussions in Pyongyang next month.

"The first meeting was encouraging enough because of the fact that the meeting in Pyongyang was agreed upon, although it ended with the two sides agreeing that they don't agree," it said.

North Korean Prime Minister Yon Hyong-Muk returned home Friday by crossing the Demilitarized Zone with his delegation of 90, ending a four-day visit to Seoul.

Dong-A said the talks brought home the clash of ideologies and systems, although the two sides were cordial and appeared amicable during the talks.

It said the government here could not yield immediately on the North's demands - the release of dissidents arrested for visiting Pyongyang, sharing a single seat at the United Nations and an end to the annual U.S.-South Korea military exercise.

"The three conditions put forth by the North concern (South Korea's) internal affairs and diplomatic rights.... They might be gained as the result of the talks, not as pre-conditions for the talks," Dong-A said.

North Korea urged the South to accept the demands to ease confrontation between the two rivals, saying they were linked to the fate of the prime ministers' talks.

Of the three issues, South Korea agreed only to temporarily shelve its plan to join the United Nations alone.

The two sides agreed to discuss the U.N. membership issue after North Korea puts forth a proposal for joining the United Nations with a single seat.

They also agreed to urge their Red Cross societies to resume talks on reuniting families separated by the division of the Korean Peninsula into the communist North and capitalist South in 1945.

Another evening newspaper, Kukmin Ilbo, called the meetings an epochal event in solving the Korean issue.

WELLINGTON (SEPT. 7) - New Zealand was once proud of its British heritage but as Parliament closed and politicians headed for elections on October 27, its Westminister form of democracy was under attack.

Parliament closed its three-year session late Thursday, having sat for more than 2,000 hours and passed a record 587 bills since 1987.

But New Zealand's single-house, first-past-the-post political system pleases few.

Former foreign minister Russell Marshall, leaving politics next month, said he found going into the debating chamber "one of the least pleasant and most onerous duties" he had.

"I came in here certainly willing to join in confrontation with the devil incarnate on the other side and found that some of them weren't such bad people after all; some of the devils were on our side of the house," he said.

New Zealand's political forms are almost identical to Britain's, minus an upper house. But it enjoys little public respect.

Politicians have a habit of alienating themselves here. Earlier in the current term, politicians from both sides of the house moved in a late night seven-minute session to award themselves an extraordinarily generous superannuation scheme.

Last month, again late at night and again with both parties acting together, Parliament passed a law prohibiting certain political parties from advertising or from being given free air time during elections.

The rules they wrote were such that the main victims were two political parties well placed to render the greatest change to New Zealand's two-party system.

Public dissatisfaction is very evident. Various opinion polls show majority support for dumping first-past-the-post elections and replacing them with preferental voting or proportional representation.

Another indicator of lack of faith in the system is that nationwide 38 per-cent of former voters have declined to date to re-register on electoral rolls - despite it being an offense not to.

Beijing (SEPT. 7) - Chinese Premier Li Peng called on Iraq Friday to withdraw from Kuwait ''unconditionally'' as soon as possible and enter into negotiations to resolve the Gulf crisis.

At a meeting with Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan, Li urged Baghdad to respond to mediation efforts by Arab countries and U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Li said China holds that any negotiations should be conducted within the framework of United Nations resolutions, which China supports, a Chinese spokesman told newsmen after the meeting.

The official did not say whether Ramadan had sought aid from China or whether Beijing had made any pledges to supply medical goods, food or other humanitarian relief to Iraq.

Li repeated the Chinese government's view that that every country's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity should be fully respected and that countries should solve their disputes through peaceful, political ways instead of force.

China, which used to be a major arms supplier to Iraq, has supported United Naations resolutions designed to force Iraq to pull its troops our of Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) - A vast majority of Americans have no qualms about trusting Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev as a mediateor in the Gulf crisis, despite White House reluctance, a nationwide poll indicated Friday.

Sixty-six per cent of people surveyed by the Wall Street Journal and NBC News said they would trust Mr. Gorbachev to represent U.S. interests in peace talks with Baghdad.

Only 27 per cent said they could not trust the Soviet leader.

President George Bush, who will meet Mr. Gorbachev this Sunday in Helsinki, has said he sees no mediating role for Moscow in the Gulf crisis and believes his counterpart has no interest in playing such a role.

The president's view was shared in the survey by more women than men (40 per cent against 28 per cent), and by far more blacks than whites (66 per cent against 30 per cent).

In other issues, the poll showed that 84 per cent of Americans would back a military response to an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia, and 74 per cent would agree to waging war on Baghdad if U.S. nationals held by Iraq come to harm.

PRAGUE (SEPT. 7) - Czechoslovakia will deliver several hundred thousand gas masks to countries directly threatened should chemical warfare break

The agency did not mention the names of countries targeted for delivery, but said the shipments will be made "in the coming weeks" in line with contracts signed "in recent days."

The contracts are for delivery of gas masks, rechargeable filters and special outfits for protection of children in the event of a chemical attack.

There has been fear that Iraq could use chemical weapons should fighting break out in the crisis following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on August 2.

ABU DHABI (SEPT. 7) - U.S. Secretary of State James Baker met President Zayed bin Sultan al-Nahayan here Friday to seek funds from the United Arab Emirates (UAE) for operation Desert Shield and the economic blockade of Iraq.

Mr. Bush flew into the UAE capital from Saudi Arabia, where he received pledges from both the Saudi and exiled Kuwaiti governments to help defray the cost of the U.S. military deployment in the Gulf.

He has said the cost of the operation, codenamed Desert Shield, could reach six billion dollars by the end of the year.

The secretary of state has also been charged with raising funds to help compensate countries such as Egypt, Jordan and Turkey, adversely affected by the economic embargo against Iraq.

On his way to the UAE, Mr. Baker visited an air base in western Saudi Arabia, where the United States has deployed F-111 and EF-111 bombers.

The planes were kept in ultra-modern hangars, where the gates can close in 12 seconds in an emergency. An army doctor said a unit of soldiers could survive 30 days in the hangars, even if a chemical attack took place.

Mr. Baker was expected to travel on to Egypt later Friday and meet the next day with President Hosni Mubarak, before flying to Helsinki for the U.S.-Soviet summit on Sunday.

LAGOS (SEPT. 7) - Ajaokuta steel company, Africa's biggest steel project, on which Nigeria has spent about 15 billion naira (2 billion dollars), has been re-designated and its director has been retired.

The announcement was made here Friday by the minister of mines, power and steel, retired Air Vice Marshal Nura Imam.

With effect from next month, the company has been re-designated a ''project'', to be directly supervised by the ministry, he told a news conference.

The company's former director and chief executive, Tachia Jooji, has been sacked and replaced by Phillip Atanmu, former technical director of Delta Steel company, located in southern Nigeria, he said. Mr. Atanmu will be assisted by Bayo Kolade, former manager of Oshogbo steel rolling mill, he stated.

Also fired was the Managing director of the nation's electricity company (NEPA), David Adeyemi Oyeyele. He will be replaced by Hamzat Ibrahim, formerly head of the sales division of the same company, the minister added.

NEPA has been decentralised and re-organised into three autonomous divisions to enhance efficiency, the minister said.

Other new appointees announced by the minister are Abiodun Abe, director of the Delta steel Company, Olu Ojo, manager of Oshogbo steel rolling mill, Isa Ahmed Bukar, manager of the Katsina steel rolling mill, M. ROME (SEPT 7) - European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers called Friday for the "complete implementation" of the U.N. embargo on Iraq, but pledged commitment to "historic ties of friendship" with the "whole of the Arab world", in statements here.

After a meeting, the Twelve also reaffirmed their "utter condemnation of the measures taken by the Iraqi authorities against foreign citizens in Iraq and (occupied) Kuwait" and said the EEC "will continue to react" to these "unacceptable" moves "with complete solidarity".

They "deplored" Iraq's failure to comply with United Nations Security Council Resolution 664, which calls on Baghdad to permit and facilitate the departure from Iraq and Kuwait of nationals of third countries, "despite the efforts" made by U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar when he met Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz in Amman.

The EEC ministers expressed the "urgent wish" that the U.N. "pursue its efforts and extend them to ... the diplomatic and consular representations in Kuwait by sending a mission in order to establish contact with them." Iraq no longer recognizes foreign embassies in Kuwait and has declared the emirate an Iraqi province.

The Twelve said they were "fully implementing" the military, trade and financial embargo the U.N. Security Council imposed on Iraq after its August 2 invasion of Kuwait and called "on all members of the international community to do likewise".

Some countries, notably India, have said they want to send humanitarian aid to tens of thousands of their affected nationals in the Gulf.

The EEC noted that Egypt, Jordan and Turkey were among countries "most immediately affected ... by the embargo" and said that member states have "taken a decision on the principle of extending ... short-term financial assistance to these three countries."

MUNICH (SEPT. 7) - The prosecutor's office Friday launched an investigation of the aerospace and arms concern Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm GmbH (Mbb), which is suspected of having illegally supplied arms to Iraq.

Mbb spokesman Willi Vogler confirmed the probe, saying, ''We have nothing to hide.''

Mbb admitted having delivered about 60 helicopters to Iraq since 1978, which have been serviced by five Mbb technicians who, according to Vogler, applied to leave the country immediately after Iraq invaded Kuwait on August 2.

The concern said it had ''no knowledge'' that about 50 of the aircraft - meant for ''connecting, rescue and Vip flights'' - had been converted into combat helicopters.

A goettingen-based organisation called the the Threatened Peoples Society has claimed that the helicopters were converted by the Spanish company Casa and the Austrian concern Denzel.

Members of the group had gained access to Mbb grounds in Hoehenkirchen near Munich on Thursday and opened a crate that the group's leader said contained spare helicopter parts addressed to the Iraqi air force.

Mbb has filed charges of trespassing and property damage against the group.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) - Tight availability concerns saw aluminium prices sharply higher for the third day running here Friday.

Three-months metal was quoted at 1,972 dollars per tonne in afternoon deals, against 1,950 at the close on Thursday, while cash metal went through the 2,000 dollars per ton mark to quote at 2,009 in afternoon deals against 1,970 on Thursday.

Traders said the strength the past two days was more than justified by the 9,925-ton drop in LME stocks, taking stocks at the exchange down to 126,450 tonnes, the lowest since March 1990.

Analysts pointed out that fourth-quarter consumer demand is traditionally high, and that the market is gambling on hopes that demand will not be hit by recession this year.

SIDON, LEBANON (SEPT. 7) - At least 26 people were killed and 70 wounded as rival Palestinian factions clashed Friday in the crowded Ain Helwe refugee camp near this port city in south Lebanon, hospital officials said.

Members of PLO leader Yasser Arafat's group Fatah drove out rival fighters of the Fatah Revolutionary Council (FRC) in a three-hour battle, Palestinian sources said.

The FRC of Palestinian extremist Abu Nidal regrouped on hillsides outside the camp and shelled Ain Helwe as well as several districts of Sidon.

Civilians in Ain Helwe, which is home to 150,000 Palestinian refugees, fled for cover as fighters clashed earlier inside the camp with heavy mortars, anti-aircraft guns and rockets.

Black smoke hung over the camp, where 500 pro-Arafat fighters were deployed on August 30 after the assassination of two Fatah members. Around 20 FRC members were rounded up after the killings.

Fatah, a mainstream group within the Palestine Liberation Organisation, and the anti-Arafat FRC have been at odds since 1974.

NICOSIA (SEPT. 7) - Saudi and Kuwaiti officials pledged Friday to help pay for the cost of U.S. forces in the Gulf, as Secretary of State James Baker sought to muster support for any possible military showdown with Iraq.

Mr. Baker and his hosts in Saudi Arabia ruled out any compromise with Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein for his invasion and annexation of Kuwait at the beginning of last month.

"We will not spare any amount or any value," the ousted Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, declared. "We hope our return will take place soon," he said after meeting Mr. Baker in the Saudi resort of Taif.

Mr. Baker is also seeking a financial contribution from the United Arab Emirates, to which he later flew.

He has said the cost of the U.S. operation, codenamed Desert Shield, could reach six billion dollars by the end of the year.

In London, the British government secured cross-party approval for its decision to send soldiers to the Gulf. It said more forces were needed there and stressed that no future mission for them could be ruled out.

Defence Secretary Tom King said ending the crisis through non-military means remained London's first priority, but he sensed "complete agreement" in parliament that Iraq's takeover of Kuwait must not go unchecked.

Meeting in Rome, foreign ministers of the European Economic Community states agreed Friday to ask the United Nations to tighten its embargo against Iraq to include air traffic, diplomats said.

The 12 also decided to provide "considerable" emergency and medium-term aid for Jordan, Egypt and Turkey whose economies have been sorely hit by the Gulf crisis, an Italian spokesman said.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said the aid would be about two billion dollars.

The aid was part of a total of some nine billion to be offered the three countries by the end of next year. The EEC assumed Arab countries would provide the balance, or about 65 per cent.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said the community would call on the U.N. Security Council to consider "further measures" to tighten the embargo including "control of air traffic".

Iraq has reportedly been breaching the blockade of seaborne traffic with airflits from friendly Arab countries such as Libya.

The EEC foreign ministers also agreed Friday on the principle of a joint declaration with the Soviet Union on the Gulf crisis, Mr. Dumas said.

Meanwhile also drumming up financial and political support for Washington's military effort in the Gulf was U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, who arrived in Tokyo Friday via South Korea, after visits to London and Paris.

Also in Tokyo, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze again suggested the holding of an international conference to deal with the Middle East and the Gulf crisis.

Earlier, President George Bush said he welcomed a chance to address Iraqis directly and explain why the United States has sent thousands of troops to Saudi Arabia and imposed a naval blockade against Iraq.

"We Americans should make something very clear -- our argument is not with the people of Iraq," Mr. Bush told a rally of his Republican party in Tallahassee, Florida on Thursday.

"Rather it is with Iraq's dictator who uses innocent travellers as shields, who now, in direct contravention of international law, holds hostage civilians from many countries," he said.

Many thousands of foreigners who were working in Iraq and Kuwait have been caught up in the Gulf crisis. Hundreds, especially from Western countries, have been coming out in batches thanks to special evacuation operations.

But tens of thousands more, many of them Asians, remain trapped, notably in hastily erected refugee camps in Jordan where food and drink is in short supply and the weather very hot and dry.

An Indian foreign ministry spokesman said the international community had acted quickly in imposing sanctions against Iraq, but had caused serious shortages of food and medical supplies.

MONTGOMERY, ALABAMA (SEPT 7) - The United States has been ordered to pay more than 770,000 dollars in damages to a man whose arm was bitten off by an alligator as he swam in a public pond in Alabama's Conecuh National Forest.

A federal judge, in a ruling made public Thursday, awarded more than 650,000 dollars to Kermit George for his pain and suffering, along with compensation for medical costs and other damages, that resulted from the attack by a 225-kilogram (500-pound), 3.5-meter (11.5-foot) alligator.

In an April ruling, the judge found the U.S. Forest Service had received complaints about alligators in the Conecuh forest but had failed to post warning signs.

ROME (SEPT. 7) - The European Economic Community (EEC) on Friday decided "to consider a normalisation of relations with Syria," in response to Syrian support of the international action against Iraq, French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said here.

"In a second phase," there would be normalisation with Iran, he said after a meeting of EEC foreign ministers.

British junior foreign minister William Waldegrave, meanwhile, said Britain on Friday lifted its veto of a plan to provide EEC investment aid for Syria.

This should open the way to Syria getting around 150 million European currency Units (ECUs) (180 million dollars) in aid under the investment protocol, which has been blocked since 1986, he said.

Britain imposed its veto and broke off diplomatic ties with Damascus after a Palestinian group, which it accused of being sponsored by Syria, tried to bomb an Israeli airliner at London's Heathrow Airport.

Mr. Waldegrave, explaining the decision, said: "We think that the time has now come to respond to clear indications from Syria, to begin to signal to her that we recognise the stand she has taken over this issue, this principled stand, which puts her alongside the majority in the international community."

Syria, Iraq's neighbour to the northwest and a fellow member of the Arab League, has supported the United Nations embargo and sent a contingent of troops to Saudi Arabia alongside other international forces.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) - North Sea Brent crude oil for October delivery dropped here Friday on the physical market, trading at 30.45 dollars a barrel in the late afternoon against the Thursday closing level of 30.90 dollars.

Brent had opened the session with a marked increase, approaching the 32-dollar mark at 31.85 dollars a barrel. On the spot market, Brent even reached 33 dollars before coming back down.

Kleinwort Benson oil analyst Medhi Varzi commented that Brent "went so high so fast" that it should calm down now.

The market was very firm in Asia overnight, and "oil went up on rumors of a coup against Saddam Hussein (president of Iraq) that were never confirmed " he said.

Other unconfirmed rumors had 15,000 Soviet soldiers being sent to Saudi Arabia, which sent October Brent down to as low as 29.50 dollars in the afternoon, but it then went back up.

Mr. Varzi said the oil market risks remaining very volatile next week, reacting nervously to "any news or non-news" from the Gulf.

ANKARA (SEPT. 7) - More than 7,000 shopkeepers went on strike Thursday in Nusaybin, along Turkey's southern border with Iraq, demanding that the authorities release the bodies of three Kurdish separatists killed in a clash three days earlier, officials said Friday.

However, a local deputy police chief said businesses in the city of more than 70,000 near the Iraqi border had closed because of the Gulf crisis, not because of the bodies.

Police arrested 80 people after the day of protest, most of them shop owners who had refused to open up that day.

Local reporters said several shops were forced open and had their locks and iron shutters broken while police prevented photographers from taking pictures of the closed stores and confiscated their film.

Police tightened security there as well as in Cizre, Silopi and Sirnak, also near the Iraqi border, where armed Kurdish militants are said to be active.

The region, which lies along the ancient silk route now used to transport oil, has suffered badly from the five-week-old Gulf crisis sparked by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Many of the stores that shut Thursday are attached to service stations hit by the halt in traffic from Iraq and many of the already poor people who live in the mainly Kurdish region have been laid off temporarily because of the crisis.

Some of the local population have also accused police of "human rights violations", according to a local official.

However, journalists in Nusaybin said militants of the Kurdish Marxist party PKK, which has waged an armed struggle for Kurdish independence since 1984, had "encouraged" local businesses to close and to demand the bodies of the slain militants.

Similar strikes were held after six people were killed in March during large demonstrations here and in Cizre, held during the funerals of slain separatists.

Authorities afterwards banned the strikes.

LONDON (SEPT 7) - Michael Forsyth, one of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's most ardent supporters, quit Friday as chairman of the Conservative Party in Scotland but in a surprise move was instantly promoted to a post as government minister in the environment department.

Mr. Forsyth's resignation came amid continuing political differences with Scottish Secretary Malcolm Rifkind which had caused turmoil in the Scottish branch of the Conservative Party, press reports said.

His term as leader of the party branch was marked by sweeping changes of personnel at the party's Edinburgh headquarters and uncompromising advocacy of Thatcherite ideals and led to some criticism that Mr. Forsyth was trying to undermine Mr. Rifkind.

But his promotion was accompanied by a letter of praise from Mrs. Thatcher who expressed her gratitude for his "unstinting commitment and hard work" and said his promotion was "richly deserved."

"Moreover I shall make a point of continuing to seek your advice and thoughts on future policy," Mrs. Thatcher said.

In his new post, Mr. Forsyth will cover education, social work, health and sport and will be the House of Commons spokesman on agriculture, fisheries and forestry.

Mr. Forsyth was replaced as Scots Tory chairman by Lord Sanderson of Bowden, who stepped down as minister of state at the Scottish Office.

Lord Bowden was replaced by Lord Strathclyde, from the environment department.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT. 7) - South Africa's United Democratic Front (UDF) on Friday called on its members to form "self-defence units" following Thursday's slayings of five black commuters at a railway station in central Johannesburg.

"We believe in the right to self-defence ... against violence from whatever quarter," said Ronnie Manoepa, a spokesman for the UDF, which is affiliated with the African National Congress.

Johannesburg police spokesman Colonel Frans Malherbe, however, said police could not allow self-defence units to "cut into our area".

Police were late Friday still searching for the two black men who gunned down the commuters and said they believed the killings were related to a dispute between rival minibus taxi operators.

Black townships around here were reported quiet on Friday, including Soweto where police said six people were killed on Thursday. Four of those killed died when unknown assailants in a minibus drove through the streets and randomly fired at people.

Late Thursday, police dispersed a group of 500 black youths in Sharpeville black township south of here after the youths tried to petrol bomb a police station.

In another development Friday, a team of international jurists stated that South African policemen were finding it difficult to adjust to the February 2 unbanning of the ANC, their former "enemy", and should be re-trained.

The three-member delegation from the International Commission of Jurists (ICJ), has been on a two-week fact finding mission to investigate a virtual black civil war in Natal province in which some 4,000 people had been killed since 1987.

The IJC delegation suggested that a foreign monitoring force be employed to keep the peace in Natal and one of its members, John Macdonald, said on Friday government ministers spoken to by the delegation "seemed to be very receptive" to the idea.

Observers believe internecine violence around Johannesburg has been a spillover from Natal where ANC supporters were also pitted against supporters of Zulu Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha movement.

PARIS (SEPT. 7) - Financial circles remained gloomy on Friday about the Gulf situation, two days before a Soviet-U.S. summit meeting in Helsinki, and they were not convinced by the gains scored on some stock markets.

Wall Street staged a mild recovery in the first part of the Friday session, the Dow Jones being up by 22.77 points in mid-session and breaking through the 2,600 level, after opening with a dip of 3.97 points. But operators said the rally was primarily technical, following the Thursday decline of 31.92 points.

Still, the New York rally was enough to bring a slight gain in stock prices in Paris, which keeps close tabs on Wall Street because of the importance of U.S. holdings and sales to many French companies. The Paris Bourse closed on Friday with a modest gain of 0.60 per cent on the day, after a dull session.

The Frankfurt exchange managed a 0.37 percent rise on Friday, but Milan (down 0.11 percent) and Zurich (off 0.68 percent) were in the losing column.

London was basically on a mild downtrend for the bulk of the session, but staged a rally toward the close to let the Footsie 100-share index finish at 2,122.9, up two points for the day.

Investors and would-be investors on the various markets express perplexity about what will happen and should happen in the Gulf conflict with Iraq. Hostilities would whack all of the stock markets very hard indeed, they say, so they view such a development with apprehension.

On the other hand, the current standoff is worse than anything else, the majority of investors say - noting the old market adage that the market can live with good news or bad news, but not with uncertainty.

Oil prices are another major investor worry. On Friday, West Texas Intermediate was off 93 cents a barrel in New York early in the session, to 30.50 dollars a barrel, while in London, North Sea Brent for October delivery also dropped, trading at 30.45 dollars a barrel in late afternoon against the Thursday closing level of 30.90 dollars.

GENEVA (SEPT 7) - The International Committee of the Red Cross (Icrc) has failed to persuade Baghdad to let it mount a comprehensive aid operation in Iraq and Kuwait for all civilians hit by the Gulf crisis, Icrc president Cornelio Sommaruga said here Friday.

Sommaruga was speaking at a press conference after a one-week tour of Amman, Baghdad and Teheran.

The Icrc had been on the verge of finalising an agreement with Baghdad on possible humanitarian measures, Sommaruga said. He did not say why Iraq had then rejected the proposals.

Sommaruga made clear that the Icrc wanted particularly to help the thousands of foreigners stranded in Iraq and Kuwait. The Icrc had, however also expressed its readiness to play a mediation role, in contact with the United Nations, on the question of securing medical and certain basic food supplies for Iraq.

The Icrc president had three round of talks with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz. The differences between both sides had apparently centred on whether the Geneva conventions for conflicts and hostilities were applicable in the present situation. Baghdad had insisted that they were not, Sommeruga said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) - Any lingering doubts that Steffi Graf was not playing her best tennis were quickly dispelled Friday when she disposed of Arantxa Sanchez in straight sets and advanced to the final of the US Open for the fourth straight time.

Graf, seeking her third consecutive Open title, walked onto the stadium court armed with her deadly forehand and blistering first serve and needed just 55 minutes to complete an easy 6-1, 6-2 victory.

"I can't play much better," said the 21-year-old West German. "I'd be happy if it (my game) gets better in the final, but I can't play much better than I did today. I put good pace on the balls and went for my shots when I had a chance."

Graf made very few unforced errors and put constant pressure on Sanchez at the net, winning 20 of her 23 approaches.

Graf faced only one break point on her own serve -- when she double-faulted at 30-30 in the fifth game of the first set -- but, like a true champion, was able to come up with a couple of big serves when she needed them most and held on the fourth game point.

"I knew I had to stay in the match," she said, adding: "I couldn't have any lapses or she'd dig right in and fight. I had to play every point and I think I did."

Sanchez, whose only victory against Graf came on the clay courts at Roland Garros in last year's French Open final, felt shell-shocked after the match.

"I thought I played well, but I just couldn't do anything," she confessed. "She played unbelievably. She served well and it's hard to beat her when she serves so well. You can't do anything."

Graf is now one match away from winning her 10th Grand Slam singles title and will play either Gabriela Sabatini or Mary Joe Fernandez in Saturday's final.

JOHANNESBURG (SEPT 7) - South Africa's white liberal Democratic Party (DP), its political platform undermined by government reforms, on Friday voted to remain independent despite calls to form an alliance with the African National Congress (ANC).

The call for the DP to form an alliance with the black nationalist ANC drew sharp responses from more conservative DP delegates to the two-day congress which began here on Friday.

Delegates on Friday also elected Zach de Beer, a 62-year-old former executive of the huge Anglo-American Corporation mining conglomerate, the new single leader of the DP.

Mr. De Beer, who previously shared the leadership with Wynand Malan and Denis Worrall, took 274 votes against 195 for Cape parliamentarian Tian van der Merwe, who favoured closer ties to the ANC.

President Frederik de Klerk's reforms since February 2 -- including the unbanning of the ANC and the release of its deputy president, Nelson Mandela -- have plunged the DP into its worst political crisis since it was launched in April 1989.

Mr. Malan resigned from the triumvirate on July 11 and Mr. Worrall, a former South African ambassador in London, decided not to stand against Mr. De Beer.

Dave Dalling, the DP member of parliament from the wealthy Johannesburg suburb of Sandton, told delegates the party should form an alliance with the ANC as they shared the same aims, including a multi-party democracy in South Africa.

Another DP parliamentarian, Harry Schwartz, insisted the party should remain independent and "make sure we have a place at the negotiating table".

"I want us to be major actors," Mr. Schwartz said.

PARIS (SEPT 7) - The international community has failed so far to pay sufficient attention to the refugee problem created by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Bangladeshi Foreign Secretary Abul Ahsan said here Friday.

"The human dimension of the Gulf crisis has not received due attention," the number two official in the Dhaka foreign ministry told Agence France-Presse in an interview.

He said the international community had been slow in moving and its response had so far failed to reach "the degree warranted by the situation."

Mr. Ahsan said the "human problem" was "one of the biggest, most unique problems of its kind since the Second World War," and repatriating hundreds of thousands of refugees was "a staggering task."

Bangladesh had told the United Nations ten days ago that there was "a need for coordination and a disciplined approach," since nationals of many countries were involved.

He said Bangladesh, India and Pakistan were now moving jointly in New York to ask United Nations secretary general Javier Perez de Cuellar to appoint a U.N. coordinator.

"I am convinced it is absolutely necessary to have one single authority" coordinating the repatriation operations, he said.

Out of the roughly 500,000 South Asian nationals who were in Kuwait and Iraq when the crisis erupted early last month, about 80,000 Bangladeshis were in Kuwait, and another 12,000 to 15,000 were in Iraq, Mr. Ahsan said.

He said the latest estimates he had received from Dhaka indicated that some 50,000, or about 60 per cent of the total, had so far fled, "mostly from Kuwait."

Others were seeking to escape through Iran, and some were being airlifted from camps in Saudi Arabia, he said. "Every day they come, every day more people flee," he said.

According to his latest information, 15,000 Bangladeshis were on the Iraqi-Turkish border trying to cross into Turkey, while another 10,000 were on the Iraqi-Jordanian border and 10,000 more in camps in Amman.

SINGAPORE (SEPT 7) - Oil prices on the Singapore International Monetary Exchange (SIMEX) ended lower in subdued trading Friday.

Dealers said that prices, which shot up Thursday on fears of esclation in the Gulf, subsided right from the start of trading Friday.

They said reports that an American solider was shot in Kuwait Thursday had created fears that the Gulf situation would explode and caused prices to move up. Saddam Hussein's call for a "holy war" sparked fears initially in the market.

Friday the price of High Sulphur Fuel Oil (HSFO) for October finished at 134.50 U.S. dollars a metric tonne, down from Thursday high of 139.00 dollars.

Friday's price for HSFO October was still higher than the previous peak price of 133.50 dollars a tonne recorded on August 23.

The HSFO for November closed at 133.00 dollars, down from Thursday's 136.50 U.S. dollars.

The price of Dubai crude for October finished at 25.50 U.S. dollars a barrel, down from Thursday's 27.75 U.S. dollars.

The highest price for the Dubai crude was also registered on August 23 when it was traded at 30.50 U.S. dollars a barrel.

SIMEX, which trades in currency and golf futures, began trading in oil futures early this year.

LONDON (SEPT 7) - Both rates and the prospects for tanker employment improved this week, as Saudi Arabia boosted exports of crude oil to over seven million barrels per day.

Shipbroker E.A. Gibson reported a healthy total of 22 ULCC and VLCC carriers fixed in the Gulf, and said that with crude oil prices rising faster than bunker fuel prices, tanker owners' earnings have shown some improvement.

The most marked improvement in rates was witnessed for Gulf movements to Eastern and Red Sea destinations, the broker said in its weekly report, although rates for Western delivery remain disappointingly low.

In the West African loading zone rates for 120,000 tonners heading for the U.S. Gulf and Europe were earning better rates, but Mediterranean loaders fared less well.

Meanwhile, a lack of enquiry in the Caribbean market forced rates for dirty and clean vessels down, although clean carriers benefitted from a late flurry of enquiry.

Rates showed a decline in the North Sea for a number of dirty fixings, and clean cargoes were scarce.

ROME (SEPT 7) - European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers, in a move aimed at tightening the economic noose around Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, agreed here Friday to urge the United Nations to prevent aircraft from breaching the trade embargo with Iraq, diplomats said.

They also agreed in principle to organise a nine-billion-dollar plan to help Jordan, Turkey and Egypt, the "frontline" states whose economies teeter on the brink of crisis because of the embargo.

And in steps seeking to further isolate Iraq on the diplomatic front, the ministers revealed they were willing to sign a joint statement this month with the Soviet Union on the Gulf crisis, as well as beef up contacts with the Arab League and the Non-Aligned Movement.

West German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said the Community would call on the U.N. Security Council to examine ways of stiffening its August 6 embargo, including the "control of air traffic."

Iraq, according to press reports, has succeeded in piercing the embargo by organising an airlift of material via its few remaining friends, such as Libya.

The airlift is reported as having more of a morale than economic impact, as it cannot cope effectively with big bulk items such as grain or meat.

Diplomats said some countries expressed caution, fearing that the accidental downing of an Iraqi airliner could provoke a wider and bloodier conflict in the Gulf.

British junior foreign minister William Waldegrave said "it is very difficult to enforce an embargo," as aircraft could not be boarded and turned back, like ships.

"If it is a serious loophole in the sanctions, it has to be looked at carefully," he said. Among the options would be the denial of the use of air space to aircraft suspected to sanctions-busters.

The ministers also gave their backing in principle to emergency help and medium-term aid for Egypt, Turkey and Jordan, which face a dramatic loss in revenue from trade with Iraq and remittances from workers in Kuwait.

French Foreign Minister Roland Dumas said the Community estimated the shortfall to be around nine billion dollars for the last quarter of 1990 and all of 1991.

BUCHAREST (SEPT 7) - Romanian Prime Minister Petre Roman on Friday travelled to the central city of Brasov in a bid to prevent a general strike in Romania, but failed to convince the union leadership to call it off.

The leadership of the Infratirea union, which claims 160,000 members, voted 21-6 to maintain its pledge to call a strike by September 13 if the government does not give written guarantees on food and raw material supplies, a union official said in a telephone interview from Brasov.

He said Mr. Roman's responses were "evasive." He said Mr. Roman proposed that the union draft a text on the meeting and hold futher discussions in Bucarest.

Last week, Infratirea organized a three-day strike of 10,000 workers at the Tractorul factory in Brasov.

The union, which is represented in some 40 factories around the countries, says the shortages in raw materials have caused production and workers' salaries to be cut by 50 percent in recent months.

ANKARA (SEPT 7) - Turkish officials were holding some 80 people Friday after a day-long strike Thursday in the Kurdish majority town of Nusaybin, close to the border with Syria, informed sources reached by telephone said.

Most were storekeepers and heads of small firms arrested after the strike in protest against an official refusal to hand over the bodies of three Kurdish separatists killed in a clash on Monday.

More than 7,000 businesses closed down Thursday in defiance of decrees in April and May banning strikes as part of an official "anti-terrorist" programme in the southeastern Anatolia region.

Sources reached by telephone told Agence France-Presse that militants of the Kurdistan Workers' Party (PKK), a Marxist separatist movement waging armed struggle since 1984, had "encouraged" shopkeepers not to open their businesses.

Local reporters earlier said that several shops were forced open Thursday and had their locks and shutters broken, while police prevented photographers from taking pictures of the closed stores and confiscated their film.

WASHINGTON (SEPT 7) - The United States Friday said it strongly deplored the reported arrests of six leaders of Burma's leading political party by the military regime in Rangoon.

(In Rangoon, military intelligence chief Major General Khin Nyunt said earlier Friday that two prominent members of the National League for Democracy (NLD) had been arrested on security charges.

(He told reporters at Rangoon's Defence Ministry that U Kyi Maung, 71 and U Chit Khaing, 72, had been arrested by the military junta late Thursday for divulging "classified documents of national interest to unauthorized outsiders." He gave no details of what was in the documents.)

However State Department spokesman Mark Dillen cited reports that six NLD leaders had been arrested, including U Kyi Maung, the party's acting leader.

"We strongly deplore" these arrests "on political charges," he said.

"We regard the arrest of U Kyi Maung and others as a clear attempt by the military to stifle legitimate political activity and thwart implementation of the May election results," he added. The NLD won more than 80 per cent of the seats in the May polls.

"We again urge the regime to release political prisoners and finally implement the clear call for parliamentary democracy of the national elections last May," Mr. Dillen said.

BRASILIA (SEPT 7) - Justice Minister Bernardo Cabral Friday ordered three state governments to investigate the alleged torture-murders of some 1,000 children in which Amnesty International claimed to have found police involvement.

The murders allegedly took place over the past five years and mainly involved homeless children picked up by police, or by so-called death squads, said an Amnesty report released Thursday.

The three states where most of the murders were said to have taken place, according to the Amnesty report, are Rio de Janeiro, Pernambuco and Sao Paulo.

In spite of an ambitious child-welfare program recently announced by President Fernando Collor de Mello, private charity organizations do not believe the plight of thousands of homeless children will change any time soon.

BOGOTA (SEPT. 7) - The father of three Medellin drug lords Friday rejected the government's pledge to not extradite drug suspects to the United States if they surrender to authorities and confess all their crimes.

Fabio Ochoa, speaking for his sons Jorge Luis, Juan David and Fabio, high-level members of the Medellin cocaine cartel led by Pablo Escobar, told Radio Caracol he considered Wednesday's offer a "step" toward resolving the country's drug problems, but said it did not include enough guarantees to satisfy the drug traffickers.

Gaviria said Wednesday that drug traffickers and members of paramilitary groups who surrendered, confessed, and cooperated with authorities would be tried by Colombian courts and given reduced sentences, instead of being extradited to the United States. Those suspects also would have to relinquish any property or profits gained from their criminal activities, he said.

Ochoa praised the effort by the month-old government of Gaviria, but noted, "My sons are not going to turn themselves in because they do not want to implicate their friends." The United States is seeking Ochoa's son Fabio for extradition on drug charges.

Justice Minister Jaime Giraldo Thursday said Escobar would not be extradited to the United States if he accepted the conditions of the presidential decree.

TAMPERE, Finland (SEPT 8) - The Socialist International on Friday condemned "despotic regimes" and the use of force in many parts of the world such as the Iraqi attempt at annexation of Kuwait.

In a statement, published at the end of a three-day conference here, the movement also called for more solid foundations of a system of international security and said there is an "urgent need for restraint in the international transfer of arms".

The conference also announced that it would send a delegation on Saturday to the Baltic countries.

The conference welcomed the recent developments in Europe and said that the peoples of Europe have torn down the walls separating them in hostile camps.

"Security can now be built on new foundations. Measures implementing the ideas of common security and shared responsibility must now be forged into a new system of security", the conference said.

The International, however, pointed out that while the end of the cold war in Europe will promote global peace, it does not necessarily produce immediate results everywhere.

"In many areas of the world, tensions, crises, territorial problems and even armed conflicts are still part of everyday realities. Efforts for the solution of these problems and even armed conflicts are urgently needed for building confidence and peace", the conference said.

The International said it "deplores the continuing use of force in many parts of the world such as in the recent attempt at annexation of one member state of the United Nations by another".

ABIDJAN (SEPT 8) - The Niger goverment will soon examine a Saudi request for a military unit to be sent to defend Saudi territory, according to a Niger Foreign Ministry communique received here Friday.

Earlier Friday the Niger state news agency ANP said Niger had decided to send a symbolic military contingent to Saudi Arabia following talks

Thursday in the Niger capital of Niamey between President Ali Saibou and a Saudi envoy.

But reliable sources later said the announcement resulted from a misunderstanding.

Niger is 85 per cent Moslem and a member of the Organization of the Islamic Conference. So far Senegal is the only black African state to pledge troops for Saudi Arabia.

BAGHDAD, (SEPT 8) - Recent restrictive measures against Iraqi nationals in France are "unjustified" and part of U.S.-led "aggressive designs" against Iraq, an Iraqi Foreign Ministry spokesman said Friday.

The spokesman, cited by the Iraqi News Agency, said his country was not threatening French national security and was treating French citizens in Iraq "normally, except for some who have been invited (to remain) in the country to prevent an outbreak of war."

The measures against Iraqis in France "serve the aggressive designs linked to hostile American policy against Iraq and its people," the spokesman said.

The French Interior Ministry on August 28 and 29 placed 26 Iraqi nationals under special surveillance, saying they were either military trainees or had knowledge of national defense secrets.

The Iraqi spokesman also charged that 14 Iraqi students at an unspecified French institute had been prevented from leaving France and that French authorities were increasing their "harassment of Iraqis."

WARSAW (SEPT. 7) EFE - Some 820,000 Polish workers are now out of work as 50,000 more people lost their jobs in August as a result of the government's move to install a free market economy, Labor Ministry sources said Friday.

They said that since the beginning of the year 4.5 per cent of the labor force had been made redundant because of the market reforms.

Polish authorities said they feared the industrial shake-up would cause more lay-offs and lead to an increase in labor conflicts.

During the post-World War II period unemployment was unknown in Poland, but analysts said more than 1.2 million people would be jobless by the end of this year.

MOSCOW (SEPT. 7) EFE - Moscow's mayor Gavril Popov Friday called on the government of Soviet Prime Minister Nikolai Ryzhkov to step down as the Russian parliament began debating radical economic reforms for the Soviet Union's largest republic.

In a speech before the parliament, Popov also predicted that tens of thousands of Moscovites would take to the streets to support calls for Ryzhkov's resignation if such a move were approved by the Russian deputies.

Popov's remarks came amid a heated debate over rival plans to revive the country's bankrupt economy proposed by the Ryzhkov government and Russian President Boris Yeltsin.

Yeltsin, who has proposed a 500-day economic restructuring program involving a dlrs-200-billion privatization scheme, described Ryzhkov's economic plans last week as inviable and also called on the Soviet prime minister to resign.

Ryzhkov's proposals involve a slower-paced transition to a free market economy.

Popov said a group of some 300 radical Soviet deputies also planned to ask for Ryzhkov's resignation at a parliamentary session Monday.

ABRIL, IRAQ (SEPT 7) EFE - The main road into Abril, the capital of Iraq's Autonomous Region of Kurdistan, is lined with fox-holes where pro-Baghdad Kurdish troops stand guard against possible attacks by Kurdish rebel forces in a sideshow of the Gulf conflict.

Political observers say the tension suits Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who aims to stir up intra-Kurdish rivalries to protect his northern border in the event of the current conflict in the Persian Gulf spilling over on to the battlefield.

Saddam used the same dividing tactics throughout the eight-year Gulf War against Iran.

In a recent interview with EFE, Kurdistani Prime Minister Jayer Abdulkerin Bersenchin claimed two of the three million Iraqi Kurds had pledged to take up arms for Baghdad should war break out.

But opposition Patriotic Union of Kurdistan (PUK) leader Jellal Talibani reportedly traveled to the United States last month for talks on the possibility of setting up a Kurdish guerrilla front to worry Iraqi troops on the border with Turkey in the event of war.

Both the PUK and the Democratic Party of Kurdistan, led by rival rebel leader Masoud Barzani, are reckoned to have 10,000- strong guerrilla forces.

Bersenchin has hung his colors firmly to Saddam's mast by backing the Iraqi president's interpretation of the Gulf crisis as a conflict between Islam and pro-Israeli colonial powers led by the United States.

"It is inevitable that there are always people like Barzani and Talibani who put their own political careers before the interests of the country, even at the cost of horse-trading with the United States and Zionism," he said.

The Kurdistani prime minister has gone as far in his pro- Saddam stance as to refute documented evidence of Iraqi chemical weapons attacks on Kurdish villages at the end of the Gulf War with Iran.

Tehran backed Barzani's rebels against Baghdad during the 1980-88 conflict.

Bersenchin also denied claims that Saddam was trying to negotiate a settlement with Barzani and Talibani in order to protect Iraq's northern front.

"Talibani and Barzani are included in the amnesty (for opposition groups) proclaimed by Saddam Hussein in March last year in Arbil, and if they love their people they should go home. But we don't need to negotiate with them " he said.

"Volunteers and the Iraqi forces are sufficient defense," he added.

The umbrella Kurdish rebel group, the Kurdistan Front, demands an independent nation for the some 25 to 30 million Kurds scattered between Iraq, Iran and Turkey.

Turkey, which has come out against Iraq in the current Gulf crisis, has previously received Baghdad's permission to pursue Turkish-based Marxist Kurdish Workers Party rebels into Iraqi territory.

Kurds occupy 26 of the 250 seats in the Iraqi national assembly and a number of them, including Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan, are Iraqi cabinet members.

BONN (SEPT. 7) EFE - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl has asked U.S. President George Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to attend the October 3 ceremony marking the unification of the two Germanys, a West German government spokesman confirmed Friday.

Bush and Gorbachev are to reply to Kohl's invitation within the next few days, Spokesman Hans Klein said, backing press reports that the two superpower leaders may attend.

He said Kohl was also to make the same request to French President Francois Mitterrand and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, the leaders of the other two countries which occupied Germany following the Allied victory in World War II.

After months of wrangling and intricate negotiations, the East and West German governments signed a treaty last week paving the way for the two countries' unification on October 3.

BAGHDAD (SEPT 7) EFE - The Iraqi Justice Ministry announced Friday that any foreigners trapped in the country who try to escape will face life imprisonment, the Iraqi news agency INA said.

Iraqi troops in occupied Kuwait shot and wounded a U.S. citizen Wednesday when he tried to climb through his apartment window as a contingent of soldiers were heading for the building where he lived.

The U.S. State Department said Thursday that the un-named man was due to be released from hospital but would be held in custody by Iraqi authorities.

Shortly after Baghdad's August 2 invasion of Kuwait, Iraqi troops shot and killed a British citizen who tried to escape across the Kuwaiti-Saudi Arabian border.

Iraq has also threatened the death penalty for any of its own citizens - who now include Kuwaitis after last month's annexation of the emirate - found to have sheltered foreigners.

Baghdad has moved an unspecified number of foreigners to key military and industrial complexes to stave off possible air attacks by U.S.-led multinational forces deployed in the region after the invasion of Kuwait.

ROTTERDAM, THE NETHERLANDS (SEPT 7) EFE - Dutch customs officers in the port city of Rotterdam have seized two Bulgarian trucks carrying machinery to blockaded Iraq, officials said Friday.

Passengers alerted customs officials to ten wooden crates marked Baghdad when the trucks tried to board a ship in the port Thursday.

The machinery, packed into the crates, had been made by an unidentified company in the Dutch city of Amsterdam and is of the type used in the construction industry.

"There is no proof that the truck drivers were trying to load the material illegally onto the ship since all their documents were in order," a spokesman from the Dutch Finance Ministry, which controls the customs services, said.

The spokesman said the trucks set out for Iraq at the beginning of July before Iraq's August 2 invasion of Kuwait and the United Nations sanctions against Baghdad.

Meanwhile, a court in Haarlem, 10 km east of Amsterdam, Wednesday charged Dutch munitions company Eurometaal with illegally exporting arms to Iraq, officials said Friday.

PRAGUE (SEPT 7) EFE - NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner offered Friday to set up exchanges of military and political advisers with Czechoslovakia, which until last year was a frontline Communist state in the opposing Warsaw Pact alliance.

He made the proposal to Czech Defense Minister Miroslav Vacek at a meeting in Prague, which he said "symbolized that we have overcome the Cold War and are now entering a new era of collaboration."

Woerner emphasized that while it was essential for each country to maintain armed forces for defense it was important to establish military and political contacts and exchanges of information to create an atmosphere of mutual confidence.

Vacek said that Czechoslovakia was to reduce its standing Army by 60,000 by the end of 1993 and by a further 40,000 by 1995, bringing its numbers in line with those of West Germany's Army.

In 1990, 850 tanks would be decommissioned, and national service would be reduced to 12 months in 1993-94.

President of the Czechoslovak government Marian Calfa reiterated that Czechoslovakia was already committed to pushing for the downgrading the military role of the Warsaw Pact, despite the economic consequences for the country's large arms industry.

HAVANA (SEPT 7) EFE - Eight U.S.-based Cubans convicted for drug-trafficking offenses have been given prison sentences ranging from one to 15 years, officials said Friday.

News of the sentences coincided with the inauguration by Cuban President Fidel Castro of the eighth United Nations anti-drug trafficking conference in Havana.

Castro recently said his government was considering harsher penalties for convicted drug traffickers, who under current Cuban law can be handed down a maximum 15-year sentence.

He added that 422 drug traffickers had been arrested in Cuba between 1970 and June 1990.

In addition, Castro said that 30 aircraft and 73 boats had been seized in the same period, which were found to be attempting to smuggle some 125 tonnes of marihuana and 5,941 kg of cocaine into the United States by using Cuba as a staging post.

Cuban officials said that four more U.S.-based Cubans were to go on trial Friday, in Ciego de Avila, 450 km southeast of Havana, on charges of illegal entry into the country and drug trafficking.

ISTANBUL (SEPT. 7) XINHUA - CHINESE FOREIGN MINISTER QIAN QICHEN TODAY

DESCRIBED HIS FOUR-DAY OFFICIAL VISIT TO TURKEY AS "A COMPLETE SUCCESS."

BEFORE HIS DEPARTURE AT ISTANBUL INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT HERE, THE MINISTER TOLD XINHUA THAT THE MAIN RESULT OF HIS VISIT -- STRENGTHENING THE MUTUAL UNDERSTANDING AND TRUST BETWEEN THE TWO SIDES -- HAS BEEN ACHIEVED.

QIAN SAID THAT TURKEY AND CHINA HAVE MANY COMMON GROUNDS, AND THAT THE TWO COUNTRIES ARE FACING ALMOST THE SAME TASKS.

DURING THE TALKS IN ANKARA, BOTH COUNTRIES HAVE EXPRESSED THE DESIRE TO FURTHER DEVELOP BILATERAL COOPERATION AND PUT FORWARD PROPOSALS IN THIS RESPECT. "THERE ARE GREAT POTENTIALITIES FOR FURTHER PROMOTING THE COMPLEMENTARY ECONOMIC COOPERATION BETWEEN OUR TWO COUNTRIES," SAID THE MINISTER.

THE CHINESE FOREIGN MINISTER ALSO SAID WAYS OF FURTHER STRENGTHENING BILATERAL ECONOMIC AND TRADE RELATIONS WILL BE DISCUSSED AT A MEETING OF THE JOINT CHINESE-TURKISH COMMISSION OF ECONOMY, TECHNOLOGY AND TRADE TO BE HELD IN BEIJING IN NOVEMBER.

THE MAIN ISSUE WE HAVE DISCUSSED WITH TURKISH OFFICIALS WAS THE GULF CRISIS, SAID QIAN, ADDING THAT "THE CURRENT GULF CRISIS HAS POSED A GRAVE THREAT TO PEACE IN THE REGION AND THE WORLD AS A WHOLE."

THE MINISTER ALSO SAID THAT DURING THE TALKS WITH TURKISH OFFICIALS BOTH SIDES SHARED SIMILAR VIEWS ON THE GULF CRISIS.

"THE TWO SIDES CONSIDER IRAQ'S ARMED INVASION AND ANNEXATION OF KUWAIT UNACCEPTABLE. IRAQ SHOULD WITHDRAW FROM KUWAIT AND THE STATE OF KUWAIT SHOULD BE RESTORED," STRESSED THE MINISTER.

HE SAID THE TWO SIDES ALSO AGREED THAT THE GULF CRISIS SHOULD BE SOLVED THOUGH PEACEFUL, DIPLOMATIC AND POLITICAL MEANS.

"TURKEY IS ONE OF THE IMPORTANT COUNTRIES IN THE REGION. IT HAS COMMON BORDERS WITH IRAQ, SO WE UNDERSTAND THE MEASURES THAT TURKEY HAS TAKEN," SAID THE CHINESE FOREIGN MINISTER.

TURKEY, A NATO MEMBER, HAS PUT ITS AIRFORCE ON THE ALERT SINCE THE GULF CRISIS STARTED WITH THE IRAQI INVASION OF KUWAIT ON AUGUST 2.

ON WEDNESDAY, THE TURKISH PARLIAMENT EMPOWERED THE GOVERNMENT TO SEND TROOPS ABROAD AND ALLOW FOREIGN TROOPS TO BE STATIONED ON TURKISH SOIL.

DURING QIAN'S STAY IN ANKARA HE WAS RECEIVED BY TURKISH PRESIDENT TURGUT OZAL, PRIME MINISTER YILDIRIM AKBULUT AND PARLIAMENT'S SPEAKER KAYA ERDEM AND DISCUSSED THE GULF CRISIS WITH THEM.

OTTAWA (SEPT. 7) XINHUA - CANADA HAS STOPPED SELLING WHEAT ON WORLD MARKETS BECAUSE CURRENT PRICES HAVE FALLEN BELOW THE AMOUNT THE CANADIAN GOVERNMENT PAYS TO FARMERS, THE LOCAL PRESS REPORTED TODAY.

A CONTINUING SUBSIDY WAR BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND THE EUROPEAN COMMUNITY, AND RECORD WHEAT PRODUCTION IN CANADA, THE UNITED STATES, EUROPE AND THE SOVIET UNION, HAVE COMBINED TO DRIVE PRICES TO THEIR LOWEST LEVEL SINCE 1931.

AS A RESULT, THE CURRENT WORLD PRICE FOR NO. 1 WHEAT IS ABOUT 99 CANADIAN DOLLARS (85 U.S.) A TONNE, ABOUT 25 CANADIAN DOLLARS (21.5 U.S.) LESS THAN THE WHEAT BOARD OF CANADA, A FEDERAL GOVERNMENT AGENCY RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNATIONALLY MARKETING CANADIAN WHEAT, PAYS FARMERS.

ON AUGUST 1 EVERY YEAR, THE BOARD SETS PRICE BASED ON WHAT THE MARKET MIGHT BE FOR FARMERS' GRAIN DELIVERIES. IF PRICES DO NOT REACH THAT LEVEL OTTAWA MAKES UP THE SHORTFALL, CURRENTLY 25 CANADIAN DOLLARS A TONNE.

INTERNATIONAL GRAIN MARKETS HAVE ALSO BEEN HURT BY A LACK OF ORDERS. THE WORLD'S TWO LARGEST PURCHASERS OF WHEAT, THE SOVIET UNION AND CHINA, DO NOT EXPECT TO BUY ANY FOR SEVERAL MONTHS. THE SOVIETS ARE HARVESTING A 260-MILLION-TONNE WHEAT CROP, THE BEST IN THE COUNTRY'S HISTORY, WHILE CHINA SAYS ITS WHEAT PRODUCTION IS GOOD THIS YEAR.

CANADIAN FARMERS ARE IN THE MIDST OF THE SECOND-LARGEST WHEAT HARVEST IN THE COUNTRY'S HISTORY. STATISTICS CANADA ESTIMATES IT AT 28.6 MILLION TONNES, 17 PERCENT ABOVE LAST YEAR'S PRODUCTION.

THE LACK OF SALES IS REPORTEDLY CAUSING CHAOS AMONG CANADIAN FARMERS. ABOUT 20 PERCENT OF CANADA'S 320,000 FARMS ARE CLASSIFIED AS WHEAT FARMS, AND WHEAT ALONE CONTRIBUTES ABOUT ONE PERCENT TO CANADA'S GROSS NATIONAL PRODUCT.

PYONGYANG (SEPT. 7) XINHUA - THE FOREIGN MINISTRY OF THE DEMOCRATIC PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF KOREA (DPRK) DEMANDED THE UNITED STATES TO PHASE OUT ITS TROOPS AND NUCLEAR WEAPONS IN SOUTH KOREA.

IN A STATEMENT ISSUED HERE TODAY, THE MINISTRY SAID THAT FACING THE PRESSURE FROM THE KOREAN PEOPLE AND THE PEOPLE OF THE WORLD, THE UNITED STATES HAS BEEN SAYING THAT IT WOULD PULL OUT ITS TROOPS FROM SOUTH KOREA IN STAGES AND TRANSFER THE RIGHT OF COMMAND TO SOUTH KOREA.

IN FACT, HOWEVER, IT IS NOT ONLY STREGTHENING ITS MILITARY FORCES IN SOUTH KOREA, BUT ALSO PLOTTING TO STAY THERE FOR A LONG PERIOD.

THE PRESENCE OF THE U.S. FORCES IN SOUTH KOREA WILL NOT BE CONDUCIVE TO MAINTAINING PEACE ON THE KOREAN PENINSULA. RATHER, IT WILL BE THE FUNDAMENTAL OBSTACLE IN THE WAY TO SOLVE THE KOREAN PROBLEM, THE STATEMENT SAID.

IT POINTED OUT THAT THE UNITED STATES HAS NO GROUND TO KEEP ITS FORCES IN SOUTH KOREA UNDER THE PRETEXT OF "DEALING WITH THE THREAT OF AGGRESSION FROM THE DPRK," BECAUSE THE DPRK GOVERNMENT HAS DECLARED MORE THAN ONCE THAT IT WILL NEVER INVADE SOUTH KOREA.

THE STATEMENT STRESSED THAT THE UNITED STATES SHOULD PRODUCE A TIMETABLE FOR THE PULLOUT OF ITS TROOPS AND NUCLEAR WEAPONS FROM SOUTH KOREA SO AS TO GO WITH THE INTERNATIONAL TREND OF DISARMAMENT AND RELAXATION.

TOKYO (SEPT. 7) KYODO - THE MINISTRY OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE AND INDUSTRY ON FRIDAY REVEALED DETAILS OF A FIVE-YEAR ALUMINUM CAN RECYCLING PROMOTION PLAN.

A TOTAL OF 148,000 TONS OF BEVERAGE CANS WERE USED IN FISCAL 1989. OF THAT, 63,000 TONS OR 42.6 PERCENT WERE RECOVERED BY ALUMINUM INTERESTS, WHILE THE REMAINING 85,000 TONS OF CANS WERE DISCARDED, MITI OFFICIALS SAID

MITI HAS FORMULATED A PLAN TO STEP UP THE RECYCLING OF ALUMINUM CANS BY ESTABLISHING WASTE CAN RECOVERY CHANNELS, IN THE HOPE THAT THE RECOVERY RATIO WILL BE INCREASED TO THE U.S. LEVEL OF ABOUT 60 PERCENT AFTER FOUR YEARS. THE PLAN IS TO BE INITIATED IN THE CURRENT FISCAL YEAR ENDING NEXT MARCH.

UNDER THE PLAN, DISPOSABLE CAN COLLECTION CENTERS WILL BE BUILT ON A TRIAL BASIS IN SOME DENSELY BUILT-UP AREAS AND LARGE HOUSING COMPLEXES WHERE IT HAS BEEN DIFFICULT TO COLLECT THEM FOR RECYCLING.

COLLECTION FACILITIES WILL BE INSTALLED AT CONSUMER COOPERATIVE CENTERS, RAILWAY STATIONS, SUPERMARKETS, LIQUOR STORES, AND GAS STATIONS.

AFTER AN ANALYSIS OF THE DATA DERIVED FROM SUCH TESTS, MITI WILL START A FULL-SCALE CAMPAIGN FOR COLLECTION OF THE CANS TWO YEARS LATER.

SOME MAJOR JAPANESE ALUMINUM CAN MAKERS ARE ALREADY COLLECTING WASTE ALUMINUM CANS FOR RECYCLING.

THE SEVEN MAJOR JAPANESE ALUMINUM CAN MANUFACTURERS LIKE NIPPON LIGHT METAL CO.HAVE DECIDED THAT SEVEN RECYCLING CENTERS SHOULD BE SET UP ACROSS THE COUNTRY IN 1990 -- ONE CENTER EACH AT ONE OF THEIR PLANTS -- TO STEP UP RECYCLING.

MITI ALSO DECIDED TO WORK TO DEVELOP ALUMINUM CAN PAINTS MOST APPROPRIATE FOR RECYCLING, AND IMPROVED TECHNOLOGY FOR SMELTING WASTE CANS.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (SEPT. 7) MCS -- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

Currency "trading is quiet [in London]. It is difficult to move before the U.S. unemployment data," says MAKOTO ARATAKE, customer dealer at the BANK OF TOKYO in London. "If the data are as bad as we are expecting, U.S. securities markets will probably react strongly. But the foreign exchange markets may only show a limited reaction as they have already discounted bad numbers to some extent." (Reuters, 9/7)

"If some shooting occurs in the Middle East, probably the dollar will strengthen," says MARTIN RIEBEN, chief currency dealer at SWISS BANK CORP. "But, I think, only very short-term." ("Nightly Business Report", 9/6)

"The dollar is too weak to ease now," says EARL JOHNSON of HARRIS TRUST & SAVINGS BANK. He feels that the Fed has to keep rates relatively high to attract the foreign investment needed to finance our huge debt. ("Investor's Daily", 9/7)

ELLIOTT PLATT, economic research director DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE, believes that "monetary policy is contingent first and foremost upon inflation," and therefore the Fed will not ease immediately. He says, "Any further policy easing will be deferred until ... the consumer price index for August will be published." He predicts that a resolution of the crisis in the Middle East would "result in a rather quick [downward] adjustment of yields." ("Investor's Daily", 9/7)

JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA, director of research at GRUNTAL & CO., says the Fed is unlikely to ease interest rates any more than one-quarter percent any time soon and that such a small move "just won't do" to stimulate the economy because it would not translate to big cuts in consumer credit "The consumer is the engine in the economy. You've got to help him if you want the economy to grow. If you don't help him, whether the banks borrow at a quarter-point less or more than they did yesterday has no meaning." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/6)

FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN reiterated his stand against inflation yesterday, but most analysts said the statements released have not substantively changed Fed policy. "In a sense, this was nothing new," says KENNETH KIM of STONE & McCARTHY, and WILLIAM SULLIVAN of DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS concurred, saying, "It tells me nothing about his current thinking on monetary policy." ("Investor's Daily", 9/7)

"The Fed will ease at some point, whether it is today or later in September," says DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON. Jones also sees a lowering of the discount rate in the fourth- quarter, which will sharply push down short-term rates as the Fed fights recession. But long-term rates could be headed higher: "We have oil prices shocks which keep long term rates high. We have high long-term rates in the rest of the world, which are hurting the dollar." Jones says the G-7 nations are likely to meet to discuss the impact of Fed easing on the dollar. "[The G-7] wants to keep the dollar from falling in a disorderly way," says Jones, who believes that allowing the dollar to "float down" will aid U.S. exports. (CNN "Business Morning", 9/7)

"Inflation everywhere will go somewhat higher in the near-term, because of higher oil prices," says currency analyst NICHOLAS SARGEN of SALOMON BROTHERS. "But, people are seeing the foreign central banks likely to tighten, and they're seeing the Fed most likely easing, and that raises more general questions about confidence." ("Nightly Business Report", 9/6)

"Everybody has already factored a relatively small increase in employment into [bond] prices," says KRISTEN FOSTER of CITICORP INVESTMENT BANK. "Yields won't fall much if the number is as anticipated [83,000 or fewer new non-farm jobs.] But we could see quite a reversal in short-term note and bill rates if the numbers are much stronger than expected." (NYT, 9/7)

THE ECONOMY:

The NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MANUFACTURERS has predicted that the Persian Gulf crisis will result in a mild recession. JERRY JASINOWSKI, president of the organization, says that while the situation is "a crisis in a political and human sense, I think it is an overstatement to indicate it's a crisis in an economic sense." The association predicts a decline in GNP of about $45 billion, or less than one percentage point. Inflation will peak at 6.3% in the first quarter of 1991. Unemployment will climb to

6.4%. ("Investor's Daily", 9/7)

Retail analyst JANET MANGANO of JESUP, JOSEPHTHAL & CO. says yesterday's mediocre sales figures reported by major retailers is not a surprise. "What's happen recently is that we are seeing rises in unemployment, we're seeing a higher cost of living and naturally this is going to take a toll on any kind of consumer-related issue where discretionary spending is involved." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 9/6)

"I think that the retail environment faces a challenging Christmas season " says JEFFREY LUKER of ARTHUR ANDERSON & CO. "I would say that the list of retailers reporting disappointing sales is growing," says JEFFREY EDELMAN of BARCLAYS de ZOETE WEDD. "We are in a consumer slowdown. And before it's over, we're going to have more disappointments." (NYT, 9/7)

"The Washington Post" reports this morning that many experts now believe oil prices will stay higher for some time even with other OPEC members making up for oil lost in the embargo of IRAQ and KUWAIT. "If the situation doesn't get any worse, we'll stay in the low $30-a-barrel range " says ROGER GALE, president of WASHINGTON INTERNATIONAL ENERGY GROUP. "I think the crisis is beginning to bite," says ARNOLD SAFER, president of ENERGY FUTURES GROUP, another consulting firm in Washington. "The expectation of a prolonged stalemate, on the political side, on the military side, are beginning to settle on the market." ("The Washington Post", 9/7)

"The New York Times" says several analysts see the oil market as "setting itself up for the possibility of a fast slide" in prices if stockpiles being accumulated turn out not to be needed. "People don't understand what the implications of war are and they don't understand what the implications of peace are," says ROBIN WEST, president of the PETROLEUM FINANCE COMPANY of Washington. "The market as a whole is very unclear as to what the equilibrium price really should be and it is fishing, so to speak," says ROBERT BOSLEGO, an oil analyst in Lexington, Mass. ((NYT, 9/7)

"The pressures are on the upside" for oil prices, according to STANLEY HARBISON of SCUDDER, STEVENS & CLARK. "Our outlook now is for prices moving between the upper 20s and the mid 30s." But he also points out that with an outbreak of war, "all bets are off, and the prices could soar much higher." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/6)

"Anything that would shut down the export of any Arab oil to this country would have a bullish effect on the [oil] market," says VIRGINIA WIATER, an oil trader for UNITED ENERGY. "People are nervous about that." (CNN "Moneyline", 9/6)

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT reported yesterday that business spending on equipment and factories will increase 5.1%, 4 points lower than was earlier projected. This slowdown "signals caution" on the part of many businesses, according to RICHARD BERNER, an economist at SALOMON BROTHERS. Commerce also pointed out that better than two-thirds of the companies surveyed responded before the problems in the Middle East began, meaning that the number could fall further still, but Berner discounted this notion. While the U.S. presence there adds "a note of uncertainty" to peoples plans, and may serve to make them more cautious, he says "the Middle East crisis was the final straw in the context of a weak economy." ("Investor's Daily", 9/7)

IN WASHINGTON:

The FEDERAL DEPOSIT INSURANCE CORP.'s latest report on the health of the banking system says New England has already replaced the Southwest as the region with the most rapidly growing real estate problems and says the troubles are now spreading down the Atlantic Coast. FDIC CHAIRMAN WILLIAM SEIDMAN says it is too soon to tell whether the problems will lead to more bank failures, but adds that "in the areas where we're having the real problems, things are getting worse." ("The Washington Post", 9/7)

The FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION is charging CAPITAL CITIES-ABC and the COLLEGE FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION will illegally conspiring to limit the number of college football games shown on television. (NYT, 9/7)

"No one knows how long the embargo will take to really have some bite in the Iraqi economy," says SEN. RICHARD LUGAR (R. - Ind.). He says Iraq may have supplies for as long as six months and that with the military buildup seemingly in place for an extended period, the question of paying for the action becomes increasingly important. "We're going to have to keep calling on our friends until the proper contributions come forward," says Lugar. "We cannot bear the financial cost of this alone. The American people will not tolerate that, nor should the American government." Lugar expects cuts in domestic programs, and further "revenue enhancement." (FNN "Marketwrap", 9/6)

"I do expect to get capital gains, I do expect to get some kind of I.R.A., I do expect to get a child tax credit," says House Minority Whip REP. NEWT GRINRICH (R. - Georgia). "But I will not agree to an income tax increase period." Other Republican leaders were more cautious about ruling out solutions to the deficit reduction problems. "As far as I know, everything's on the table," says Senate Majority Leader SEN. BOB DOLE (R. - Kansas), who says nothing has

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - At 12:22 a.m. today operators at the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company's (NYSE: CVX) Perry Power Plant in Lake County completed a shutdown of the nuclear reactor, officially beginning the plant's second refueling/maintenance outage. The outage is expected to last three to four months.

During that time, workers will replace one-third of the 74B uranium fuel bundles in the plant's reactor. The remaining two-thirds of the fuel, in which energy is less depleted, will be repositioned within the reactor core.

In addition to refueling, the outage provides an opportunity for maintenance and testing of systems throughout the plant which are required to be operating when the plant is on-line. This work includes about 1,200 equipment tests, over 1,200 maintenance tasks, 70 system design changes and 500 surveillance tests.

Michael Lyster, vice president -- Perry Nuclear, notes that maintenance work performed during Perry's last refueling outage contributed to the plant's excellent operating record over the last thirteen months.

"During Perry's second cycle, the plant was available to generate power 97 percent of the time and had a capacity factor 95 percent," says Lyster. "This compares very favorably with industry averages."

An operating cycle refers to the period of operations between plant refueling outages. Power plant performance is commonly measured by capacity factor, which compares a plant's actual output with its maximum potential output, expressed as a percentage.

During the Perry Plant's second cycle, the plant achieved several operations milestones. The plant generated electricity for 233 continuous days, setting a worldwide record for second-cycle generation for power plants similar to Perry. Additionally, the plant had four of its best six months for total electricity generation: March (910,397,000 kilowatt-hours); May (919,793,000 kilowatt-hours), June (885,969,000 kilowatt-hours); and July (913,113,000 kilowatt-hours). Perry's record for the most electricity generated within a 24-hour period was set on March 20 at 30,277,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity.

Now that the high summer demand for electricity has subsided, electrical service to CEI customers can be maintained by the company's other power plants, and by power purchased from other utilities, if needed.

The Perry plant is owned by a consortium of five electric utilities and is operated by the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company, a subsidiary of Centerior Energy Corporation (NYSE: CX).

YPSILANTI, MI (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The first electronic transmissions ever to go into General Motors light-duty trucks will debut in 1991 Chevrolet and GMC full-size pickups, suburbans, vans, chassis cabs, and motor homes.

The Hydra-matic Division of General Motors Corporation announced the introduction of its fourth electronically controlled transmission, the Hydra-matic 4L80-E. This 4-speed, rear-wheel drive, automatic transmission will be manufactured at the division's Willow Run facility in Ypsilanti.

The all-new, precision-engineered 4L80-E features pulling power approximately 50 percent greater than similar transmissions and fuel efficiency enhanced by about 20 percent over its predecessor, according to Alexander H. Rasegan, general director of Product and Process Engineering.

"This transmission was specially designed to meet customers' needs for a fuel-efficient, yet hearty transmission capable of hauling heavy loads," Rasegan said.

In addition, electronic controls provide for remarkable shift precision and smoothness. "The 4L80-E is a 'smart' transmission in that a control module can sense and adjust for variation in temperature, altitude and engine performance, enhancing overall performance, fuel efficiency and reliability," Rasegan said. The Hydra-matic 4L80-E has been designed to eventually replace the current Hydra-matic 3L80 transmission, formerly the THM 400.

FACTS
Product Name: Hydra-matic 4L80-E.
Type: Electronically controlled, 4-speed, rear-wheel drive, automatic transmission with torque converter clutch.

HIGHLIGHTS:
- Fully electronic controls for shifting precision and smoothness.
- Transmission control module (TCM) senses variation in temperature, altitude and engine performance and automatically adjusts for smooth and consistent performance.
- An integrated powertrain optimizes fuel efficiency and emissions.
- New, high-efficiency, dual stator 310 mm torque converter, exclusive to the 4L80-E, provides greater fuel economy and increased low-speed torque.
- Electronic controls eliminate the need for governor and modulator systems which significantly reduces the mechanical complexity of the transmission.
- Electronically modulated torque converter clutch reduces clutch apply/release, resulting in decrease in perceived shift frequency.
- A pulse width modulated solenoid allows for a gradual apply/release of the torque converter clutch for increased driver comfort.

APPLICATIONS:
- 4.3 liter to 7.4 liter, gas and diesel, V6 to V8 engines.
- Passenger vehicles and light-duty trucks.
- Up to 16,500 lbs. GVWR and 19,000 lbs. GCWR.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Manville Corp. (NYSE: MVL) today said that it has entered into an agreement in principle to restructure the funding of the Manville Personal Injury Settlement Trust (Trust). The Trust was established to resolve all health claims arising from exposure to asbestos products formerly made by the company.

Company representatives, at the request of N.Y. District Judge Jack B. Weinstein and Chief Bankruptcy Judge Burton Lifland, worked with Leon Silverman, special advisor to the courts, to develop a plan which is subject to negotiation of definitive agreements by the parties. Major elements of the refinancing plan include:

- Special distributions to be paid to all common shareholders according to the following schedule, subject to certain conditions:

- $125 million payable 90 days after September 1, 1991, or after final non-appealable orders to accomplish a comprehensive rearrangement of methods for settling and paying asbestos health claims are received from the courts, whichever is later.

- $125 million payable one year after the first distribution.

- $50 million payable in each of the third and fourth years.

- All distributions after the initial $125 million are subject to the company arranging appropriate financing.

- Beginning in the fourth year and continuing through the seventh year, subject to a cumulative cap of $300 million, an annual additional distribution may be paid based on the company's performance.

- The Trust will convert its Series A convertible preferred stock to common which will result in the Trust's owning approximately 80 percent of Manville's approximately 120 million shares common stock.

The Trust currently holds approximately 50 percent of the outstanding common stock. Earnings per share have been calculated upon the assumption of this conversion since the company emerged from Chapter 11 in 1988.

- Manville will exchange new bonds for existing Manville bonds held by the Trust, in order to enhance their marketability while not changing the present value of the company's payment obligation under the bond.

The refinancing plan continues the 20 percent of net company profits to be paid to the Trust each year, beginning in 1992, which was part of the original funding plan.

FORT LAUDERDALE, FLA. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - North Ridge Medical Center has become the leader in biliary intervention procedures. The Federal Drug Administration approved a new procedure that may be useful in the non-surgical patient. By inserting a 3mm metal stent into a 1/8" incision with high-tech imaging under local anesthetic, the staff at North Ridge Medical Center has perfected this successful alternative to invasive surgery. This new Biliary Endoprosthesis Procedure allows bile to drain freely from the liver into the intestine when a blockage has been detected. North Ridge Medical Center staff has performed more of these stent implant procedures than any hospital in the Eastern U.S., and every case has been successful.

In most cases it is cancer of the pancreas, gall bladder, or biliary system that will cause a drain blockage of bile from the liver into the small intestine, although in some cases, cancer of the colon may cause a blockage. "It's wonderful," said Dr. Michael Rush, chief of radiology at North Ridge Medical Center, "that we now have a successful, relatively painless alternative to invasive bypass surgery. Now we have the opportunity to offer a procedure that reduces recuperation time and eliminates the potential dangers of general anesthesia."

As in many medical breakthroughs, this metal stent insertion procedure has far-reaching possibilities. In Europe, doctors are already using this procedure as an alternative to often unsuccessful angioplasty to hold arteries and veins open. North Ridge Medical Center has made a dramatic impact on the medical future with the help of the Interventional Radiology Team and the entire medical staff.

BRADDOCK, PA (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A new era of world-class steel production in the Pittsburgh region was formally launched today as a contingent of government and civic leaders joined officials of USX Corp. (NYSE: X) at groundbreaking ceremonies for a continuous slab caster at the Edgar Thomson Plant of the USS Mon Valley Works.

The $250 million dual-strand caster is scheduled for completion in mid-1992. The Edgar Thomson caster will have capacity to produce 2.6 million tons annually of slabs up to ten inches thick.

Edgar Thomson, which was Andrew Carnegie's first steel mill, is the "hot end" of the Mon Valley Works. It produces slabs which the USS Irvin Plant in West Mifflin, Pa., rolls into finished flat-rolled steel products for the appliance, automotive, building construction and other industries.

A continuous caster eliminates the process stages of pouring molten steel into ingot molds, stripping the molds from the ingot, and then reheating and rolling the ingot into a slab. Instead, molten steel goes directly into the caster and is rolled into a continuous slab as it solidifies.

"In marking the start of this construction project, we are also marking the beginning of a new era in steelmaking in the Mon Valley region. The company is undertaking this large investment on the premise that world-class, quality steel products can be produced at competitive costs in the Mon Valley," said USX Chairman Charles A. Corry.

"The caster is the centerpiece of a program of recent and planned investments by USS at its three interrelated plants here - the Clairton Works and the Edgar Thomson and Irvin plants of the Mon Valley Works," Corry added.

Corry lauded the more than 4,000 employees of the three local plants for their efforts in recent years to improve quality and cost-efficiency, and he noted that without such efforts, the slab caster project would not have been undertaken.

"Some years ago, there were serious questions about whether USS would still be operating here in 1990, let alone investing a quarter of a billion dollars for modernization," the USX chairman said.

"While this project is not without risks, we are confident that with the dedicated support and cooperation of our employees and the community, we can succeed. The success of our program to modernize our Mon Valley operations will bring benefits to our employees and this region for many years to come."

BETHLEHEM, PA. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Bethlehem Steel Corporation (NYSE: BS) announced today that its board of directors is considering a plan to significantly improve the competitiveness of its Bar, Rod and Wire Division and return it to long-term profitability. The division is headquartered in Johnstown, Pa., with production facilities in Johnstown, Lackawanna, N.Y., and Sparrows Point, Md.

Walter F. Williams, Bethlehem Steel's chairman and chief executive officer said that approval of the plan depends upon obtaining a new labor agreement. Discussions will begin as soon as possible with the United Steelworkers of America.

The division will be separately incorporated as a wholly owned subsidiary to recognize that this business has its own distinct market and competitive conditions.

If a satisfactory labor agreement is obtained, the plan being considered includes making major facility improvements at Johnstown, including the installation of a continuous caster, modernization of an existing bar mill to permit rod production, and certain other improvements. The cost of these facility improvements is estimated at more than $100 million.

Bethlehem said that this plan is consistent with its continuing corporate objective of restructuring its businesses and operations to make them more competitive in the steel marketplace. The division is facing ongoing cost pressures in its markets, and the proposed actions are intended to further enhance its ability to produce quality products and to reduce operating costs, thereby making the division more competitive.

The Bar, Rod and Wire Division is currently recognized as a producer of high-quality steel products. Its existing production facilities at Johnstown include a modern, well-equipped electric furnace shop with a vacuum degasser and a new ladle reheat station, superior billet preparation facilities, and several bar mills which provide production capability for a full line of bar products; a world-class bar mill at Lackawanna; and a rod mill at Sparrows Point.

CLIFTON, N.J. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - American Cyanamid Company's Lederle Consumer Health Products Division today announced the launch of DynaTrim, a superior diet meal replacement that is expected to become the top challenger to Ultra Slim-Fast, the current leader in the $500 million meal replacement category.

Lederle, makers of top-selling Centrum multi-vitamins, plans to spend over $35 million on the DynaTrim launch -- its largest ever -- in an attempt to grab a significant market share and expand the meal replacement category, one of the hottest growth areas in the diet aid industry.

By year-end, meal replacement sales are expected to top the $1 billion mark, according to Chain Drug Review, an industry publication. Last year alone, sales in the category skyrocketed 214 percent.

A DynaTrim Taste Challenge promotion will be launched in fourth quarter 1990 as the product begins appearing on store shelves. Television advertising debuts on Dec. 30, 1990 with an estimated $8 million allocated for the first six weeks of 1991.

Some 65 million Americans are overweight and nearly 20 million will use a meal replacement product this year, based on industry sales figures.

Lederle expects that the unique DynaTrim formulation, designed to offer greater satiety and better taste than competitive products, will grow the category as well as encourage consumer switching. In keeping with Lederle's nutritional heritage, DynaTrim also provides outstanding nutrition with a formulation that contains more vitamins, minerals, protein and fiber than the leading brand.

For dieters seeking an escape from the inevitable boredom of a routine weight-loss menu, DynaTrim is the only meal replacement product that can be prepared three ways -- as a shake, mousse or frozen treat. In accordance with the medically accepted philosophy that dieting involves more than cutting calories, all product packaging will include a DynaTrim diet plan with information on exercise, nutrition and behavior modification. Lederle has also established a toll-free number for consumer questions, 1-800-282-8805, which will have the support of the company's nutrition experts.

Lederle Consumer Health Products is a division of American Cyanamid Company (NYSE: ACY), a research-based biotechnology and chemical company which develops medical, agricultural, chemical and consumer products and manufactures and markets them throughout the world. NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Avon's first celebrity fragrance -- Undeniable by Billy Dee Williams -- is on its way to capturing 15 percent of the $150 million market this year.

With sales of over $12 million since its April introduction, Undeniable is the nation's No. 1 male-celebrity fragrance for women. And Avon expects Undeniable sales will top $22 million by year-end, says Evette Beckett, Avon's director of fragrance marketing.

Sales of Undeniable this year already are greater than the combined sales last year of the top entries in the male-celebrity category: Mikhail Baryshnilov's Misha, Herb Alpert's Listen and Julio Iglesias' Only.

Billy Dee Williams and Avon also will easily top last year's three best-selling celebrity fragrance introductions -- Elizabeth Taylor's Passion for Men, Debbie Gibson's Electric Youth and Jaclyn Smith's California.

Among all celebrity-endorsed fragrances, Elizabeth Taylor's Passion for Women may be the only one to sell more than Undeniable this year, Beckett says.

Beckett attributes Undeniable's success to the charisma of Billy Dee Williams and to the fragrance's romantic, floral-oriental scent which has helped set trends in the marketplace. The fragrance is targeted to women ages 29 to 54.

"The selection of Billy Dee Williams was crucial to the success of Undeniable," says Beckett. "We waited until we found the right celebrity, one who would appeal to Avon's broad range of customers and sales representatives."

Beckett says that Avon was the first Fortune 200 company to pair a black male celebrity with a fragrance. "It was a bold marketing move that has paid off well for us," she said.

As a result of Undeniable's success, Avon will introduce Undeniable for Men in January, just in time for Valentine's Day. Now in the planning stages, Undeniable for Men will capitalize on the excitement generated by the actor, who has met with many of Avon's top sales representatives. Marketing efforts will be directed towards the same female target audience that purchased the women's fragrance.

"Women love Billy and the fragrance," says Beckett. "It's a simple but powerful formula for success."

LA JOLLA, CA (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Intermark Inc. (AMEX: IMI) and its wholly owned subsidiary, Triton Group Ltd., today announced that their respective Boards of Directors have approved a settlement of the Delaware Chancery Court litigation relating to the Aug. 30, 1990, merger of the two companies.

Pursuant to the terms of the settlement, which is subject to court approval, Intermark agreed that in the event that the average closing price of its Common Stock for the 20 trading days immediately preceding the two-year anniversary of court approval of the settlement was less than $5.50 per share, Intermark would pay up to $.35 per share in cash, or additional stock (at Intermark's election) valued at $5.125 per share to former Triton stockholders who received Intermark stock in the merger and held it throughout such two-year period.

Intermark stated that such additional consideration, if any, is not subject to determination at this time, and is dependent upon the trading price of Intermark Common Stock at the two-year measurement date and the number of shares held throughout the measurement period. No settlement amount will be paid if at any time during the two-year period, the closing price of Intermark Common Stock equals or exceeds $6.375 per share on 20 consecutive trading days.

In entering into the proposed settlement, neither Intermark, nor Triton nor any other defendant has admitted any violation of law or breach of duty, nor did any of them admit that there is merit to any of the plaintiff's claims. Intermark and Triton said that they entered into the stipulation solely to eliminate the burden and expense of further litigation.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The agencies which maintain and operate the nation's reserve shipping fleet today reported that 42 government-owned cargo ships have been called up for service to supply our armed forces in the Middle East.

More than 30 ships are already under way while the remaining are in shipyards being readied for their upcoming missions.

All of the ships are being manned by civilian crews who volunteered to serve aboard cargo vessels to support operations in the Middle East.

The ships are part of the Ready Reserve Force (RRF), which the Department of Transportation's Maritime Administration (MARAD) maintains for the Navy's Military Sealift Command (MSC). These ships provide prompt sealift support in the event they are needed for the rapid deployment of military forces.

MARAD is responsible for activating the ships and turning them over for operation by MSC which arranges ocean transportation in support of all U.S. armed forces.

Maritime Administrator Capt. Warren G. Leback and Vice Adm. Francis R. Donovan, U.S. Navy, commander of MSC, agreed that this first large-scale activation of Ready Reserve vessels has been successful and exceeded initial expectations.

Capt. Leback and Vice Adm. Donovan both praised American seafarers for responding to the unexpected and rapid call-up of inactive ships. Over 1,300 civilian officers and crew are required to operate them.

"The tradition of American civilian seafarers rallying to the support of our armed services dates back to the birth of our nation, and we are seeing that same spirit displayed again today," Capt. Leback said.

Vice Adm. Donovan said, "The strong support of the maritime industry is vital to the mobilization of the ships which are critical to the success of Operation Desert Shield."

Pretax income for the fiscal year was negatively affected by an increase of approximately $8,250,000 in medical malpractice reserves taken in the fourth quarter, which included a recent malpractice decision. The claim was initiated at a time when the company was self-insured for malpractice liability (1975 through 1983). Earnings per share were reduced by $0.20 as a result of the reserve increase. Net income for the year before the reserve adjustment totaled $33,954,000, or $1.30 per share.

Robert Gumbiner M.D., chairman of the board and chief executive officer, stated, "FHP performed well during fiscal year 1990. Income from operations grew by 35 percent to reach a new record, prior to the reserve adjustment. Capital expenditures reached nearly $50 million during the year, including five new medical centers, a centralized laboratory, and beginning construction of the 125-bed addition to the FHP hospital in Fountain Valley. New individual practice association (IPA) plans were launched in Southern California, and our expansion into the Tucson, Ariz., market yielded over 11,000 new members by fiscal year-end."

Total membership increased to 548,000 at June 30, 1990 from 466,000 at June 30, 1989, an 18 percent increase. FHP's commercial plan membership for those under the age of 65 increased from 338,000 to 381,000 during the year, a 13 percent increase. FHP's Senior Plan, a comprehensive health care program for Medicare recipients, grew from 128,000 to 167,000 members an increase of 30 percent.

FHP plans to continue its expansion program in fiscal 1991, with approximately $100 million slated for capital expenditures. Building plans include continued work on the hospital addition in Fountain Valley, beginning construction on a new hospital in the Utah region, and several new medical centers in various regions to serve the company's growing membership.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Genus Inc. (NASDAQ: GGNS) said today that it will announce an integrated system for CVD blanket tungsten and etch processes in mid October. This machine, which has been designed to meet the stringent specifications of advanced semiconductor manufacturing, will completely integrate the blanket tungsten and etch processes to produce tungsten plugs.

These new systems are currently nearing completion of beta-site testing with several large IC manufacturers and are on schedule for meeting sign-off for production specifications. Within the next two months, Genus will begin demonstrating the system's capability to additional customers.

"Genus has nine years of tungsten CVD and process development experience," said Clark Fuhs, a Genus Thin Film Division marketing manager, "and we have used our experience in the field to develop a system that will provide the industry with flawless, void-free fills for advanced device plug applications.

"Over 70 percent of design decisions being made today for future devices are implementing tungsten in plug applications rather than in interconnects," Fuhs continued. "Advanced technology is proving that tungsten plug and aluminum interconnect combinations provide the fastest devices.

"The focus of our new etch process is on flexibility to achieve extraordinarily good plug specifications. The system's etch process ensures minimal plug recess at less than 1000 angstroms at both wafer edge and center.

"Additional processes, to be integrated with blanket tungsten, will be available during the coming year. In the future, the system will have capability for applications other than blanket tungsten and etch-black.

"We are excited about offering the best integration technology for high volume production in the industry," stated Kenneth Schroeder, Genus president and chief operating officer. "Genus has integrated two critical processes, blanket tungsten deposition and etch, in proven high-throughput CVD and etch reactor hardware. This technology, developed in partnership with our customers, ensures them easy process transfer to volume production. Genus customers will also benefit from the yield and cost advantages derived from integrated processing as compared to stand-alone options," he concluded.

Genus Inc. is the leading manufacturer of production equipment for tungsten CVD and high energy implantation. Genus products are used in the fabrication of advanced semiconductor integrated circuits by major semiconductor manufacturers around the world.

NEW YORK, (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Emanuel Pearlman, on behalf of the Committee for Maximizing Shareholder Value of Healthco International, Inc. announced today that the committee delivered to the company last night and is delivering today written consent cards executed by stockholders holding approximately 4,200,700 shares of the company's outstanding common stock out of a record date total of 7,734,592 shares as of June 25, 1990, the record date for the consent solicitation. Under Delaware law, the delivery of valid consents from more than 50 percent of the stockholders of Healthco would effectuate removal of the current board of directors and the election of the committee's nominees.

An action was commenced last night in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware against the company and its current directors seeking a judgment declaring that the current directors have been lawfully removed from office by Healthco's stockholders, and the committee's nominees elected in their place, as well as for appropriate injunctive relief to implement the judgment.

HADDON HEIGHTS, N.J. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - New Jersey-American Water Co. has filed a request with the state Board of Public Utilities today for a 16 percent overall rate increase.

The proposed increase is expected to generate approximately $21.5 million in additional annual revenues for expenses involved in providing water services and operating sewer collection systems.

Company officials indicated that more than $66 million in additional plant investments through June 1991 are reflected in this proposal. Included in these costs are improvements such as meter and hydrant replacements and new operating equipment. Additional investment was necessary for the replacement and reinforcement of water mains in all service areas and expenses needed to improve water treatment processes necessary to maintain water quality standards.

In many parts of the state, consumption over the past two years has been lower than in previous years, primarily due to a reduction in outdoor water usage. Consequently, the company officials said, the rates proposed in this filing reflect both the rising cost of providing water service and the decrease in usage.

Under the proposed rates, an average residential customer using 21,000 gallons per quarter would see an increase in their quarterly bill as listed below according to location:

For customers in Morris, Somerset, Union and Essex counties (except for those in North Caldwell and Cedar Grove Township), an average quarterly bill would change from $65.91 to $75.37, an increase of 14.4 percent.

For customers in Passaic County and the North Caldwell and Cedar Grove Township sections of Essex County, an average quarterly bill would change from $59.96 to $68.56, an increase of 14.4 percent.

For customers in Monmouth County, an average quarterly bill would change from $77.24 to $90.77, an increase of 17.5 percent.

For customers in Hunterdon, Warren, Middlesex, Ocean, Burlington, Camden,

Atlantic and Cape May counties, an average quarterly bill would change from $55.90 to $65.68, an increase of 17.5 percent.

A rate change is also proposed for New Jersey-American Water Co.'s Ocean City and Lakewood customers who receive sewer collection services. Customers in Ocean City who use 6,900 cubic feet of water per year, with 2,500 cubic feet used during the prior summer quarter, pay an annual sewer bill of $328.68 (one cubic foot of water is equal to 7.48 gallons). Under the proposed rates this would change to $365.49, which represents an increase of 11.2 percent.

Under the proposed rates, an average quarterly sewer bill for a Lakewood customer who uses 15,000 gallons of water (passing through a 5/8-inch meter) would increase from $78.50 to $80.85, representing an increase of 3 percent.

Sewer charges for Ocean City and Lakewood customers are based on general sewer collection operating expenses along with charges for the delivery of wastewater to the Cape May County Municipal Utilities Authority and the Ocean County Municipal Utilities Authority.

New Jersey-American Water Co. serves approximately 302,000 customers in 109 New Jersey communities. The company's Western Division provides water service to 85,650 customer accounts in Burlington and Camden counties.

AKRON, OH (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Roadway Express, Inc. (NASDAQ: ROAD) announced today that the continuing rise in fuel prices has made it necessary for the motor carrier to increase its fuel surcharge from one-and-two-tenths (1.2) percent to one-and-seven-tenths (1.7) percent. The additional one-half percent is subjet to Interstate Commerce Commission review and will become effective on Sept. 14, 1990.

Michael W. Wickham, president of Roadway Express, stated, "We have resisted this action even though our fuel prices have continued to rise since Aug. 17th when we first announced a fuel surcharge. We cannot continue to absorb the negative effects rising fuel costs have made on our operating margins. The surcharge is related solely to the recovery of our increasing fuel costs."

Wickham further explained that Roadway implemented a policy of reviewing the prior week's fuel price developments every Friday, with any appropriate adjustments to be implemented the following Friday. "This notification period should help our customers' planning efforts and minimize the economic and administrative effects any changes may have on them," he said.

BOSTON (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - A former senior vice president at ComFed Mortgage Company, a subsidiary of ComFed Savings Bank, pleaded guilty today to bank fraud, to making false statements to a federally insured bank, and to conspiracy.

Wayne A. Budd, U.S. Attorney for the District of Massachusetts, announced that Vincent J. Crupi of Peabody pleaded guilty to five counts of bank fraud, five counts of making statements to a federally insured bank, and one count of conspiracy relating to ComFed Savings Bank. Crupi is the former branch manager of the Boston office of ComFed.

At the plea hearing, a federal prosecutor stated that, had the case gone to trial, the government would have introduced evidence that during the fall of 1987 and the spring of 1988, Crupi falsified information concerning the purchase price, income and assets of ComFed borrowers at a condominium development located at Atwood Street, Revere, Mass.

The condominiums were developed by Ciambelli and Pagliuca Development Corporation. The federal prosecutor also stated during the plea hearing that Crupi entered into the scheme to defraud ComFed in order to obtain greater commissions on the loans he originated.

U.S. District Court Judge John J. McNaught set Crupi's sentencing for Nov. 2, 1990. Crupi faces a maximum sentence of 40 years incarceration and a total of $2,750,000 in fines.

The case was investigated by Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorneys Martin F. Murphy, chief of the Major Crimes Division, and Margaret R. Hinkle, of the Economic Crimes Division.

Budd said that this is the fourth former ComFed employee to plead guilty to bank fraud. Budd also said that the federal investigation of mortgage loan fraud at ComFed Savings Bank is continuing.

OKLAHOMA CITY (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Beard Oil Company (AMEX: BOC) today announced that it has an undivided 25 percent working interest in an important wildcat well that was spudded on Aug. 29, 1990 on its Big River Prospect in the Upper Cook inlet of southern Alaska. The Prospect was featured in the company's 1989 Annual Report.

Herb Mee Jr., president of Beard Oil, said that: "The company and industry partners will spend in excess of $6 million to drill a 7,500 foot well, the ARCO Alaska Inc. ("ARCO") Sturgeon No. 1 well, to test the Tertiary which is the principal producing unit in the Cook Inlet Basin. The wildcat is being drilled updip from the Beard State No. 1-11 wildcat well which was drilled on an indicated geological structure located approximately 1-3/4 miles west of Kalgin Island. The Beard State No. 1-11 well was plugged and abandoned in 1984 after being drilled by Union Pacific Resources Co. (UPRC) of Ft. Worth, Texas, a subsidiary of Union Pacific Corp., Beard Oil and other partners."

Mee stated that Beard Oil first purchased leases in the Kalgin Island region of the Cook inlet 18 years ago and has developed several separate and distinct prospects in the general area over that time period. Subsequent to drilling the Beard State No. 1-11 well UPRC and Beard Oil did extensive additional seismic in the area and located another prospect lying to the west of their original acreage block. The Big River Prospect currently being drilled lies approximately 100 miles southwest of Anchorage, Alaska and approximately 30 miles southwest of the McArthur River field which has produced more than 500 million barrels of oil.

ARCO, the operator for the Sturgeon No. 1 well, contracted with global Marine Drilling Co. to move its jackup drilling rig, Adriatic VIII, from West Africa to drill the exploratory well. Following the 13,000-mile, 45-day trek, the rig was winterized in Seward Harbor before moving to the location.

Beard Oil Co. is a diversified natural resource development company headquartered in Oklahoma City. WICHITA, KAN. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Kansas Gas and Electric Company (NYSE: KGE) today asked the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC) to defer any action on Kansas City Power & Light Company's (NYSE: KLT) application for permission to acquire KG&E until a federal court determines the legality of KCP&L's unsolicited tender offer.

KG&E's motion, filed today, says the question of whether KCP&L's tender offer is legal under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, and Rule 51 promulgated by the Securities and Exchange Commission, is a "very real issue" now pending in the U.S. District Court for the District of Kansas.

The document says the KCP&L tender offer violates Rule 51 which provides that making a tender offer "shall be deemed unlawful" unless the offer is expressly conditioned on receiving prior SEC approval. "From its commencement of the tender offer, KCP&L has violated and continues to violate Rule 51," the motion says.

The motion says that "it would not be in the public interest for the commission or the parties to consider the application if the transaction forming its basis is illegal."

IRVINE, CA (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Irvine based FGS Insurance Agency Inc. filed a complaint today, Sept. 7, against Roxani Gillepsie as commissioner of the California Department of Insurance (DOI). The suit was filed in Superior Court in Orange County. The complaint alleges that Gillespie is unlawfully and wastefully expending state funds to harm FGS.

Specifically, the complaint states that the DOI instituted a toll-free hotline for which it solicits calls from actual and prospective FGS customers and has used this hotline to improperly claim that FGS provides inferior service, that the DOI will revoke FGS' license and that the insureds should not do business with FGS.

Furthermore, the complaint states that the DOI has harmed FGS by threatening to investigate or otherwise harm insurers on the basis of their continuing to transact business with FGS.

It further states that DOI investigators entered FGS facilities without authorization and aggressively solicited customers on the premises to call them. These investigators even waited in the FGS parking lot and handed them out business cards, seeking customers to call them.

In addition, the complaint states that the DOI has harmed FGS by threatening to seek revocation of licenses held by FGS employees who requested assistance of counsel during interrogation by DOI investigators.

The complaint seeks a declaration that the department is acting unlawfully. It also seeks a restraining order stopping the DOI from committing its illegal activities and to enjoin the commissioner from spending any further state funds on such illegal activities.

FGS President Alan Greenberg has indicated that the company is also considering a suit for damages it has sustained as a result of the department's unlawful actions and harassment. FGS is represented by Milford W. Dahl Jr. with the firm of Rutan & Tucker.

TAMPA, FL (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Belmac Corporation (AMEX: BLM) announced today that it has filed suit against its former president and chief executive officer, John Macleod, and its former counsel Stanley Hagendorf, for having misappropriated to their own use a pharmaceutical product tradenamed Odicine (R).

The suit filed in Pinellas County Circuit Court alleges that in late 1987, Macleod and Hagendorf breached their duties as officers and directors of Belmac by intentionally withholding from the directors of Belmac the opportunity for the company to invest in Odocine (R), while at the same time creating a separate corporation, Pharmacin, through which they acquired rights to Odocine (R).

Odocine (R), which was already approved for sale in France in the spring of 1988, is a patented new advanced form of erythromycin antibiotic for use in the treatment of a variety of common bacterial infections. The drug has already been licensed to a major U.S. pharmaceutical company for distribution in more than 20 countries worldwide.

Belmac Corporation's first product is a new antihemorrhoidal drug called Alphanon (R) which has recently completed clinical trials in France, the report of which will appear in a leading medical journal in the near future.

BOSTON, (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Healthco International, Inc. (NASDAQ: HLCO), in response to an announcement by Gemini Partners L.P. that Gemini had delivered to the company consent cards from stockholders owning more than 50 percent of Healthco's common stock, stated the following:

In view of the circumstances surrounding the obtaining of these consents by Gemini, we have serious concerns as to their validity and are, therefore, currently conducting a ministerial review of the consents for the purpose of determining this. More important, based on our review so far, it appears that Gemini does not have, as it has claimed, consents representing more than 50 percent of Healthco's stock.

"Moreover, all of Gemini's consents would appear to have been obtained in violation of the federal proxy rules and, therefore, are invalid. We intend to press this view promptly in all appropriate forums.

"Until we have completed our review, and our concerns under the proxy rules have been resolved, we believe that any claim by Mr. Pearlman that Gemini has won control of Healthco is, to say the least, premature."

SMYRNA, GA. (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The Banker's Note Inc. (NASDAQ: BKNT) an Atlanta-based chain of 75 specialty women's apparel stores, and Heirlooms Inc., the company's Philadelphia-based majority-owned manufacturing subsidiary of women's apparel, reported consolidated earnings for the second quarter, ended Aug. 4, of $19,000 compared with a pro-forma loss of ($105,000) a year earlier, when adjusted for the prior year acquisition of Heirlooms in August of 1989.

For the six months, profits increased to $296,000 from a pro-forma $139,000 profit a year earlier. The company had recorded a 1989 profit of $100,000 for the second quarter and $284,000 for the prior six months before considering the impact of the Heirlooms purchase. The second quarter included four months of Heirlooms operations as Heirlooms is changing its year end from Dec. 31 to coincide with The Banker's Note's fiscal year end. This additional period offset $226,000 of Heirlooms' four month, second quarter loss. Heirlooms has historically incurred losses in its second quarter due to the seasonality of its wholesale shipping.

Consolidated sales for the second quarter were $12,850,000 compared with pro-forma sales of $11,020,000. Year-to-date sales were $25,998,000, compared with $22,470,000. Sales for the prior year's second quarter and six months were $9,340,000 and $19,123,000, respectively, before adjusting the comparison for the impact of the Heirlooms acquisition. The inclusion of Heirlooms' additional month served to increase second quarter and year-to-date sales by $1,963,000.

Earnings per share were $.01 in the second quarter compared with a pro-forma loss of ($.03) per share last year. For the six months, earnings per share were $.09 compared with $.04 in the prior year. Earnings per share for the prior year second quarter and six months were $.03 and $.09 cents, respectively, before adjusting for the impact of the Heirlooms purchase.

The company's outlook on the women's retail apparel specialty industry for the second half of 1990 is one of caution. Management anticipates that business will be difficult but is committed to remaining profitable for the balance of 1990.

SACRAMENTO, CA (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - The California Trucking Association has announced that it intends to purchase cellular telephones and service to be used by its members from PacTel Cellular.

The arrangement is the first of its kind in the state between a trucking industry organization and a cellular service provider. As a result, CTA's members will be able to establish mobile communications capabilities that can handle both voice and data transmissions. The CTA estimates that the arrangement could result in sales of up to 20,000 cellular phones.

"Cellular capabilities will significantly increase CTA members' productivity and efficiency," said Don Harris, PacTel Cellular vice president of corporate development. "Mobile communications have proven valuable to other industries. They hold the same promise for trucking."

The CTA, with some 2,500 members statewide, it is also separately purchasing telecommunications services from Pacific Bell, AT&T and GTE for use by its members.

Thomas C. Schumacher, CTA's executive vice president, said the telecommunications arrangements will improve the efficiency of the trucking industry.

"It is our commitment to provide the highest quality products and services to our members," said Schumacher. "PacTel's established leadership in the cellular marketplace, in addition to its commitment to assist CTA in its goal of improving the trucking industry's capabilities, were major factors in our decision to purchase its service," he said.

The PacTel agreement gives CTA members a single point of contact in arranging for cellular service and enables them to receive the best available prices.

In addition, cellular features such as roaming, which allows users to use service when outside their home area, will particularly benefit CTA members, said Gary N. Schindler, PacTel Cellular's area vice president for Inland California and Nevada.

"The trucking industry is the backbone of California commerce," said Schindler. "We believe cellular communications will play a vital role in improving the communication of CTA's members and of the industry."

PacTel Cellular is the largest provider of cellular service in California with interests in systems serving Sacramento, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, Chico, Redding, Stockton and Modesto.

It is a wholly owned subsidiary of Pacific Telesis Group (NYSE: PAC), a worldwide diversified telecommunications corporation based in San Francisco.

GAITHERSBURG, MD (SEPT. 7) PR NEWSWIRE - Genex Corporation (NASDAQ: GNEX), which last month was issued a landmark patent on single-chain antigen-binding (SCAtm) protein technology, described as a "marketing tactic," the request of Creative BioMolecules, a private biotechnology firm, for a declaration of interference by the U.S. Patent Office regarding this technology.

SCA proteins are novel bioengineered molecules that have the potential of replacing antibodies in medical diagnosis and therapy, notably cancer targeting and treatment. On Aug. 7, 1990, Genex was granted a landmark U.S. Patent, No. 4,946,778, titled "Single-Chain Polypeptide Binding Molecules," which protects the genes, vectors, hosts and manufacturing methods necessary for producing SCA proteins.

"We are not surprised, and even anticipated, that Creative BioMolecules would ask the Patent Office to consider declaring an interference with our SCA patent, since it directly threatens its narrow product base," said Reed Prior, Genex president and chief executive officer.

"The U.S. Patent Office was aware of Creative BioMolecules' competing patent application and its participation in this field. Nonetheless, a broad patent was awarded to Genex. Moreover, this remains a fully legally enforceable patent. In contrast, Creative BioMolecules has no patents in this area of technology."

So far, Genex has been issued four patents in the SCA protein area. Additional patents covering SCA proteins, their uses and other related technology are pending in the U.S. and foreign countries.

"SCA technology has enormous potential for the diagnosis and treatment of cancer and other life-threatening diseases. We are aggressively pursuing our plans to build a new and exciting biopharmaceutical business for Genex based on our pioneering work in this technology," Prior said.

Scientists at the National Cancer Institute and Genex reported in the July 18 issue of the Journal of the National Cancer Institute the first successful in vivo targeting of tumors using a Genex SCA protein that had been transplanted into mice.

The study showed that for the delivery of imaging and therapeutic agents to cancer sites in the body, SCA proteins provide the binding capabilities of antibodies but overcome many of their drawbacks and are only one-sixth their size.

Genex Corporation utilizes its proprietary expertise in protein engineering to design and produce specialized pharmaceuticals, surgical bioadhesives and other high value-added health care products.

(AMEX, Toronto, Montreal: GXL) announced that agreement has just been reached with CSA Management Ltd. and Goldcorp Investments Ltd. to settle the action commenced by Abermin Corp. against Granges and others in relation to the Tartan mine. The action was assigned to CSA/Goldcorp, Abermin's major creditors, following the bankruptcy of Abermin in March, 1990.

Settlement terms include the dismissal and release of all claims against all parties to the action and the payment by Granges of $5.5 million to CSA/Goldcorp. Granges in turn will receive a conveyance of Abermin's participating interest in the Tartan mine, including 20 mineral claims and the associated mine infrastructure and equipment, and in 17 related joint venture mineral claims.

The remainder of the funds will be returned to Granges on completion of the settlement.

Completion of the settlement requires delivery of formal settlement documentation and is scheduled for Sept. 14, 1990.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (SEPT. 7) UPI - Engineers will work through the weekend to replace suspect fuel pumps aboard the grounded shuttle Columbia in a last-ditch bid to fix yet another crippling leak in time for a fourth launch try around Sept. 17.

But with the flight already running more than three months behind schedule because of fuel leaks and payload problems, NASA managers said Thursday a flight next month by the shuttle Discovery now has priority and that if Columbia does not get off the ground soon, the mission will be delayed to later in the year.

''This has been a troublesome and vexing summer for me and NASA,'' NASA Administrator Richard Truly said of the agency's repeated leaks. ''But ... running the space program is not an ordinary business. We push the boundaries of human activity in flying in space, and it's a hard job.''

In the meantime, technicians are continuing to make preparations to launch Discovery around Oct. 5 to carry the European-built Ulysses solar probe into space, a high-priority international mission that will be delayed 13 months if it is not off the ground by Oct. 23.

Given an internal NASA rule requiring three weeks between shuttle flights, the space agency will be hard pressed to get Columbia off the ground in time to launch Discovery near the beginning of its 18-day launch period.

Columbia and its seven-man crew originally were scheduled for launch May 30, but the flight was put on hold by a leak in the ship's 17-inch-wide hydrogen disconnect fitting, which allows the shuttle external tank to be jettisoned in space.

A second countdown was stopped Sept. 30 because of problems with an on-board telescope and another fuel leak Wednesday just eight hours before the ship's planned liftoff Thursday derailed the flight a third time in as many months.

Engineers now believe Columbia actually was suffering from two different leaks in May and that only one was fixed, the one involving the 17-inch disconnect fitting. A similar leak grounded the shuttle Atlantis in July.

Data indicates the leak that grounded Columbia Wednesday involved hydrogen recirculation pumps in the shuttle's engine compartment, a leak that in all likelihood was present in May as well.

In any case, the concentration of hydrogen measured in the engine room Wednesday peaked at about 6,000 parts per million, or 0.6 percent - 10 times higher than allowed by NASA's launch safety guidelines.

Truly said engineers were virtually unanimous in blaming a package of three hydrogen recirculation pumps in the engine compartment - good news, in a sense, because the pumps can be replaced in time for a launch attempt around Sept. 17.

''That will give us an opportunity to get the Astro mission off before Ulysses,'' Truly said.

To put Ulysses on the right course to the sun, Discovery must be launched by Oct. 23 or the probe will be grounded for 13 months.

Given the relatively short 18-day launch period, or ''window,'' NASA managers want Discovery to be ready to go as close to Oct. 5 as possible in case problems cause delays at the launch pad.

Discovery, meanwhile, is suffering from a slow leak in a critical cooling system, although engineers Friday were discussing the possibility of simply topping off the shuttle's Freon supplies and launching it ''as is.''

Given the requirement to make sure the cooling system will work properly in flight, Discovery's launching likely will be delayed a few days beyond Oct. 5.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Panamanian President Guillermo Endara has asked for the resignation of the Panama City mayor. Endara is upset with an article that Guillermo Cochez published in the daily newspaper El Panama America...

comparing the government to the former military regime. Cochez met with Endara late Thursday. He delivered a letter saying he was NOT resigning- in his words- ''precisely because we are NOT in the presence of an autocratic, Noriega--type government.''

TORONTO (SEPT. 7) UPI - In a startling and decisive upset, the socialist New Democratic Party Thursday toppled Ontario's five-year-old Liberal government, marking the first time the left-wing NDP has held power in Canada's richest province.

Unofficial results Thursday showed the NDP, which held only 18 of 130 seats in Ontario's Legislature when the election was called July 30, held or was leading in 77 seats hours after voting booths closed at 9 p.m.

Although the party won a majority of seats, it won only 37 percent of the total votes cast in the election. The Liberals took 32 percent of the vote the Progressive Conservatives 23 percent and fringe candidates 7 percent.

Pre-election polls indicated the NDP would form a minority government in which they would not win a clear majority of seats but would win more seats than any other party.

The Liberal government, which held 93 seats going into the campaign, was chopped down to 34 seats in the unofficial results. Premier David Peterson lost the London Centre seat he held for 15 years, and a number of his Cabinet ministers lost their seats as well.

Unofficial results showed the Progressive Conservatives, who ruled Ontario for 42 years before Peterson took power in 1985, had increased their seats to 19 from 17. There were two vacant Legislature seats going into the campaign.

The Progressive Conservatives ran third due largely to a disorganized party structure and a new, unknown leader in Mike Harris who is viewed as a clone of the highly unpopular Progressive Conservative prime minister of Canada, Brian Mulroney.

As giddy supporters in his York South riding chanted ''Premier ''

''Ours is not exactly a party that's accustomed to winning elections in Ontario,'' Rae said.

Rae said that following the day's ''remarkable turn of events'' the party must ''continue to earn the trust'' of all Ontarians, including the business community, which has long been a foe of the NDP.

''I think the business community is sophisticated enough to know our party has worked with business in other provinces,'' Rae said.

Rae thanked the dethroned Peterson and Progressive Conservative leader Mike Harris for the campaigns they waged. In the campaign's dying days, Peterson t tried to prey on some voters' concern about a left-wing NDP government.

Peterson, flanked by his wife Shelley, told supporters in his district that serving them was the highlight of his political career.

Characteristically polite, Peterson said he was resigning as leader of the Liberal party and congratulated Rae and Harris for the campaigns they waged.

''There is no disgrace in getting knocked down, there is only disgrace in not getting up,'' said Peterson, a former amateur boxer.

The Liberals seemed headed for a huge win when Peterson called the election July 30, but into the voting Thursday they trailed the left- wing NDP in the polls.

Voter disgust with an election being called years before Peterson was legally required to do so, growing skepticism about the government's integrity and anger over tax increases and policies like no-fault car insurance worked against Peterson and the Liberals.

Some pundits said the public was disillusioned with Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives and government generally and wanted to give the untried NDP a chance to govern.

The pundits also said that for decades, the Liberals and PCs have stolen policies from the NDP and that voters wanted to give the NDP a chance.

The NDP surge in the polls last week turned the normally upbeat, soothing sounding Peterson into a shrill doomsayer who warned that NDP policies would wreak havoc on the economy of Canada's most prosperous province.

NDP leader Bob Rae countered that the ''politics of fear'' wouldn't work in Ontario.

''We intend to build confidence in the economy ... and we intend to do whatever we can to build an economy stronger than the one we have right now,'' Rae said.

Political scientists and Canadian businessmen say Americans shouldn't fear an NDP government.

''Ontario is going to be a good or bad place for Americans no matter who is in power,'' said Gord White, a political science professor at the University of Toronto.

Although the NDP advocates closing corporate tax loopholes, scrapping the Canada-U.S. free trade deal and raising the minimum wage, ''It's going to be hard for them to make sweeping changes,'' White said.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 7) UPI - Sinead O'Connor's ''Nothing Compares 2 U'' was named the best music video of the year, and the Irish singer was the only triple winner at the 7th annual MTV Video Music Awards Thursday night.

O'Connor, with her trademark close-cropped hair and wearing a billowy white dress and black boots, also accepted awards for best female video and the somewhat nebulous category of best post-modern music video.

The soft-spoken O'Connor appeared surprised at all three awards. On accepting her first award, she gave only a clipped, ''I don't really know what to say, because nothing like this has ever happened to me before. Peace, and thank you.''

She said nothing after accepting her second award, but in the excitment of winning the top honor of the evening, she took a moment to address the censorship controversy that has bedeviled the music industry in recent months.

''Censorship in any form is bad, but when it's racism disguised as censorship, it's even worse,'' she said in an apparent reference to the black rap group 2 Live Crew's ''Nasty as They Wanna Be'' being banned in Florida.

The only other multiple winners were Janet Jackson, who with Anthony

Thomas won for best choreography for ''Rhythm Nation'' and a special Video Vanguard Award, and M.C. Hammer, who won for best rap and dance videos for ''U Can't Touch This.''

Don Henley's ''The End of the Innocence'' was named best male video; the B 52s were named best group for ''Love Shack,'' and Michael Penn was named best new artist for ''No Myth.''

Veteran rocker Billy Idol won for best video from a film for ''Cradle of Love'' from the Andrew Dice Clay movie ''Ford Fairlane.''

Tears For Fears' ''Sowing the Seeds of Love'' was named breakthrough video even though singer Curt Smith acknowledged that both the song and the visual techniques harken back to the late 1960s and the Beatles.

Host Arsenio Hall promised the audience even more shocking events than Dice Clay's off-color nursery rhyme ''Hickory, Dickory, Dock'' last year that resulted in his being banned for life from MTV, and Madonna's sexual gestures that shocked many.

Madonna delivered on Hall's promise by singing her heavily nominated video ''Vogue'' in a Louis XIV set and costume, surrounded by male courtiers who fondled her breasts through her voluminous dress.

But Madonna's ''Vogue,'' nominated for five awards, won only in categories for which she herself was not nominated: best direction by David Fincher, best editing and best cinematography.

Backstage, Idol was asked if it wasn't ironic that he won for his role in a Dice Clay number and responded with a wry grin, ''Hickory, Dickory, Dock.''

Luther Campbell of 2 Live Crew addressed the censorship issue backstage.

''It's a damn shame it's happening here in America,'' he said. ''We have sense ... we all have kids here, so we produce a clean one for the kids and an adult one for the adults.''

The three-hour program was broadcast live from the Universal Amphitheater on MTV and to 100 nations around the world.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Defense Secretary Dick Cheney disclosed that the United States now has ''over 100,000 U.S. military personnel'' in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf region as part of Operation Desert Shield.

Thursday's disclosure was the first time that Cheney or any Bush administration official has publicly stated the number of U.S. troops sent to the Middle East since the military operation began one month ago.

Speaking to a meeting of the International Institute for Strategic Studies in Hot Springs, Va., Cheney said, ''In about a month now we've deployed over 100,000 U.S. military personnel and their equipment to Saudi Arabia and the surrounding states, the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea.''

Cheney's remarks, which were broadcast to the Pentagon, came as he praised the U.S. ability to dispatch large numbers of troops quickly to a potential area of conflict.

Pentagon officials who have asked not to be identified said there are about 70,000 U.S. ground forces in Saudi Arabia, and that about 150,000 total are expected to be in place by the first week of October.

Cheney, with his references to the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea, included naval forces in his number. The United States has more than 50 warships in the region, including three aircraft carriers with a crew of 5,000 each.

Cheney said the military buildup in Saudi Arabia would continue and he defended the deployment of the large number of U.S. troops to the deserts and seas of the Middle East.

''The worst sin of all would be for us to deploy forces out there that could get into trouble but not strong enough to deal with any eventuality that may arise,'' he said.

In response to a question, Cheney said President Bush gave the military a threefold mission: to deter an Iraqi attack on Saudi Arabia; to defend the oil-rich sheikdom should deterrence fail; and to enforce the U.N. economic sanctions against Iraq.

''We've not been given an offensive assignment (to attack Iraq),'' he added.

He also defended the efforts by the Bush administration to seek help, financially or militarily, from its allies and friends around the world for Operation Desert Shield.

''It is appropriate for us to remind our friends around the world ... that in fact, there's no free lunch here,'' Cheney said, adding that some nations need to be told to ''step up to the counter and contribute more than some of them have indicated they'd be prepared to contribute.''

(SEPT. 7) UPI - There's NO indication whether Friday's planned evacuation by a U-S- chartered Iraqi jetliner of some of the Americans trapped in Kuwait will be the first of many. In the agreement struck by the U-S Embassy in Baghdad, the State Department says the plane is to pick up U-S citizens in Kuwait... then return to Baghdad for the issuance of exit permits at planeside. U-S officials say the jet will then fly to Amman, Jordan.

Maryland officials say Baltimore-Washington International Airport has been picked tentatively to receive American citizens... if hostages and families are released from Kuwait Friday. The state's Emergency Management Agency and Department of Human Resources are working together to co-ordinate plans.

Administration officials say President Bush will be on hand to open the latest budget summit with Congress... scheduled to begin Friday at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington. Democratic leaders had said they hoped to have reached a consensus on a formula for reducing the federal deficit. At a news conference Thursday afternoon, they admitted they had NOT.

Severe thunderstorms brought high winds and power outages to parts of the Lower Peninsula of Michigan late Thursday. Meteorologists say a funnel cloud was reported in the Detroit area, but it did NOT touch down. Nearly 90-thousand homes and businesses were left in the dark. One police dispatcher in Macomb County said there was a report of a tree going through a house.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - South African state-run television says President Frederik de Klerk may soon travel to the United States and the Netherlands. De Klerk canceled a visit to Washington in June to avoid confrontation with anti- apartheid activists. The Dutch foreign minister said Wednesday that de Klerk would probably visit the Netherlands in October- an announcement that coincided with the arrival in South Africa of a first-ever Dutch parliamentary delegation.

The Chilean army found itself apologizing Thursday for a speech the night before by army chief General Augusto Pinochet. During a Rotary Club dinner in Santiago, Pinochet called the West German army ''decadant'' because it allowed ''drug addicts, long hairs, homosexuals and union members'' into its ranks. Officials in Chile say the remarks were the result of ''improvisation''... adding the Chilean army feels ''affection, admiration and respect'' for the German army.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - The New York Mets could comfort themselves with the 26 games they have left. Then again, everything about the word ''left'' might bother them.

For the fourth time in three nights, the Mets lost a game started by an opposing lefty. Rookie Randy Tomlin pitched a three-hitter and Bobby Bonilla produced his 100th and 101st RBI Thursday night, helping the Pittsburgh Pirates complete a three-game series sweep with a 7-1 rout.

''I think we're going to see more lefties against everybody,'' New York Manager Bud Harrelson said. ''We have to score runs. We've only scored two runs in four games, and you can't win too many games that way.

It was the first time the Pirates swept a three-game series from the Mets at home since September, 1978. The victory boosted the Pirates' lead over the Mets to 3 1-2 games in the National League East. The teams play each other five more times, twice next week in New York and three in Pittsburgh to close the season.

''We go into a shell when a left-hander throws,'' said New York's Howard Johnson. ''It's like that with most clubs, especially clubs that have a lot of switch-hitters.

''We lost three. It's not over and we go on to Philadelphia and play our game there. We're not going to let this affect us in any way. I really believe we're going to win this thing.''

Tomlin, 2-2, retired the first 11 batters before Tom Herr reached on an error by shortstop Jay Bell in the fourth. He struck out six and walked none. Julio Valera, 1-1, took the loss in only his second major- league appearance.

''I know I can throw strikes,'' said Tomlin, who completed his second game since being recalled from Harrisburg of the Class Double-A Eastern League last month. ''I'm confident I can do it. ''I knew if I ''new if I

In other National League games, Chicago downed Philadelphia 5-2, San Francisco defeated Cincinnati 6-2, St. Louis beat Montreal 4-2, San Diego blanked Houston 3-0 in 10 innings and Los Angeles shutout Atlanta 5-0.

In the AL, it was: Cleveland 6, Detroit 0 in a rain-shortened five- inning contest, California 12, New York 6 in 11 innings and Texas 12, Kansas City 1.

-- AROUND THE NL --

Cubs 5, Phillies 2

At Philadelphia, Mark Grace and Jerome Walton knocked in two runs apiece, leading Chicago. Jose Nunez, 2-6, broke a personal six-game losing streak as he beat the Phillies for the second time this season. Mitch Williams worked 2 1-3 innings for his 14th save. Jason Grimsley, 1-1, took the loss.

Giants 6, Reds 2

At San Francisco, Matt Williams keyed a three-run first inning with a two-run double and also threw out a runner at the plate, helping the Giants preserve their longshot title hopes. Any combination of Cincinnati wins or San Francisco losses totalling 18 would eliminate last year's NL champs.

Cardinals 4, Expos 2

At St. Louis, Ray Lankford and Felix Jose belted solo home runs, leading the Cardinals in a game played in 100-degree heat. Ken Dayley, 4-2, pitched three scoreless relief innings for the victory. John Tudor, after 125 career starts for St. Louis, relieved for the first time with the Cardinals.

Padres 3, Astros 0, 10 innings

At San Diego, Bip Roberts belted a three-run homer with two outs in the 10th inning to lift the Padres. Greg Harris, 8-7, pitched two innings of one-hit relief against the Astros, who have the worst road record in the majors at 22-47. Brian Meyer, 0-1, surrendered Roberts homer and took the loss.

Dodgers 5, Braves 0

At Los Angeles, rookie Mike Hartley spun a three-hit shutout and Eddie Murray slugged a three-run homer, allowing the Dodgers snap a three-game losing streak and move to within 6 1-2 games of Cincinnati in the NL West. Hartley, 6-2, making his fifth major-league start, recorded his first career shutout. Braves rookie starter Paul Marak, 0-1, suffered his first-career defeat.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - It appears that whenever the Texas Rangers need a boost, they receive a healthy dose of Bobby Witt's pitching to get them on track.

Witt set a club record by winning his 12th straight game Thursday night and Ruben Sierra led an offensive onslaught by contributing a grand slam, powering the Rangers to a 12-1 pasting of the Kansas City Royals.

''It gives you extra confidence when Bobby is on the mound,'' Rangers' leadoff man Jeff Huson said. ''They got one run in the first and you just felt that was all they were going to get. Sure enough, it was.

''This gives us some boost for the last few weeks in the season,'' added Huson, one of those on base when Sierra hit his grand slam in the first inning. ''We haven't been hitting the ball like we should have been.''

Maybe so, but Witt, 15-8, was his usual self.

Witt is 12-0 in his last 14 starts beginning June 28. His last loss came June 17 at Seattle. Witt eclipsed the club record winning streak set by Ferguson Jenkins, who won 11 in a row spanning 1978-79.

''It's fun to pitch and win like this,'' Witt said. ''I felt a little out of sync mechanically, but overall I felt strong.''

Witt went seven innings and struck out eight to tie Nolan Ryan with 189 strikeouts on the season - second behind Roger Clemens in the American League. Witt's win streak is the longest in the majors since Roger Clemens' 14-game win streak in 1986. It is the 38th time in American League history a pitcher has won 12 or more straight and the sixth time in the last 10 seasons.

Chris Codiroli, 0-1, took the loss. He was bombed for five hits and four runs in the first inning.

Huson opened the first with a single, Julio Franco singled to center, and Rafael Palmeiro walked to load the bases for Sierra, who hit his 16th homer of the year.

''We escaped with two innings worth of zeroes (when Texas didn't score),'' Kansas City Manager John Wathan said. ''There's not much else to talk about when that happens to your team.''

Texas added runs in the second, third, fourth, twice in the the sixth and three more times in the seventh on Franco's three-run home run, his eighth of the year. Texas collected 17 hits in the game.

Elsewhere in the American League, California clubbed New York 12-6 in 11 innings and Cleveland blanked Detroit 6-0 in a rain-shortened five-inning game.

In the NL, it was: Pittsburgh 7, New York 1; St. Louis 4, Montreal 2; San Francisco 6, Cincinnati 2; Chicago 5, Philadelphia 2; San Diego 3, Houston 0, 10 innings and Los Angeles 5, Atlanta 0.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Angels 12, Yankees 6, 11 innings

At New York, Dante Bichette tied the game in the ninth inning with a home run and triggered a six-run 11th inning with an RBI double. Bob McClure, 1-0, entered in the 10th and picked up his first win since September 12, 1989. Lee Guetterman, 9-5, took the loss.

Indians 6, Tigers 0, called by rain after five innings

At Detroit, Candy Maldonado smacked a three run home run and walked twice with the bases loaded in the first two innings. Tom Candiotti, 14- 10, pitched a seven-hitter to earn his first win in Tiger Stadium. Randy Nosek faced just four batters, falling to 1-1.

TOKYO (SEPT. 7) UPI - The Tokyo stock market took a roller coaster ride Friday and ended higher than it started.

The Nikkei average of 225 selected issues, which fell to its lowest closing point of the year by midday, wound up at 23,962.07, a gain of 150.16 points. The Nikkei had fallen every day of the week, including a 266.43-point loss Thursday.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all major shares slipped 0.10 points to 1,845.93, following a 14.05-point loss the day before.

Volume rose to an estimated 440 million shares, up from 389.78 million Thursday.

In the morning session, the Nikkei plummeted 314.03 points to a closing of 23,497.88, its lowest level of the year.

The market rallied in the afternoon on hopes that the rising yen will offset higher oil prices and on rumors of a breakthrough in the Gulf crisis, brokers said.

The yen rose to an 11-month high of 140.25 yen against the dollar Friday.

The stock market rally centered on blue-chip stocks and speculative issues in a pattern that has become familiar since the Gulf crisis began Aug. 2.

Analysts were doubtful that the bulls would run far.

''A lot of people think the market looks bearish for the next six months

'' said analyst Christopher Schreiber of the New Japan Securities Co. ''We haven't seen anything like a selling climax yet.''

The lower dollar promised some relief on inflationary pressures, but threatened exports, analysts said.

Coupled with the looming recession in the United States, the export outlook for high-priced items such as luxury autos and electronics is dimming, they said.

In addition, the stock market is suffering from a lack of fresh investments, meaning that the same money is cycling in and out of the market, they said.

TOKYO (SEPT. 7) UPI - The Persian Gulf crisis presents a chance to clear up numerous Middle East problems within a U.N. Security Council framework, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Friday.

After dealing with what he termed ''Iraqi aggression,'' the body could tackle the Arab-Israeli conflict and the Lebanon morass, Shevardnadze said at a news conference at the end of a four-day visit to Japan.

The Soviet Union wants to see a peaceful solution to the gulf crisis, and to that end the number of Soviet military advisers in Iraq is being reduced, he said. But the Soviets' first priority was to evacuate the women and children among the 8,000 Soviets in Iraq, he said.

Touching on the Cambodian civil war, he said that in view of the U.S. willingness to meet with the Vietnam-backed government of Hun Sen, he is prepared to meet with Prince Norodom Sihanouk, nominal leader of the three-party coalition of rebels.

Elaborating on a proposal he made public in Vladivostok Tuesday, Shevardnadze told members of the Japan National Press Club the best way to reach a peaceful resolution of the gulf crisis would be to convene an international conference of the conflicting parties and the permanent members of the Security Council.

The United States, the Soviet Union, France, Britain and China make up the permanent core of the Security Council.

The first priority of the conference would be to resolve the conflict with Iraq, he said.

But afterward, he said, it could take up the Arab-Israeli issue.

''If the Arabs decide to join forces in support of the conference and take part jointly with the U.N. Security Council members, that could give us a chance of finding some rational solutions,'' Shevarnadze said.

He did not mention Israel, which has opposed such a conference.

The third Middle East agenda item would be war-torn Lebanon, he said.

Speaking of his visit to Japan, which laid the groundwork for an unprecendented trip by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, Shevardnadze was markedly upbeat.

During his visit, Shevardnadze delivered a message from Gorbachev saying the Soviet president hope to visit Japan in April.

''The situation has changed radically since 1986. We are now poised to discuss new principles for a new relationship between our two nations and peoples,'' Shevardnadze said.

He said the Soviets had proposed some simple ''confidence-building measures'' to reduce military tension between the two countries in the meantime, and had hopes the Japanese government would accept them.

But he also admonished the Japanese media to take a broader and less suspicious view of the situation.

He pressed them to look beyond the dispute over four Soviet-held islands that lie off Japan's northernmost main island of Hokkaido.

The territorial dispute has prevented the conclusion of a peace treaty between the two nations since the end of World War II.

''There is no need to take the line of all or nothing,'' he said, hinting that the Soviets would be flexible on the question, but only if it were addressed in the broader context of a peace treaty and fuller relations.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Deadly storms that damaged houses and flooded streets in the Midwest and shattered a 28-foot sailboat carrying six people on Lake Erie moved eastward Friday, prompting flood and storm warnings in Pennsylvania and New York.

Hot weather remained in the South, clear skies covered the West and the National Hurricane Center in Miami reported newly upgraded Hurricane Isidore gathered muscle in the eastern Atlantic.

A large area of strong storms slammed into Michigan, Ohio and Indiana Thursday afternoon and continued through Friday, and utilities reported thousands of people were without power in the region.

Powerful waves whipped by 57 mph winds slammed a 28-foot sailboat against a rocky wall Thursday night near Edgewater Park in Cleveland, destroying the boat, killing one woman and leaving a second missing, authorities said.

The Coast Guard reported that one woman and three men survived the crash.

''Waves were picking the boat up and slamming it down against the rocks ... while they were clinging to the boat,'' said John Kearns, chief officer of the Cleveland Coast Guard station.

In Michigan, storms knocked a tree through the roof of a house and caused dozens of traffic accidents in Detroit. There were unconfirmed tornado sightings throughout the region and tens of thousands of people were without electricity.

The thunderstorms moved into Pennsylvania Friday, where flash flood watches and warnings were in effect for the western half of the state and the northern panhandle of West Virginia.

In the Northeast, clouds covered the region, and showers - and possibly thunderstorms - were expected later Friday for regions from Massachusetts to New York City.

Summer heat continued to broil the South and the National Weather Service warned of excessive heat and high humidity across North Carolina, where temperatures topped 90 degrees.

In the West, clouds developed over most of the mountains of Northern and Central California although only isolated showers were reported over the central Sierra Nevada. Sunny skies prevailed elsewhere with Death Valley posting a high of 110 degrees, highest in the state.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (SEPT. 7) UPI - President Frederik de Klerk will hold talks in Washington with President Bush on Sept. 24 during the first official visit by a South African president to the United States in more than four decades of apartheid rule, officials said Friday.

An official at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs confirmed the meeting and said formal announcements by the South African and U.S. governments were expected to be issued on the visit later in the day.

Bush invited de Klerk to the United States following his Feb. 2 racial reform initiatives that included the release of Nelson Mandela from 27 years' imprisonment, the unbanning of the African National Congress and calls for negotiations on a post-apartheid constitution.

He had been expected to visit Washington in June but canceled the visit to avert a confrontation with anti-apartheid activists who objected to de Klerk's reception at the White House before Mandela's in July.

De Klerk will be the first South African head of government to visit the United States since the National Party won power in 1948 and erected the discriminatory laws known as apartheid. De Klerk has pledged to abolish apartheid and negotiate a system of equal rights for all South Africans irrespective of color.

De Klerk also is expected to travel shortly to the Netherlands on a similarly unprecedented tour.

Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek announced in the Netherlands Wednesday that de Klerk would probably visit the country in October - an announcement that coincided with the arrival in South Africa of a unprecedented Dutch parliamentary delegation.

Since the National Party's rise to power, Holland has had chilly relations with South Africa, whose minority white population is dominated by the Dutch-descended Afrikaners.

BEIJING (SEPT. 7) UPI - Premier Li Peng has stepped down from his concurrent post as minister in charge of a key government economic research commission, state television reported Friday.

Li's departure as head of the State Commission on Restructuring the Economy, a post he had held since April 1988, was approved by the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress, China's rubber- stamp parliament.

He was replaced by Chen Jinhua, president of the China National Petrochemical Corp., government television reported on its evening newscast. A political unknown, Chen has headed the government petrochemical conglomerate since 1983.

The impact of the shift was not immediately clear but analysts said it could reflect continuing disagreements among Chinese leaders over the troubled state of the economy and how to proceed with free-market economic reforms launched in the late 1970s.

A Li-advocated austerity program, begun in late 1988 to rein in record inflation, pushed the economy to near recession last year, raised unemployment and forced the government to loosen credit earlier this year.

The restructuring commission was founded in 1982 as one of several liberal ''think tanks'' under Premier Zhao Ziyang, the reformist who became communist party chief in 1987 but was ousted in June 1989 after the crushing of the pro-democracy movement.

The commission had been home to some of China's best and brightest reform thinkers but they have been largely silenced since the austerity program began and since the government swung to a hard line after the crackdown on the protests last year.

Li, known as a colorless, uninspiring premier, is perhaps the least popular leader in the Chinese hierarchy and engendered hatred for his key role in last year's crackdown.

But he is backed by several powerful party elders and his position is believed to be secure at present.

HELSINKI (SEPT. 7) UPI - A Finnish member of Parliament and political non- conformist is to interview Iraqi President Saddam Hussein for a television report to be aired during Sunday's superpower summit in Helsinki, it was reported Friday.

Finland's main Swedish language daily Hufvudstadsbladet said Jorgen Donner unconventional and outspoken parliamentarian and former minister of culture, left for Baghdad with a commitment from Saddam that he would permit the interview.

''A film company here in Finland approached me, said it had permission for the interview and asked if I would do the questioning,'' Donner said.

''I would not go unless there was a firm commitment on the part of the Iraqi leader to agree to the interview,'' Donner said before leaving Helsinki.

Donner, newly appointed political spokesman for Finland's Swedish People's Party, was to leave Amman, Jordan, late Friday for Baghdad and was expected to interview Saddam Saturday before returning to Finland.

''I have to be back on Sunday anyway because I've promised to babysit,'' Donner said.

President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev are to meet Sunday in Helsinki to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis and other matters of bilateral interest.

The Finnish film company arranging the interview said it had booked sattelite time for its transmission Saturday.

''The interview has been sold to a number of countries and we have had a lot of other requests for the interview,'' a spokeswoman for the company said but refused to give any details.

BOSTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Gov. Michael S. Dukakis was on a business trip to Europe Friday ready to return home on short notice if Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy, lagging in the three-way race to replace him, does anything to upset his administration's plans to deal with the state's fiscal crisis.

When Dukakis took off Thursday night, he called Murphy's threats to co-opt the administration's budget planning ''pathetic.''

Murphy, a Democratic gubernatorial candidate who has slipped in recent polls, described the governor's reaction to her statements as ''wild'' and ''weird.''

She continued to refuse to disclose exactly what steps she would take, explaining only that they would be ''responsible.''

''I want to make sure the books are balanced at the end of the year,'' she said Thursday. ''It's important to respond to the signals right now.''

Murphy drew Dukakis's undisguised ire Wednesday when she said she would take independent steps to deal with yet another impending budget deficit when the governor departed for Europe. She is acting governor in his absence.

''I think how the governor reacted yesterday was strange, weird,'' said Murphy. ''So to see the kind of overreaction yesterday by him and by his staff and this kind of wildness, I don't understand. There's no good will here and certainly no mutual respect.''

The governor accused Murphy, who is running well behind Frank Bellotti and John Silber in public opinion polls for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, of using the state's fiscal crisis ''for personal political gain.''

Dukakis had originally intended to leave for Europe to drum up business for Massachusetts on Monday, but put that off because of reports Murphy planned to make sweeping changes while acting as governor.

The governor on Tuesday announced he was implementing a 4 percent spending reduction approved by the Legislature and ordering his Cabinet officers to come up with plans within 15 days for another 4 percent reduction.

''I think the episode of the past 24 hours really has been kind of pathetic,'' said Dukakis. ''If anything happens which affects the stability and the kind of work were doing on a fiscal plan for this state ... I may have to go back.''

Administration and Finance Secretary Edward Lashman accused Murphy of jeopardizing delicate negotiations with the financial community.

''We've got a bizarre situation here, people; we've got a really bizarre situation,'' Lashman told reporters. ''We can't risk the future of the commonwealth and its economy.''

''We've got a $600 million bond sale coming up in a couple of weeks. The last thing the New York financial community wants to know is that there's some new Mickey Mouse going on because of a political ploy by the lieutenant governor,'' said Lashman.

''It's absolutely pathetic,'' he said. ''Evelyn Murphy is not going to be governor of the commonwealth under any circumstances.''

Silber called Murphy's actions a ''coup d'etat that belongs in a musical comedy.''

Bellotti said he would wait and see what happens.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The nation's civilian jobless rate climbed to 5.6 percent in August - the highest level in two years - as more factory and construction workers lost their jobs, the Labor Department said Friday.

Private analysts had expected the jobless rate to hold steady at July's 5.5 percent.

''Employment continued to be weak in August and unemployment rose slightly '' according to the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

''Job declines occured throughout the goods-producing sector,'' the report said. ''These losses were only partly offset by small gains in the service-producing sector.''

Total employment edged down 75,000 in August over July. A government spokesman said the 5.6 percent jobless rate was the highest since a 5.6 percent showing in August 1988.

The Labor Department said the number of manufacturing jobs declined about 45,000 last month, with the electronic equipment and transportation equipment industries being the hardest hit.

''Since reaching a post-recession peak in January 1989, the number of factory jobs has declined 455,000,'' the report said.

Employment in the construction industry, meanwhile, continued its recent slide, dropping by about 40,000 jobs in August, for a three-month loss of nearly 100,000 jobs. Mining, which had added 60,000 jobs since last July, lost 7,000 in August.

In the service sector of the economy most of the job increase was in health services, which has been a strong performer for the past 12 months.

Counting military personnel, August' private businesses held steady in August at 34.5 hours, but increased to 41 hours from 40.9 hours for the manufacturing sector, while manufacturing overtime edged up to 3.9 hours from 3.8 hours.

In the public sector, state and local government's added about 60,000 jobs in August, but overall government employment fell by 65,000 jobs as the Census bureau laid off legions of temporary census workers.

The unemployment rate for teenagers increased to 16.7 percent in August from 16.3 percent, while the jobless rate for blacks shot up to 11.8 percent in August from 11.3 percent in July. But the rate for Hispanics inched down to 7.8 percent last month from 7.9 percent.

The data in the report was adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

JAKARTA, INDONESIA (SEPT. 7) UPI - Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen refused Friday to attend delayed peace talks to end an 11-year-old civil war unless resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk sit down with him at the negotiating table.

''I decided not to attebd the meeting as long as Sihanouk does not attend '' said the Hanoi-backed leader on arrival. ''This is my serious position.''

Hun Sen's announcement raised fears that the crucial talks were derailed again after three days of wrangling over representation of the warring factions.

A key Indonesian organizer said intensive negotiations were under way to persuade Sihanouk to participate. Although the mercurial Sihanouk was still in Beijing and not scheduled to arrive until late Saturday, the organizer said his presence at the talks ''is the key'' to the survival of the session.

''I am in Jakarta as coach, team captain and player,'' Hun Sen said. ''I have to see whether my counterpart takes part in the competition. If he just wants to be a trainer, I will do the same.''

Hun Sen's arrival was delayed by four hours because Singapore refused to grant clearance for his plane.

Hor Nam Hong, Phnom Penh's deputy prime minister for foreign affairs, said Hun Sen arrived in Ho Chi Minh City from Phnom Penh but was initially thwarted from continuing to Jakarta.

''The Singapore government would not allow the airline to refuel'' or permit it to fly through its air space, he said, leaving Hun Sen in Ho Chi Minh City until an alternate route was worked out.

Singapore has no diplomatic relations with Vietnam and has been one of the strongest critics of the United States' decision to withdraw diplomatic recognition for the three-party guerrilla coalition fighting the Phnom Penh government.

A spokesman for the Singapore Foreign Ministry denied there was any refusal to grant clearance.

The unexpected turn of events left the Indonesian hosts in a quandry over when the talks, originally slated to start Wednesday, could begin. They decided to withhold any decision until all of the delegates arrived.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas and those already here representing Sihanouk's three-party coalition all expressed relief after Sihanouk said Thursday in Beijing he would attend as a guest of President Suharto, reversing his previous refusal to come to Jakarta at all.

Sihanouk said he would not participate directly in the talks but would be represented by his son, Prince Norodom Ranariddh.

Hun Sen, who had declined to show up in Sihanouk's absence, also decided to come Friday, raising hopes the talks were back on track.

But Hun Sen said Ranariddh had no right to represent Sihanouk at the negotiations. He said, ''I demand Sihanouk's participation,'' and noted he did not want a repeat of three failures to make progress at Jakarta peace talks since 1988.

''If Sihanouk is absent, I will be absent,'' said a resolute Hun Sen. ''He will be the one to determine whether I will attend or not.''

While determined not to participate in the sessions, Sihanouk said he would work with the leaders of his Khmer Rouge-dominated coalition to set up a Supreme National Council to embody Cambodian sovereignity and hold Cambodia's seat in the United Nations prior to free elections, a step viewed as essential toward ending the civil war.

Alatas, who has hosted the unsuccessful regional peace talks on Cambodia and co-hosted the international Paris conference last year, persevered in his efforts to spark another Sihanouk turnaround, an aide said.

The talks were called to discuss a plan approved by the five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council last week, including the setting up of the SNC. The Sept. 18 opening of the U.N. General Assembly meeting lent additional urgency to the gathering.

The plan, worked out by the United States, Britain, China, France and the Soviet Union, provided for separation and disarmament of all forces in Cambodia, a major U.N. supervisory role and free elections.

Hun Sen's refusal to participate without Sihanouk came only two days after Secretary of State James Baker said the United States would open direct contacts with Phnom Penh. In explaining the move, Baker noted Hun Sen had agreed to use the U.N. plan as a framework for discussions with the other parties.

Two U.S.-Vietnamese meetings took place in August in New York.

The United States, in a major policy shift, withdraw support for the guerrilla coalition's seat in July because it included the Khmer Rouge, the most powerful of the factions and blamed for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians during its four-year reign. The Khmer Rouge was toppled by the Vietnamese invasion in 1978.

Armed by China, the Khmer Rouge is militarily the strongest of the resistance factions and fears of its possible return to political power prompted the U.S. move.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - The United States is getting ready to airlift some of the 22- hundred Americans trapped in Iraqi-occupied Kuwait. Under an agreement struck by the U-S Embassy in Baghdad, the plane is to pick up U-S citizens in Kuwait, return to Baghdad for exit permits, and then fly to Jordan. The State Department says it's the first such agreement with Iraq to allow evacuation of Americans... other than diplomatic personnel and their families. .

Secretary of State Baker met today in Saudi Arabia with the ousted leader of Kuwait. Yesterday, he met with Saudi King Fahd and won a pledge of BILLIONS of dollars to help pay for the U-S troop buildup in the Persian Gulf. From Saudi Arabia, Baker flies to the United Arab Emirates and later to Egypt, where he's expected to hold talks with President Mubarak tomorrow. Baker will be in Finland Sunday for the super-power summit.

NASA will try again around September 17th to launch the shuttle Columbia. The spaceplane was grounded this week by a fuel leak, and engineers at Cape Canaveral are working through the weekend to replace suspect fuel pumps. Columbia is already months behind schedule. NASA says if it doesN'T get off the ground soon, the flight will be delayed to later in the year.

Classes are to resume today in school districts in California, Michigan and Illinois where teacher strikes have ended. But new strikes cropped up in other areas, and walkouts affecting 56-hundred teachers and 93-thousand students continue nationwide. Officials say salaries and benefits are the main issues in many of the disputes.

KUALA LUMPUR, MALAYSIA UPI) - Thai Foreign Minister Subin Pinkayan expressed optism Friday that positive results might be reached at informal Cambodian peace talks in Jakarta this week.

Progress might be made at the fourth round of talks - the first three were deadlocked - because of the Cambodian peace plan recently agreed to by the five permanent U.N. Security Coincil memebers, he said.

''I see this as the best opportunity for the four warring factions to get together and talk because now we have the directive of the U.N. to start with, Subin said on his first stop of his tour of the Association of South East Asian Nations countries.

''We never had this before and that is why so many countries including ASEAN members, are optimistic about the talks and are giving their support.''

The five permanent members - the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China - adopted a peace plan that calls for U.N. supervision in Cambodia leading to free election.

It was imperative that all four Cambodian factions attend the talks, Subin said.

The four factions are the Phnom Penh government, led by Hun Sen, and the three-part resistance linking the Khmer Rouge with two non- communist groups led by former ruler Prince wNorodum Sihanouk and former premeir Son Sann.

Subin, who leaves for Singfpore Saturday, is keeping with ASEAN tradition of foreign ministers making official calls on their counterpart once they are appointed.

ASEAN groups the non-communist countries of the Philippines, Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore, Brunei and Malaysia.

RANGOON, BURMA (SEPT. 7) UPI - Burma's military junta arrested ''for security reasons'' the two acting leaders and four other members of the political party that swept recent elections, official Rangoon radio reported Friday.

Gen. Saw Maung, leader of the military group that has refused to yield power to the legislature elected last May, said the arrests were part of action being taken to prevent political unrest.

Diplomatic sources in Rangoon, however, said the arrest of the elderly, moderate Kyi Maung and Chit Khaing - who became acting leaders of National League of Democracy when the party's official leaders Aung San Suu Kyi and Tin U were arrested in July - may increase the possibility of protests.

''On the evening of Sept. 6, authorities concerned detained for security reasons Kyi Maung, member of the Central Executive Committee of the National League for Democracy and Chit Khaing, secretary of the NLD,'' Rangoon radio reported.

Campaigning for a return to democracy and an end to military rule, the NLD won a sweeping 80 percent of the seats in the legislature in May elections swamping several pro-military parties. The party leaders arrested in July are still being detained.

Military leaders, who had promised to let the elected legislature meet and form a government, have steadily backed away from their earlier statements prompting the NLD to demand that the legislature be allowed to convene this month.

''At present, steps are being taken to measures have been prescribed for organizations concerned,'' the general said. He said legal steps would be taken against any party which attempts to form a government, but the military rules under martial law which has made many political activities illegal.

Australian Foreign Minister Gareth Evans immediately denounced the arrests of Kyi Maung and Chit Khaing, which he said ''further discredited the military regime ... and made a mockery of the national elections in May.''

Rangoon radio made no mention of the NLD' s political demands or potential unrest, saying that the NLD leaders were arrested for ''passing state evidence they should have kept to themselves to unconcerned persons.''

It said another four NLD members were arrested in the central Burmese city of Mandalay for ''writing incorrect news to create disturbances in Mandalay.''

Western diplomats reported last month that government security forces shot into a crowd of protestors in Mandalay, killing four people. The government admitted there had been demonstrations in the city, but insisted security forces fired into the air and did not kill anyone.

In response to the incidents, the Buddhist hierarchy in Mandalay announced it would ''excommunicate'' junta leaders from all Buddhist rites.

Saw Maung initially shrugged off the Buddhist action, saying ''what I have been doing is for the good of the people and the country.''

But at a press conference Friday, the general quoted from Buddhist texts and took pains to point out that religions teach respect for and obedience to the ruler, and that this teaching should be heeded by all, be they Buddhists, Christians or Moslems.

One Rangoon-based diplomat said it was possible the government was arresting NLD leaders as a pre-emptive action against political agitation.

''But more people believe the military wants a confrontation, and the arrests of moderate leaders are meant to cause the violence that will give them an excuse to completely cancel the results of the elections,'' he said.

Kyi Maung and Chit Khaing, both retired army colonels about 70 years old, are considered cautious leaders who have been restraining younger members of the party that have been demanding more forceful measures to demand a transfer of power.

The military killed hundreds, perhaps thousands of pro-democracy demonstrators when it seized direct power in 1988.

It has warned against any repetition of the 1988 demonstrations that brought out millions of people for marches demanding democracy.

The second anniversary of the military takeover on Sept. 18 is seen as a possible flashpoint for new demonstrations.

The Rangoon-based diplomat said there has been a moderate increase in security visible in Rangoon, but little public reaction to the arrests yet.

''Everyone is holding their breath until the anniversary,'' he said.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Share prices rebounded Friday in Tokyo following a four-day losing streak on worries about the situation in the Middle East.

The Nikkei average of 225 selected issues ended at 23,962.07 points, a gain of 150.16 points. The Nikkei, which lost 266.43 points Thursday, had dropped 2,166.46 points in the first four days of the week - or about 8.3 percent of its value.

The Tokyo Stock Price Index of all major shares slipped 0.10 points to 1,845.93, following a 14.05-point loss Thursday.

Volume was an estimated 440 million shares, up from 389.78 million Thursday.

The Nikkei began the day lower and was down 314.03 points by midday, before rebounding on hopes that the rising yen will help offset higher oil prices.

Rumors of a possible breakthrough in the Persian Gulf crisis helped the rebound, brokers said.

The Japanese currency surged to an 11-month high of 140.25 yen against the dollar Friday, an increase which is expected to harm Japanese exports.

Analysts, however, were doubtful the market would be able to retain its upward momentum.

''A lot of people think the market looks bearish for the next six months '' said analyst Christopher Schreiber of the New Japan Securities Co. ''We haven't seen anything like a selling climax yet.''

Elsewhere in Asia, share prices scored modest gains on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange in thin trading.

The key Hang Seng index gained 15.06 points to 3,047.91 on rumors that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had fled to Libya, traders said.

The rumor, although groundless, helped the index rebound from its losses earlier in the day to end on a small advance.

Gains were modest and centered on the commercial, industrial and utility sectors. The rest of the market was virtually unchanged with major investors remaining on the sidelines.

In Singapore, share prices finished lower in moderate trading with late bargain hunting bringing some activity to a dull session.

The Straits Times Industrial Index dipped 7.80 to 1238.76.

The All Singapore Index lost 2.59 to end at 347.98.

Volume was a very thin 34.06 million units.

Analysts said the afternoon rally in Tokyo did not influence Singapore.

''Investors in Singapore are more cautious then their counterparts in Tokyo,'' an analyst said.

''I doubt very much the market can pull itself up from the grasp of the bears,'' a broker said.

Gainers were Polytek, Khong Guan Flour, United Engineer, Haw Par, Bukit Sembawang, and Fraser and Neave Ordinary.

Losers were Singapore Airline (Foreign), Magnum Corp., Develoment Bank of Singapore (Foreign), Far East Shipping, Sembawang Shipyard, and Overseas Union Enterprise.

Share prices on the Sydney Stock Exchange ended lower slightly in a lackluster session.

The All Ordinaries Index closed down a mere 1.9 point to 1478.6.

Turnover was a thin 148 million shares.

Brokers said investors were cautiously monitoring trading in Tokyo in the absence of major developments in Australia.

Prices began the day lower, following Tokyo's morning decline.

But an afternoon rebound helped the market erase most of its earlier losses on hopes for lower interest rates in Australia and firmer gold and oil prices.

BHP led the oil issues, boosted by higher oil prices, to gain 15 cents to $11. Woodside was up 6 cents to $3.42, and Santos rose 6 cents to $5.12.

A softer Australian dollar helped some metal miners, with CRA gaining 5 cents to $11. But WMC fell 1 cent to $4.97, and MIM was down 2 cents to $2.22.

Disappointing profit results pressured the top industrials. News Corp. fell 10 cents to $11, Westpac was down 4 cents to $4.56, while Brambles rose 5 cents to $13.35.

OKLAHOMA CITY (SEPT. 7) UPI - An Oklahoma death row inmate has lost two more rounds in his court effort to escape execution early Monday.

The Oklahoma Supreme Court, in a 7-0 decision Thursday, refused to order a clemency hearing for Charles Troy Coleman, 43, who would become the first inmate executed in Oklahoma since 1966.

Attorney General Robert Henry said the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver also denied Coleman's emergency motion for a stay of execution. The motion sought a 30-day stay so Coleman could appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Unless he is granted a reprieve, Coleman is to die by drug injection at 12:02 a.m. Monday at the state penitentiary in McAlester.

Coleman was convicted of the Feb. 9, 1979, shotgun slaying of John Seward of Muskogee. Seward and his wife, Roxie, were killed at the home of Seward's sister, east of Muskogee. Coleman was not tried for Roxie Seward's death.

Authorities said the Sewards apparently surprised Coleman during a burglary at the relative's home and were marched into the basement and shot.

Mandy Welch, a public defender who represents Coleman, has said she will ask the U.S. Supreme Court to grant a stay of execution and review a Wednesday decision by the 10th Circuit Court, which refused Coleman's request for a rehearing of its decision not to issue a stay.

The U.S. Supreme Court has rejected Coleman's appeals five times.

Coleman's case has been heard more than 20 times by five different courts.

If the Supreme Court agrees to hear Coleman's appeal, the scheduled execution could be delayed or stayed. If the court refuses to hear the appeal or does not act upon it, Coleman will be executed.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Stock prices were lower at midday on the London International stock exchange Friday in moderate trading.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index was down 9.3 points to 2,111.6 at midday. The narrower top 30 industrial average was down 7.6 points to 1,632.3 at midday and volume was about 192.8 million shares.

Traders said the FT-SE 100 appeared to show some strength above the 2,100-point level, but investors' hopes for a more bullish market were dampened by Chancellor of the Exchequer John Major's statement denying that Britain would soon enter the Exchange Rate Mechanism of the European Monetary System.

Major dealt a further blow to the market by saying interest rates will not come down soon in Britain. Investors had hoped lower interest rates, needed to give a new lift to the sluggish British economy, would help the stock market.

The real estate and construction sectors remained very weak, following poor financial results released earlier this week by major homebuilding companies, including Wimpey.

Hammersons fell 42 cents to $10.75, Trafalgar House dropped 25 cents to $4.12, and P&O lost 40 cents to $8.6 on negative sentiment ahead of the company's next results to be released Tuesday.

Losers included Associated British Foods, down 30 cents to $7.72, and Lasmo lost 10 cents to $9.31.

BEIRUT, LEBANON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Most of the 16 Shiites imprisoned in Kuwait on terrorism charges and whose fate was linked to that of two U.S. hostages held in Lebanon have been handed over to Iran following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, a Lebanese magazine said Friday.

The Ash Shiraa magazine, which broke the Iran-Contra scandal, said most of the 16 Shiites, members of the Iranian-backed Islamic Jihad, are now in Iran.

The 16 included two Lebanese, six Iraqis and eight Kuwaitis of Iranian origin. They were serving different sentences in Kuwait for attempting to bomb the U.S. and French embassies and Kuwait's oil refineries.

Imprisonment of the 16 is widely cited as one of the factors triggering a wave of abductions of Westerners in Lebanon.

The Islamic Jihad, a radical group that claimed responsibility for kidnapping U.S. citizens Terry Anderson and Thomas Sutherland, had demanded the release of the 16 prisoners in exchange for freeing the two U.S. captives. The government of Kuwait had rejected these conditions.

Ash Shiraa said some of the 16 escaped on the first day of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, and one showed up in his native Lebanese village of Yater, 10 miles south of Beirut. The remaining 15 were handed over to Iran by Iraqi, the magazine said.

Abdel Aziz Krayem, a Lebanese Shiite who said he was held at the same prison as those whose release Islamic Jihad demanded, told United Press International last month the actual number of Shiites convicted was 17, not 16.

Krayem, who has returned to his home village of Yater, was serving 15-year-term in the Kuwaiti prison for masterminding the bombing of water and electricity companies.

Previous reports said when the Iraqi Army invaded Kuwait, it seized the 16 prisoners and took them to Baghdad.

PARIS (SEPT. 7) UPI - A group of employees for a French armsmaker in Iraq have been rounded up and taken to a Baghdad hotel after vainly seeking refuge at the French embassy, company and diplomatic sources said Friday.

A foreign ministry official in Paris said 16 French nationals with the firm Thomson were taken Thursday to the Melia Mansour Hotel, which officials said is the point of departure for hostages sent to strategic sites to be used as sheilds against attack by the U.S.-led multinational force deployed in the region.

''This brings to nearly 60 of our compatriots who have been detained at the Melia Mansour or taken to other destinations that we don't know,'' the spokesman said.

A spokesman for Thomson in Paris said 14 of the employees, after learning of the order, sought refuge in the French embassy in Baghdad.

''Our employees were first taken to the Hotel Rashid in Baghdad,'' the company official said. ''On Thursday, Iraqi security forces came to move them to the Melia Mansour, which did not please them because it's the site from which foreigners have been taken to strategic sites. Also, communications, communications are freer at the Rashid.''

The Thomson spokesman said the employees went to the embassy to seek help ''but after discussing the matter, they realized there was no way out because the French embassy like the other Western embassies are not equipped to take them in except for very short periods. So they gave up.''

The company declined to say whether other employees remained in Iraq or Kuwait. Earlier this week, the president of the French aeronautic and space industry association, Henri Martre, estimated that 64 French nationals working in the sector remained trapped in the two nations.

In a related development, French officials said 50 Kuwaiti children who were vacationing in the French Alps when their country was overrun would be admitted to French schools next week.

Several Kuwaiti families had been vacationing in the area of Divonne-les-Bains near the Swiss border, officials said.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 7) UPI - Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz would be welcome for more talks with Mikhail Gorbachev only if he brings to Moscow new proposals for solving the Persian Gulf crisis, the Soviet president's spokesman said Friday.

Kremlin Press Secretary Vitaly Ignatenko made it clear there was no meeting of minds Wednesday when Gorbachev and Aziz held talks in the Soviet capital.

Ignatenko told reporters ''each side stuck to its point of view'' about Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of Kuwait during an oil and border dispute.

Ignatenko said Aziz told Gorbachev he would like to return to Moscow for more discussions after Gorbachev's Sunday summit with President Bush.

But the Soviet spokesman, in Helsinki before Gorbachev's scheduled arrival Saturday evening, indicated Aziz's request was not greeted warmly.

''If he will have something new to say to the Soviet leadership, then such a (return) visit would be useful,'' Ignatenko said.

Following Aziz's meeting with Gorbachev the Iraqi foreign minister acknowledged ''considerable differences'' between the one-time allies, but he praised the Soviet Union, saying: ''Our Soviet friends are attentive.''

Ignatenko said the Soviet Union was ''not trying to discourage our conversation partners'' and ''the Soviet leadership and Mikhail Gorbachev are using every possibility for meetings on a serious level with those who have been drawn into the (Gulf) conflict.''

But with little agreement to show from Aziz's visit or an earlier trip by the Iraqi deputy prime minister, Ignatenko suggested Moscow's patience is ebbing.

Asked directly whether Gorbachev had agreed to see Aziz again, Ignatenko pointedly responded: ''I told you only that Aziz suggested it would be useful to meet.''

Aziz denied reports he had brought Gorbachev a message from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to deliver to Bush at their Helsinki meeting.

There is widespread speculation Bush will ask Gorbachev to support a Saudi-based U.S. strike against Iraq if Washington feels such direct military action is necessary.

Iraq's aggression against Kuwait has seriously harmed its longstanding alliance with the Soviet Union, which has supported five U.N. resolutions against Baghdad, including the most recent which allows limited use of force to enforce a trade blockade.

At the same time, Moscow has appeared much more willing than Washington or other Western governments to consider Iraq's demand to view the present gulf crisis within a larger context of conflict in the Middle East.

The Soviet Union has long called for an international conference on the Middle East, and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said earlier this week the current crisis had magnified the need for such a gathering.

Ignatenko, however, said Moscow, despite Baghdad's urgings, does not see a direct link between any end to Iraq's occupation of Kuwait and similar ends to the Israeli presence in the occupied territories or to Syria's military involvement in Lebanon.

But the Kremlin spokesman added: ''Of course, insofar as this (Helsinki summit) is a meeting at the highest level, and the gulf crisis is the most serious problem today, the conversation will not only be within the context of the Persian Gulf. It will probably be a very broad discussion about all positions in the Middle East.''

BANGKOK, THAILAND (SEPT. 7) UPI - China, in a national day message to Vietnam, has called for the ''early restoration'' of relations with its former communist ally, the official Vietnam News Agency reported Friday.

''China and Vietnam are two close neighbours and their two peoples have had time-honored friendship,'' the agency quoted a message from Chinese President Yang Shangkun as saying.

''We sincerely wish for an early restoration and development of the Sino-Vietnamese relations,'' said the message issued on Vietnam's national day Sunday.

Vietnam has long sought better relations with its giant neighbor, but has been rebuffed until recently.

Relations between the two countries, close allies during the Vietnam War, became increasingly strained at the end of the war and broke down completely after Vietnam's 1978 invasion of Cambodia, which ousted the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge government.

In 1979, Chinese forces invaded Vietnam in a month-long incursion that was said to be intended to ''teach Vietnam a lesson'' for invading Cambodia.

Disputes have continued over offshore islands and their hilly border, but relations have improved as both leaderships have struggled to maintain communism in the face of setbacks in Eastern Europe.

Cambodia remains a major obstacle to improved relations, but the leaders of the Vietnamese-backed government in Cambodia and the Chinese- supported resistance are gathering in Jakarta this week for a new round of peace talks to discuss a U.N. peace plan.

GENEVA (SEPT. 7) UPI - The number of cases of AIDS reported to the World Health Organization rose by nearly 10,000 in August to reach a cumulative total of 283,000 cases, the United Nations agency reported Friday.

The monthly increase, one of the largest recorded in recent years, compared with a monthly figure of 7,327 in July, WHO officials said. They said the sharp increase was due to fresh information received from the Africa, America and Europe.

WHO officials have consistently said that a true figure for victims of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, or AIDS, worldwide is probably twice or even three times the cumulative figure available. One of the problems of publishing accurate figures is a lack of regular reporting from African countries, WHO said.

In the August figures, Libya reported its first case of AIDS. The WHO has been collecting aids statistics since 1980. At least half the cases reported to it have resulted in death, the agency says.

The United States, which provides monthly statistics, reported 3,427 new cases for a cumulative total of 140,822, accounting for slightly less than 50 percent of the total.

Other countries reporting a high incidence of the disease were Uganda, with 12,444 cases; Zaire, with 11,732 cases; Brazil, which revised its March figure upward to 11,070; Kenya, which provided new figures in August of 9,139; West Germany, with 9,718; and Tanzania, with 7,128, a new figure in August.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 7) UPI - The FBI and police Friday investigated the likelihood that the car-bombing of Teamsters union official Lucien Senese was mob-related.

Senese, 34, Oak Brook, was in critical condition in the burn unit at Loyola Medical Center in Maywood.

A Loyola spokesman said the patient was stable but refused to reveal the extent of his injuries. Police said Senese was burned over 50 percent of his body when transferred to Loyola late Thursday.

Senese's car exploded on a West Side street Thursday, the bomb apparently wired to his ignition.

Senese, the secretary-treasurer of Local 703, was in line to assume the local presidency vacated by his father, Dominic, who was ordered by a federal judge to stay out of union affairs because of suspected mob ties.

''It appears to be a gangland or a mob-style assassination attempt,'' FBI spokesman Bob Long said.

''It could very well be tied to someone trying to wrest control of the union away from the Seneses,'' said John Jemilo, head of the Chicago Crime Commission. ''It's reasonable to assume that it may be some other members within organized crime.''

The victim's brother, Joseph, is an organizer for Local 703 and it was speculated he would have taken over the secretary-treasurer post once his brother assumed the presidency.

Long said the FBI is investigating the possibility the car bombing may be linked to a failed 1988 assassination attempt against Dominic Senese, who survived a shotgun blast to the face. Long said suspects from the 1988 incident, which remains unsolved, would be questioned about Thursday's bombing.

The car bomb destroyed the rear of Senese's white Buick. Senese, his clothing aflame, managed to get out of the car and run down the street, stripping the burning clothing from his body as he went. The flames were smothered by two neighbors who covered him with blankets and a jacket.

Police described the bomb as one of ''high-order velocity'' and very powerful.

A young woman was injured by flying debris and treated at the University of Illinois Hospital for two puncture wounds. A man was rescued from the second floor of a nearby building that caught fire after the blast.

The car was registered to Produce Carrier Local 703 and the blast sent glass, metal and debris flying 150 feet, police said. Windows of a nearby vehicle were shattered.

PASADENA, TX (SEPT. 7) UPI - The charred remains of Gilley's Club, the sprawling honky-tonk that was the Mecca of the ''Urban Cowboy'' fad in 1980, will be torn down within 30 days.

The Pasadena Building and Standards Commission ordered the remnants of the arson-gutted club demolished after deeming it unsafe.

''The building is unsafe because of the damage,'' said Fire Marshal Bill Yearout. ''It's a danger to the community.''

A 16-year-old boy has been charged with setting a July 5 fire at the club. Since then, curious fans have slipped past doors posted with ''Dangerous Building'' signs and gathered charred souvenirs of the once- bustling honky-tonk.

It has not been decided who will pay for the demolition.

The 60,000-square-foot club, complete with a mechanical bull and rodeo arena, has been embroiled in a legal dispute between singer Mickey Gilley and his former partner, Sherwood Cryer.

Gilley sued Cryer in 1987, claiming the businessman had cheated him out of assets earned by the corporation they had formed. A jury awarded Gilley a $17 million judgment now under appeal.

Whether Gilley pays for the demolition is contingent on a judge turning the title of the property over to the singer Monday, said David Sacks, Gilley's attorney.

''The demolition will be set once the judge places the property in their hands,'' Sacks said Thursday. He predicted demolition work on the club could begin next week.

Gilley has not been available for comment.

Cryer, who had hoped to reopen the club, said he was disappointed with the commission's order to raze the building.

''If I had won the appeal, I would have tried to rebuild ... and reopen the club again,'' he said. ''Why the city of Pasadena is destroying a tourist attraction that's been there for many years, I don't know.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The U.S. civilian jobless rate climbed to 5.6 percent in August - the highest level in two years - as more factory and construction workers lost their jobs, the Labor Department said Friday.

''It's not particularly good news for the working guy,'' economist Cynthia Latta said at the forecasting firm DRI/McGraw-Hill in Lexington, Mass. ''Jobs are disappearing.''

Many analysts had expected the jobless rate to hold steady at July's 5.5 percent after jumping from 5.2 percent in June.

''Employment continued to be weak in August and unemployment rose slightly '' the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics said.

''Job declines occurred throughout the goods-producing sector,'' the report said. ''These losses were only partly offset by small gains in the service-producing sector.''

Total employment edged down 75,000 in August over July as the Census Bureau trimmed its ranks of temporary workers. A government spokesman said the 5.6 percent jobless rate was the highest since a 5.6 percent showing in August 1988.

''The unemployment numbers are adjusting to the slow economic growth that has been occurring,'' said Robert Dederick, chief economist at Northern Trust in Chicago. ''A creep-ahead economy isn't one where employment goes higher.''

Dederick predicted the civilian jobless rate could near 6 percent by December and that inflation could reach 5.5 percent to 6 percent on higher energy prices in the wake of Iraq's conquest of Kuwait's oil fields.

''It's going to be the worst of both worlds,'' he said.

The data in the report was adjusted to reflect seasonal factors.

The Labor Department said the number of manufacturing jobs declined about 45,000 last month, with the electronic equipment and transportation equipment industries being the hardest hit.

''Since reaching a post-recession peak in January 1989, the number of factory jobs has declined 455,000,'' the report said.

Latta warned more bad news lies ahead.

''Manufacturing is suffering a double-whammy,'' she said. ''Increases in productivity eliminate the need for workers and consumer spending is sluggish.''

Employment in the construction industry, meanwhile, continued its recent slide, dropping by about 40,000 jobs in August, for a three-month loss of nearly 100,000 jobs.

Mining, which had added 60,000 jobs since last July, lost 7,000 in August.

In the service sector of the economy most of the job increase was in health services, which has been a strong performer for the past 12 months, the government said.

Counting military personnel, August's total unemployment stood at 5.5 percent vs. 5.4 percent in July.

The Labor Department said the average weekly hours of work for private businesses held steady in August at 34.5 hours, but increased to 41 hours from 40.9 hours for the manufacturing sector, while manufacturing overtime edged up to 3.9 hours from 3.8 hours.

In the public sector, state and local government's added about 60,000 jobs in August, but overall government employment fell by 65,000 jobs with the Census Bureau layoffs.

The unemployment rate for teenagers increased to 16.7 percent in August from 16.3 percent, while the jobless rate for blacks shot up to 11.8 percent in August from 11.3 percent in July. But the rate for Hispanics inched down to 7.8 percent last month from 7.9 percent.

Before leaving for Finland, Bush plans to sit in on the start of a weekend budget summit between White and congressional negotiators. Both sides agree on the size of the deficit cut for next year, but still have NOT agreed on the specifics needed to achieve it. Bush says ''time is running out.''

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - President Bush expressed optimism Friday at the resumption of White House-congressional talks on how to make the tough choices for cutting costs, raising revenues and reducing the multibillion-dollar deficit.

''I think there is a new spirit of optimism that we can get an afriement. It's going to take compromise, but I want to thank the leaders on both sides of the aisle for what I understand is a good mood now towards getting final agreement,'' Bush said.

Bush spent less than 30 minutes a Andrews Air Force Base in suburban Maryland to open the weekend budget talks. He was leaving later in the day for a meeting in Helsinki, Finland, with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

Bush noted ''big differences remain'' between the administration and Congress on budget positions, but he said he would tell the congressional leaders ''that I remain committed to a budget agreement.''

He reaffirmed the administration's goals of $50 billion in savings next year and $500 billion over five years.

''Our people are, I'd say, somewhat optimistic that this can be hammered out in a very short period of time, and again, the congressmen have committed to staying with this and I think that's good,'' Bush said.

Negotiators have agreed on the size of the deficit cut they want to reach next year, but during their weekend meeting they face hard choices about how to achieve that end.

Under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law, failure to produce an accord on the deficit by Oct. 1 would trigger nearly $105 billion in automatic spending cuts for the coming year, to be split between defense and domestic programs.

The law exempts certain programs from such cuts, such as Social Security and most entitlement programs for the poor. Reductions in Medicare benefits cannot exceed 2 percent and Bush has exempted military personnel.

Nevertheless, federal agencies have warned of massive disruptions in basic functions of the government, as well as widespread furloughs of federal employees, should the automatic cuts take effect.

Congressional leaders and administration officials have virtually ruled out the possibility of trimming the deficit by $105 billion next year.

Instead, a consensus has emerged among the budget negotiators to try to cut the deficit by $50 billion in fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and by $500 billion over the next five years.

Because these goals fall short of the current Gramm-Rudman targets, the law would have to be changed to accommodate a new budget-balancing timetable. The White House budget office estimates the federal deficit at $168.8 billion, which under Gramm-Rudman must be reduced to $64 billion in fiscal 1991.

Democratic leaders Thursday reaffirmed their commitment to the $50-billion-$500-billion goal, but they scrambled throughout the day to come up with their own formula for reaching those targets.

''The hope is that both sides will have plans to present,'' said House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who is chairman of the talks.

A $50 billion deficit cut is still twice the size of the largest previous one-year deficit reduction - a cut of $25 billion achieved in late 1987 following the stock market crash.

There were reports in recent weeks that Democrats might seek a smaller first-year reduction because of the flagging economy and new costs associated with the crisis in the Persian Gulf.

''I was happy to see the Democrats have committed themselves to going back to the original game plan,'' House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois told reporters following a GOP budget session Thursday.

The summiteers have set Monday as their unofficial deadline for reaching a settlement, which would likely combine deep cuts in spending with tax increases.

They planned to remain cloistered at Andrews for the entire weekend - some even spending the night on the base - away from reporters, lobbyists and other distractions on Capitol Hill.

Both sides expressed determination to emerge from the summit with an accord that would win broad support in Congress and the president's approval.

''We are prepared to do what it takes, whatever it takes, to reach an agreement,'' Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine said Thursday.

''If we don't get a budget agreement, we're in real trouble,'' said Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas.

Key elements of a budget plan the administration had been contemplating were leaked to reporters in late July by Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., a budget negotiator.

Among those were a $10,000 cap on the amount of state and local taxes that could be claimed as a federal income tax deduction, a revenue-raising measure aimed primarily at higher-income brackets, and a $7.2 billion increase in alcohol taxes.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Rumors Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had been ousted in a coup caused oil markets to open sharply lower Friday, but prices rebounded in early morning trading as the rumors were discounted.

"Rumors that popped up on the Tokyo Stock Exchange resulted in a morning of self-doubt on oil markets, but the buyers are coming out again," said Peter Gignoux of Shearson Lehman Hutton's London office.

"Prices moved down on light volume into a vacuum and are now coming back on reasonable volume," the trader said. "The markets needed a breather. They've had the breather and its stimulated some buying," he added.

Crude oil prices on the New York Mercantile Exchange, the world's largest oil trading exchange, have risen $5.51 a barrel - or 21.2 percent - over the previous five trading sessions on fears of a war breaking out in the Persian Gulf crisis triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

But as a result of the coup rumors and their effect on earlier trading on overseas markets, the benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery opened the Merc Friday at $30.50 a barrel, down 93 cents from Thursday's close. It had moved back up to $30.67 a barrel in midmorning trading.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery opened down 2.32 cents a gallon at 92.75 cents a gallon, but by midmorning had rebounded 1.65 cents to 94.40 cents a gallon.

October home heating oil started the day down 2.44 cents at 85.80 cents a gallon, but had recovered to 86.10 cents a gallon by mid-morning.

On the European spot market, the United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped primarily to the Far East - was down 92 cents at $26.88 a barrel. Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent had fallen $1.50 to $30.15 a barrel. On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI had lost 75 cents to $30.70 a barrel.

In the Gulf, matters were relatively quiet. A chartered Iraqi Airways airliner carrying 120 U.S. women and children stranded in Kuwait arrived in Baghdad en route to the Jordanian capital Amman, diplomats in the region said.

"We can confirm that about 120 American women and children arrived in Baghdad from Kuwait today," one diplomat said. "We hope they will then go on to Amman."

TAIF, SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 7) UPI - Iraqi forces have stolen about $400 million worth of gold and $1 billion in banknotes from occupied Kuwait's central bank, but the looting will not benefit Baghdad because of the U.N.

embargo, senior Kuwaiti officials said Friday.

''The gold, the value to them is considerably less than its face value,'' said Kuwaiti Finance Minister Ali Khalifa Sabah said of the lost $400 million in gold. ''If they sell it, from where are they going to get the cash? The payments for it will be forfeit.''

During a briefing after Secretary of State James Baker met with exiled Kuwaiti officials, Sabah and Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al Ahmed al Sabah provided reporters with details of financial conditions and losses as a result of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. The government- in-exile has made the Saudi resort town of Taif its headquarters.

In assessing the financial situation, the finance minister said the $1 billion in banknotes were worthless to Iraq. Soon after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait, Baghdad revalued the Kuwaiti dinar to the Iraqi dinar, cutting it to one-twelfth of its value.

He also said the central bank, which some reports indicate may have been mined, did not have large amounts of foreign currency and both officials said they were not aware of any other large-scale assets left in the kingdom, such as jewels or other valuables.

''Our assets are not frozen in the same sense that the Iraqi assets are,'' the foreign minister told reporters. ''In the case of Iraq, they were frozen as a punishment and as an inducement for them (to negotiate).

''In the case of Kuwait, they were frozen only to protect them against the Iraqi occupiers,'' al Sabah said. ''However, various governments all over the world are giving us full management and access to these assets.''

CHICAGO (SEPT. 7) UPI - Overnight rain and the prospect of more rain during the weekend pressured grain and soybean futures.

Midmorning prices were lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Bearish production estimates from a private crop analyst along with positioning ahead of the weekend contributed to the losses in corn and soybeans.

The five-day weather outlook called for above-normal rainfall in the Corn Belt and normal amounts of precipitation in the southern states. Rainfall amounts overnight generally were less than one inch.

The corn and soybean production figures from Sparks Commodities are higher than the Agriculture Department estimated in August. The September report from the USDA will be released next Wednesday.

Wheat prices also were lower on profit-taking, along with the lack of export sales.

Basis levels were mostly lower.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 2.40 off 3; Dec 2.34 3/4 off 3; Mar 2.43 3/4 off 2 3/4.

Soybeans Sep 6.11 1/2 off 5 3/4; Nov 6.26 off 5 3/4; Jan 6.39 1/2 off 5 1/2; Mar 6.52 1/2 off 6 1/4.

Wheat Sep 2.63 1/4 off 2 1/2; Dec 2.79 1/4 off 3 1/4; Mar 2.91 1/2 off 2 3/4.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The 12-ounce restriction on mail sent to U.S. servicemen and women in Saudi Arabia and the Persian Gulf region has been lifted, defense officials announced Friday.

''The military postal support system in Saudi Arabia and sufficient airlift capabilities are now in place to handle the increased volume of mail,'' the U.S. Central Command said in a statement released at the Pentagon.

''All classes of mail up to the maximum weights allowed will now be accepted,'' it said. ''Currently, it is taking an average of seven days for first-class mail to reach Saudi Arabia.''

Mail to particular servicemen, identified by name, rank and service number should be sent directly to the appropriate Army Post Office (APO) or Fleet Post Office (FPO) number, obtainable from the headquarters of specific units.

If the public wishes to send mail to U.S. servicemen in general, not to any one particular person by name, the following addresses have been established.

For members of the Army, Air Force and Marines in Saudi Arabia, send to:

Any servicemember Operation Desert Shield APO New York 09848-0006

For members of the Navy and Marines aboard ships in the region, send to:

LONDON (SEPT. 7) UPI - British Defense Secretary Tom King opened a second day of emergency debate in the House of Commons Friday by announcing more British troops will be deployed to join the U.S.-led multinational force in the Persian Gulf.

''We do believe that some additional forces will be needed and their composition is under consideration,'' King said, deferring questions on the number and type of additional troops being sent in response to Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent occupiation of Kuwait.

Primd Ainister Margaret Thatcher had indicated more troops would be deployed on the opening day of Parliament's first extraordinary debate since Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands in 1982.

Left-wing opponents of Britain's involvement in the gulf have won a commitment from the Commons for a vote at the conclusion of the debate. They planned to call for an assurance that Britain will not go to war without specific authorization from the U.N. Security Council.

King said the British naval and air force presence in the gulf already is costing the country $1.89 million a day. In addition to the operating cost the tab for deploying the 5,000 troops and their equipment was $142 million.

The deployment of reinforcements is influenced by a variety of factors, he said.

''We are considering this matter, but against the background of some of the figures that I have already given to the House, against the possible threat that still exists, against the overall imperative of insuring that there is no further aggression, and that the defensive shield of Saudi Arabia and of the neighboring gulf states is insured, and to insure that the effective action that we are taking through the United Nations is successful,'' King said.

Labor's defense spokesman MP Martin O'Neill said the gulf conflict was potentially the most serious crisis since World War II.

''Our troops are literally going to have to sweat it out,'' O'Neill said. ''It will be a game of nerves. We will have to wait until Saddam attacks or is replaced. It will be a waiting game.''

About 250 British women and children arrived at London's Gatwick Airport from the gulf early Friday, the biggest group to get out since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait five weeks ago. Aboard the British Airways jumbo jet were 78 children and 20 babies. Most of them were in the bus convoy that left Kuwait for Baghdad Tuesday.

They were relieved to be home but also expressed some anger at Thatcher's hard-line attacks on Saddam.

''Margaret Thatcher's going on and on about it. Let those women go before she had a go at Suddam. We were waiting for him to change his mind,'' said Alison Bouhamed. About 2,000 Britons remain in Kuwait.

Other women told of hiding in cupboards to avoid being found by Iraqi troops.

The Foreign Office said another 140 to 150 Britons were in Baghdad applying for exit visas.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd planned to fly to Tokyo Saturday to discuss the gulf conflict with his counterpart and the prime minister. He was expected to ask Japan to come up with more financial support for the Western military effort than the $1 billion Tokyo already has promised.

SEATTLE (SEPT. 7) UPI - Alaska Airlines and Horizon Air will boost ticket prices 4.7 percent Oct. 1, putting Alaska Air Group out front in the industry's second round of fare hikes since the Persian Gulf crisis began.

But the fare increasd S the second in a month for Alaska - is a calculated gamble that could also place the Seattle-based regional carrier in a difficult position.

Like other airlines, Alaska is being hammerred by the soaring cost of jet fuel and desperately needs to offset that cost. Fuel prices have escalated 47 percent since July 1, up about 34 cents a gallon. Alaska's airplanes burn about 18 million gallons of fuel monthly, which means Alaska is taking a $6 million-a-month hit from increased fuel costs.

For the second quarter, Alaska's latest reporting period, the company earned a profit of about $9.6 million.

But Alaska is also more vulnerable than some of its rivals in the fierce battle for the lucrative West Coast air corridor between Seattle and Mexico.

As a regional carrier, it can't spread out the impact of fare increases the way big national airlines like United, American and Delta can. So boosting prices could cost Alaska a critical market share and prove even more damaging than swallowing what could be a temporary burden of rising jet fuel costs.

United and Alaska - along with most of the rest of the domestic airlines in the United States - boosted fares by 5.3 percent just last week, citing the increase in jet fuel costs. With its second boost, however, Alaska is ahead of the pack and is warily looking over its shoulder to see what the others will do.

Ray Vingo, Alaska's vice president for finance, said Thursday that if other carriers don't follow Alaska's lead, Alaska will scuttle its plans.

''We probably would not stay out there for more than a week (from now) if we don't see some action,'' Vingo said.

Last month, Alaska and several other carriers proposed 10 percent fare hikes to cover fuel costs. But when all of its competitors didn't go along Alaska pulled back to a 5.3 percent increase.

But Vingo said Alaska expects that other airlines will increase their fares soon. A 4.7 percent fare increase would boost the cost of Alaska's round-trip ticket between Seattle and Los Angeles by about $15 to $314, Vingo said.

Bill Whitlow, an analyst with Dain, Bosworth Inc. in Seattle, said the impact of fuel increases has already caused him to scale back his 1990 earnings projection for Alaska.

''The magnitude of a $6 million-a-month cost increase on a company this size is pretty severe,'' Whitlow said.

The impact of jet fuel costs hits Alaska especially hard because the company counts heavily on summer traffic to maintain its strong annual earnings. Last year, Whitlow said, Alaska registered half of its earnings during the third quarter from July to September.

''I think Alaska is really hurting and nobody else will step forward to propose raising fares again,'' Whitlow said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Hoping to run faster and look better despite the risk of serious side-effects, more than a quarter of a million American teenagers have used muscle-building anabolic steroids, a reports said Friday.

About 4.7 percent of boys and 1.3 percent of girls from the 1989 high school graduating class used the drugs, according to a report released by the inspector general's office of the Department of Health and Human Services. That means some 262,000 teenagers - about 3 percent of that graduating class - experimented with or are still using steroids.

The study, which recommended that HHS develop a national education program to combat steroid use and urged further research into the matter, seemed to confirm earlier reports indicating widespread and increasing use of steroids by American youngsters.

Steroids, legal only if used with a doctor's prescription, are a synthetic derivative of the male hormone testosterone and are used to promote the growth of muscle bulk, strength and stamina.

Among the serious side-effects linked to steroids are: heart and liver disease, increased aggressiveness, hair loss, shrinkage of the testicles and sterility in men and the growth of facial and body hair and lowered voices in women.

The prime motivations for using steroids is improving physical appearance and improving sports ability, according to a second study that involved interviews of 72 users. A compelling desire among more than half the users surveyed was ''to be happier or like themselves better.''

However, 6 percent of the users said they were ''influenced or motivated'' to use steroids by their coaches.

HHS Secretary Louis Sullivan said the reports ''contain disturbing findings'' and said the government is ''determined to do our part to make the dangers known and to shut down the illegal steroid market.''

''I am very concerned that some adults who are charged with our young people's welfare might be passively accepting or even tacitly approving the use of these dangerous drugs,'' Sullivan said. ''Because of the insidious, short-term appeal of these drugs, it is essential that our teachers, coaches and others in contact with young athletes make extra efforts to present the very real health hazards that steroids hold.''

Legislation before Congress would stiffen penalties for distribution and use of steroids and would hold coaches and trainers criminally responsible for encouraging the use of the drugs.

The study used data from the National Institute on Drug Abuse and a survey of current and former users.

It concluded that the use of steroids is on the increase among both high school and junior high students and that users are starting earlier than ever. Fifty-three percent of users surveyed reported starting by age 16, with 85 percent starting by age 17. Experts say adolescents are more susceptible to health risks from steroids, as well as dramatic mood shifts attributed to the drug.

Users of the drugs to not seem to fall into a typical ''drug subculture,'' according to the report, quoting one researcher as saying, ''By looking at them, you wouldn't know they were steroid users; in fact, if I didn't know they look like the kind of guys I'd like my daughter to date.''

CAIRO, Egypt (SEPT. 7) UPI - Egypt's economy, suffering under the weight of massive debt, faces its worst labor force troubles with the return of thousands of unemployed, destitute workers fleeing Iraq and Iraqi-occupied Kuwait.

More than 1 million Egyptians - possibly 1.7 million by some estimates - were in the two countries when Iraqi troops rolled across the Kuwaiti border early Aug. 2. Slowly, thousands of them have made their way home through severe conditions lacking adequate food, water and accommodations.

They face more troubles back in Egypt despite words of encouragement from business and government officials.

''If 2 million Egyptians will be back again we are ready to take them,'' said Mohammed el Sayed, director-general of the Federation of Egyptian Chambers of Commerce.

But asked how severe a crisis Egypt faced, el Sayed, director- general since 1975 and a former Ministry of Finance advisor, acknowledged ''this is the most serious one concerning the labor force.''

The Persian Gulf crisis hit an Egypt with a weak economy that had been growing steadily worse for the last four to five years.

A study undertaken before the crisis by the International Labor Organization in Geneva indicated the labor situation in Egypt was ''extremely bad and likely to get worse,'' said Alan Richards, a professor of economics at American University in Cairo.

For unemployment to remain at its current level of roughly 10 percent during the next 10 years, 6 million new jobs would have to be created, Richards said. The return of 1 million unemployed, mostly poor rural laborers would immediately hit another estimated 5 to 6 million relatives of the workers, not even taking in the ripple effect on the economy, he said.

Boutros Ghali, state minister for foreign affairs, recently estimated Egypt's losses from the gulf crisis would be at $1.9 billion a year. The losses comprised roughly $1 billion upwards in remittances by Egyptians returning from Kuwait and Iraq, $500 million in declined tourism revenues and a $400 million drop in Suez Canal revenues.

But other estimates indicate more than $2.2 billion annual losses in foreign currency earnings, in addition to the cost to re-employ workers.

Egypt's four government banks also have incurred considerable losses because of the government's decision to allow Kuwaitis and Egyptians working in Kuwait to exchange their Kuwaiti dinars. The value of the dinar dropped from about 10 Egyptian pounds to less than one pound.

At the same time, Egypt faces talks with the International Monetary Fund on its foreign debts, which stand at $50 billion - the highest in the Third World in proportion to the size of the country's economic output. Conventional wisdom maintains the foreign debt is equal to the total capital owned by Egyptians abroad but nobody knows for sure.

The IMF dispatched a senior official to Egypt on an urgent mission in connection with an agreement under negotiations with President Hosni Mubarak's government. IMF sources told Egypt's Middle East News Agency Friday an important round of talks is expected between Egypt and the organization Sept. 20 in the United States.

The agreement would enable Egypt to reschedule its debts and therefore ask for the aid of creditor countries and international organizations to help more finance development projects.

Egypt consistently has had trouble with attempting to gain more financial assistance, but its leading role in the fight against Saddam Hussein's Iraq has provided it with political collateral.

The United States also has indicated its willingness to forgive $7.1 million worth of debts and could provide more leverage in urging a favorable IMF agreement for Egypt.

''In this complicated game of musical chairs, the chairs have been rearranged slightly for the Egyptians and the Americans are rearranging the chairs for them,'' Richards said.

Fears that economic troubles could spark political turmoil also have been played down by Western diplomats monitoring Egypt.

''I see no sign that people in the streets are complaining of financial hardship,'' said one Western diplomat based in Cairo. ''There is the general expectation by the people they will be helped by the government. There is a general expectation by the government they will be helped by their friends.''

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Summer vacation ended Friday for thousands of students in California, Michigan and Illinois, but new teacher strikes loomed in other areas as walkouts affecting 5,200 educators and 84,000 students continued nationwide.

Classes resumed Friday in Michigan's Engadine school district and the Mount Zion district in Illinois, while students in the Darien district outside Chicago ended their vacation on Thursday.

Strikes moved into a third day for five other Michigan districts. The walkouts over wage and benefit grievances involved 1,937 teachers and 33,200 students in Troy, Saginaw, Gwinn, Cheboygan and St. Igance.

In Troy, a state-appointed mediator ordered a fact finder to seek a resolution to a walkout by more than 700 teachers that has idled 11,000 students in the suburban Detroit district. Negotiations broke off after union representatives rejected a proposal to put teachers back in classrooms Friday, said John Gierak, chief negotiator for the Troy School Board.

''The board has done all it can do to get teachers back in class,'' Gierak said after a 5 1/2-hour bargaining session. ''Parents and students should not be held hostage like this.''

Sid Dickstein, the chief negotiator for Troy's teachers, accused the school board of ''decimating the contract for no reason.''

Teachers in the Lewistown Grade School District in west-central Illinois struck Thursday after working without a contract for nearly a month. The strike involves 33 teachers and 600 students at two elementary schools.

Classes resumed in Darien, Ill., a day after a DuPage County judge ruled a school strike illegal because teachers did not give five days notice of their intention to strike as required by state law. The district's 110 teachers walked out Tuesday, extending summer vacation for 1,721 students.

Negotiations resumed Friday for Washington state's Lake Washington School District, where a walkout by 1,200 teachers idled 22,500 students, and the 9,100-student Mukilteo School District, where 470 teachers were on strike.

Schools in Fremont, Calif., kept their doors open as 1,200 teachers completed a two-day walkout and returned to classes Friday. The walkout was the fourth in six months for Fremont, which has 27,000 students in 42 schools.

In Rhode Island, 360 teachers in the North Kingstown school district ratified a new contract Friday, ending a strike that has kept 4,500 children home since Wednesday. Under the three-year contract, teachers will receive a 4 percent raise the first half of the first year; another 3 percent the second half; 6 percent the second year; and 6 1/4 percent the third, officials said.

The union ratified an agreement reached during a 16-hour bargaining session and reported for orientation sessions Friday. Schools will open Monday.

Teachers in two New Jersey districts defied back-to-work orders in a third day of picketing as teachers in a third district set a Monday strike deadline.

A strike by 303 teachers and 28 secretaries in Deptford Township has disrupted classes for 3,330 students. Substitute teachers were hired in Deptford and in the South Orange-Maplewood School District, where a strike by 390 teachers and 182 support staff affected 4,800 students.

In central New Jersey, Evesham Township school officials agreed to meet with teachers Sunday in an effort to head off a Monday morning strike.

Seven Pennsylvania school districts were on strike, involving 870 teachers and 10,611 students. Teachers in the Dover Area School District reached a tentative agreement after nearly 14 hours of talks Thursday, while 230 teachers in Laurel Highlands School District threatened to strike Monday.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 7) UPI - A week ago, Finns were discussing troubling developments in the Persian Gulf in between conversations about the weather and prospects for skiing.

But the Sept. 1 announcement of a superpower summit in Helsinki during the deteriorating gulf crisis changed this sleepy Nordic nation into a bustling beehive of activity as fashionable Finns feverishly prepared to be the focus of world attention.

By Friday, little was ready except the host's hopes and pride - and promises that by the summit's start, the needs of delegations and reporters would be fulfilled, the main actors would be safe and everything would be functioning like clockwork.

Finland's President Mauno Koivisto proudly told the nation the superpower choice of Helsinki as a venue came because of the country's neutrality and careful relation-building with both sides.

''I am extremely satisfied,'' the normally subdued Koivisto beamed.

Finland's police, after borrowing hundreds of vehicles and communications equipment from other forces said Friday it was ready for the job of guarding the two leaders. City hotels, after diplomatically ejecting non-summit guests, said all of the 1,000 Soviet and U.S. officials and 2,500 reporters and technicians had a place to stay.

Koivisto, a weathered international statesman, has more reasons than one to be happy to host the U.S. and Soviet leaders. Not only does the summit seem to herald unity in the burning issue of world politics, but it positively affects Finland's international position.

The choice of Finland as a venue for Sunday's summit seemed a calculated effort by both parties to underline the rapprochement between the world's two greatest powers and the atmosphere of cooperation that has developed in recent months.

It was in 1975 that Finland hopefully hosted the watershed meeting between European and North American nations which decided on a common European security, cooperation and human rights charter to bring East and West closer together.

A successful accord would improve not only European security, but also Finland's difficult position as a western halfway house for the Soviet Union with which the former Grand Duchy of the Russian czars fought two bloody wars.

Until the advent of Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985, and the subsequent, radical changes he instigated in Soviet society, little concrete was achieved either in European security or Finland's sensitive position.

But the unprecedented unanimity between the superpowers in condemning Saddam Hussein's Aug. 2 invasion and annexation of Kuwait, was seen by Finnish officials as auguring well for Finland and the final fulfillment of the goals of the security and cooperating process.

Saturday, Gorbachev and President Bush come to the country to lend credence to the tenets of the Helsinki Final Acts.

Meeting in Helsinki, 15 years after the signing of the acts, U.S.- Soviet relations seem finally to have reached the extended cooperation envisioned in the 1975 agreements.

As Bush and Gorbachev meet Sunday under the heavy cloud of the Persian Gulf crisis, America seems yet again in a position to promise aid to the Soviet Union in return for more outspoken Soviet support in its gulf actions.

In 1975, the United States conditioned arms control agreements on Soviet fulfillment of the human rights aspects of the Final Acts. Since 1985, Gorbachev has gone a long way to fulfill those promises and the United Statse has proved accommodating on arms control.

If, as expected, Gorbachev agrees more openly to support American and U.N. efforts to dislodge the Kremlin's former ally Iraq from Kuwait, U.S. economic help seemed likely to bless the Soviet leader.

The new era has deeply affected Finland and its previously enigmatic position in relation to America and the Soviet Union; and Sunday's summit here seems likely to finally bury the stigmatic term for appeasement - ''Finlandization.''

The only western nation to have a Treaty of Friendship, Cooperation and Mutual Assistance with the Soviet Union, Finland has always felt that its relations with the rest of the world were closely dictated by the temperature of the Cold War.

The rapid thaw in superpower relations has brought hope to the Finns that their careful, post-war balancing act will bear fruit and the country's neutrality will be more a position of choice than one of necessity to satisfy Soviet sensitivities.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (SEPT. 7) UPI - The United States needs cargo ships quickly to transport supplies to the Perisan Gulf and is disappointed over the small number provided by its NATO allies, a top U.S. official said Friday.

''We have a very large number of supplies to move across the Atlantic,'' said Richard Clarke, assistant U.S. secretary of state for politico-military affairs.

''We need ships relatively soon, and we are not entirely satisfied yet with the number of ships that have been provided us,'' Clarke said after briefing a special meeting of NATO ambassadors.

The United States on Monday asked its NATO allies for sealift and airlift help to transport troops and equipment from the United States to the Persian Gulf, but only Britain, Italy and Portugal have complied.

''If you look at it in terms of their lift support, it has not yet been what we'd like it to be,'' Clarke said.

He added, however, that ''a number of countries'' (which he did not name) are seeking approval from their governments of the U.S. request, ''and frankly we anticipate that more will be forthcoming shortly.''

Clarke said the United States seeks a ''substantial'' though classified number of cargo ships, some with ''roll-on-roll-off'' rapid loading systems, and a smaller number of wide-bodied 747 freighter aircraft.

''What we've requested is the direct role of ships and aircraft with their crews, at no cost, to be given to the U.S. transportation command for the indefinite future,'' probably for about a month, he said.

NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner, speaking at the end of a three-day visit to Czechoslovokia, said that while ''nearly all'' the Western allies were making ''a substantial contribution,'' to the U.S.- led military buildup in the Middle East, ''these can and should go further, and they will go.''

Woerner also told a news conference in Prague that only firmly enforced economic sanctions could force Iraq to leave Kuwait without a war.

''I think there is a chance of getting to our goal without war, but only under one condition, that the community of nations remain as solidarity (sic), as cohesive and as determined as they have been up to now,'' Woerner said.

European Community foreign ministers meeting Friday in Rome, meanwhile, decided ''in principle'' to provide emergency aid to Turkey, Jordan and Egypt, with the exact amount to be decided at subsequent meetings.

European allies of the United States have come under increased pressure in the past two weeks to assist the U.S. deployment in the gulf. Only Britain and France have made substantial military commitments, though several other countries have sent minesweepers and other support vessels to the region.

''I don't think the American public expects all the NATO countries to deploy ships to the region,'' Clarke said.

''But most NATO countries with a few exceptions of the very smaller countries can make some contribution,'' he said, either to countries like Jordan and Egypt hurt by economic sanctions against Iraq, or to aid refugees from the crisis.

''We would be very disappointed if the NATO alliance as a group of individual countries did not make major financial contributions,'' Clarke said. ''But based on the political solidarity and the support for the United Nations policy we think those contributions will be forthcoming.''

President Bush's appeal last week for financial aid from U.S. allies was seen by some Europeans as an invitation to support a mercenary army, but Clarke said that was not the message intended.

''The United States is not asking its NATO allies for money to support the United States,'' the U.S. official said. ''The United States is asking its NATO allies to make contributions directly to those states most directly affected by the crisis.''

Clarke was joined in his briefing of NATO ambassadors by a representative of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff. On Monday, Secretary of State James Baker will brief the 16 NATO foreign ministers in Brussels on the Helsinki superpower summit.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 7) UPI - A chartered Iraqi Airways airliner carrying 171 American women, men and children arrived Friday in Jordan from Iraq, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Jordan said. The flight was the first in a U.S. plan to airlift some 2,600 Americans out of Kuwait on chartered ''flight of mercy'' planes.

There was no word on how long the full airlift of Americans out of the Iraqi-occupied emirate would take, but the U.S. officials said the air bridge would initially evacuate 1,300 U.S. women and children.

There was no immediate explanation for the reported presence of five men on the chartered flight to Amman, Jordan. Iraq has said men would not be allowed to leave the gulf region.

The flight flew from Kuwait City to Baghdad, Iraq, and arrived in Amman, Jordan, about 9:45 a.m. EDT. A U.S. Embassy spokesman said the Americans would fly to United States Saturday.

More ''mercy'' flights are expected to fly out of Kuwait over the weekend. U.S. officials are pressing Iraq to allow American men to leave as well as the women and children that Iraq says may go. But Baghdad Radio Friday said about 900 U.S. male nationals were still considered ''guests'' and would not be allowed out of the region.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Jordan said the freed Americans arriving on the Iraqi Airways jet looked ''visibly exhausted.''

''I have had a terrible experience,'' Patricia Hammer, who is divorced from a Kuwaiti, told reporters on arrival at Jordian's Queen Alia airport. ''We were in hiding for five weeks. Palestinian friends brought (us) food at their expense.''

Another unidentified freed hostage, asked if she had been mistreated, responded, ''If you consider being a hostage and having to hide being mistreated, then yes.''

More British and Canadian nationals arrived in their home countries Friday.

About 250 freed British women and children arrived at London's Gatwick Airport from the gulf early in the day, the biggest group to get out since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait five weeks ago. Aboard the British Airways jumbo jet were 78 children and 20 babies, many of whom were in a bus convoy that left Kuwait for Baghdad on Tuesday.

About 40 Canadians, including 10 men, reportedly arrived in Toronto from the gulf region.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker flew to the United Arab Emirates Friday, one of several gulf Arab oil producers who have requested U.S. military aid to deter Iraqi aggression.

Earlier Friday, Baker held talks in the Saudi resort of Taif with Kuwait's toppled emir. Arab diplomats in Cairo said Kuwaiti Emir Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah pledged billions of dollars to maintain the U.S. military presence in the gulf.

The diplomats also said the emir is pressing the United States to adopt a first-strike option against Iraq to liberate Kuwait.

Saudi Arabian King Fahd was reported to have pledged billions to maintain U.S. troops in his kingdom. He reportedly will pay for items such as fuel, water and transportation, but neither U.S. officials nor the Saudis would say exactly how much money Saudi Arabia would contribute. The U.S. operation in the Saudi kingdom was expected to cost $6 billion by the end of the year.

Baker was scheduled to fly to Cairo late Friday for talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid. He was also expected to hold talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Alexandria.

While in Saudi Arabia, Baker dismissed signs from Iran, India and China that those countries were about to break ranks with the West and send food and medicines to Iraq on humanitarian grounds.

''It is the position of the United States of America that humanitarian exemptions (to U.N. sanctions) certainly should not and cannot run to commercial food sales,'' Baker said.

''We take note as well that the Iraqi leadership themselves (who said) they have sufficient food for quite a number of months. So it is our view at least, that we are not at the point of invoking any ... exception for humanitarian cargo.''

U.S.-led naval forces are imposing a naval blockade on Iraq and have already turned back a number of ships headed for Iraqi or Jordanian ports with cargo for Baghdad.

The Indian government acknowledged Friday, after several days of denial, that Baghdad has refused to allow some 180,000 Indians to leave the gulf region unless cargos of food are flown in on the planes intended to ferry the Indian nationals home.

The Indian government has sought United Nations support for a plan to send food and medicine into the gulf on ships and planes that would then ferry Indian nationals out.

But Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral said Friday India had been unable to persuade the Western members of the U.N. Security Council of the need for the such assistance.

''The trouble is they seem to not feel that the situation (for refugees trapped in the region) has got bad enough,'' he said.

Egyptian Foreign Ministry sources said the Mubarak administration balked at Baker's idea floated earlier this week to form a defense alliance in the Middle East similar to NATO.

The sources said Egypt and Saudi Arabia were committed to a U.S. troop pullout after Iraq withdrew its forces from Kuwait and opposed any permanent U.S. military presence in the volatile area.

''As far as we are concerned, the U.S. military presence in the region must be withdrawn after the gulf crisis abates,'' one Egyptian source told United Press International.

In Jerusalem, outside the El Aqsa Mosque, Islam's third holiest site, about 1,000 Palestinians chanted pro-Iraq slogans and burned American and Israeli flags Friday during a demonstration in support of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein. The demonstration was the third and largest expression of pro-Saddam sentiment outside the mosque on the Temple Mount since Iraq invaded Kuwait Aug. 2.

Kuwaiti Finance Minister Ali Khalifa Sabah said Iraqi forces have stolen about $400 million worth of gold and $1 billion in bank notes from Kuwait's central bank, but they said the looting will not benefit Baghdad, thanks to restrictions of the U.N. embargo against Iraq.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency mentioned reports that President Bush would ask Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev at the Sunday summit in Helsinki ''to take part in such an alliance so as to establish a shield that aims at facing up to the Iraqi nuclear and chemical ''at facin

Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, traveling like Baker to raise funds to sustain the fight against Iraq, said in Tokyo Friday he was pleased with the response he got from Japan and South Korea.

Brady did not say how much he had asked Japan and South Korea to contribute, but a Japanese television station reported Brady requested Tokyo give $2 billion on top of the $1 billion it pledged to give last week.

European Community foreign ministers met in Rome Friday to decide their contribution to U.S. military operations in the gulf. But Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis told reporters in Brussels Thursday that, ''a European participation in the U.S. military costs is politically and juridically unproposable.''

British Defense Minister Tom King underscored Friday Premier Margaret Thatcher's pledge that more British troops would be sent to the gulf.

''We do believe that some additional forces will be needed and their composition is under consideration,'' King said but gave few details.

British officials said London had not followed the U.S. example of airlifting people out of Kuwait because of fears about the safety of Kuwait airport. Instead of an airlift, hundreds of British women and children have suffered grueling bus rides from Kuwait to Baghdad and then on to Amman.

The British Foreign Office said 140 to 150 Britons were in Baghdad applying for exit visas.

The French Foreign Ministry and company sources said Friday that Iraqi troops rounded up a group of French arms makers and took them to a Baghdad Melia Mansour Hotel after they vainly sought refuge at the French Embassy.

A foreign ministry official in Paris said 16 French nationals with the firm Thompson were taken Thursday to the hotel, which is the point of departure for hostages sent to strategic Iraqi sites as ''human shields'' against possible attack from the U.S.-led multinational force.

''This brings to nearly 60 of our compatriots who have been detained at the Melia Mansour or taken to other destinations that we don't know,'' a ministry spokesman said.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) UPI - British industries may suffer up to $9.45 billion in irretrievable losses and lay off more than 100,000 employees because of a trade embargo against Iraq and cancellations of Middle East orders, the Institution of Exports said Friday.

''We're well on our way to that now,'' said Derek Langham, the institute's representative in London.

The $9.45 billion figure issued by the institute is significantly more than forecast by the government.

Among the biggest losers is NEI Parsons, the largest employer in Newcastle 280 miles northeast of London. One of every five of its employees has been laid off since the crisis began Aug. 2, according to the British Broadcasting Corp.

The firm had to stop work on a $142 million order for four turbine engines for a power plant in Iraq as a result of a U.N.-ordered trade blockade against Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2.

Peter Dobson, who lost his job in the cutback, said, ''Nobody imagined that this would carry on in the Gulf. There might be a general feeling on the shop floor that you are being a wee bit hasty, but that isn't to say I doubt the management.''

Scores of smaller businesses are paying an even higher price. Richard Linaker, owner of a marketing company that caters to clients in the Middle East, said he would have to close his business in a few days.

The Department of Trade and Industry offered sympathy and advice but no compensation.

The country must accept that ''there is a price to be paid for its moral obligations even if that be a heavy and unpleasant one,'' a DTI spokesman said.

Most companies are not insured for such loses, Langham said.

ROME (SEPT. 7) UPI - European Community foreign ministers announced a broad range of decisions on the Persian Gulf crisis Friday including a proposed multi-billion dollar aid package for three countries hard-hit by the U.N. embargo on Iraq.

But the Community decisions did not include a direct contribution to the costs of the U.S.-led military operation in the gulf, sought by President Bush.

''The opinion of the European Community is that we want to make a concrete contribution to the costs of the gulf crisis,'' Italian Foreign Minister Gianni de Michelis told a news conference. ''But the U.S. military buildup was taken as an autonomous decision.''

Instead, the one-day special meeting of the foreign ministers decided ''in principle'' to provide billions of dollars in emergency and medium-term aid to Jordan, Egypt and Turkey, the three countries hardest hit by the blockade against Iraq.

The exact amount of this aid was to be decided at subsequent meetings. But the EC executive commission has estimated the total requirement at $2.8 billion for this year and a further $6.5 billion in 1991.

Conference sources said only 12 to 15 percent of the money will be provided by the European Community. The Community is looking for oil- rich gulf countries, which have benefited from price increases caused by the crisis, to provide around 65 percent. The remaining 20 percent would come from Far Eastern countries, possibly Korea and Japan.

The special EC meeting ended with the issue of three formal declarations - on the ''Crisis in the Gulf,'' on foreign citizens in Iraq and Kuwait, and on EC-Arab relations.

In the ''crisis'' declaration, the foreign ministers reaffirmed the Community's support for all U.N. Security Council resolutions relating to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and said the ''complete implementation of the embargo ... is the essential condition for bringing about a peaceful solution to the crisis.''

The declaration on foreign citizens expressed ''utter condemnation'' of the Iraqi measures against foreign citizens in Iraq and Kuwait and the embassies in Kuwait. It insisted ''on full respect of the right to freedom of movement of foreign citizens in those countries.''

The declaration on EC-Arab relations reaffirmed the Community's determination to work for peace in the Middle East and said ''it is a further injustice to the Arab people that Iraq's aggression against Kuwait has delayed the search for progress towards a solution to other problems of the region, such as the Arab-Israeli conflict, the Palestinian problem and the situation in Lebanon.''

De Michelis, who presided over the EC meeting, told the concluding news conference that the ministers decided to normalize relations with Syria and Iran in meetings to be held in New York Sept. 28 on the fringe of the U.N. General Assembly.

He also said the ministers accepted a recent Soviet proposal to issue a joint EC-Soviet declaration on the crisis. He said the declaration would be adopted in New York Sept. 27 after a meeting between Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze and the Community's ''Troika'' composed of the foreign ministers of Ireland, Italy and Luxembourg, the past, present and future holders of the EC presidency.

CLEVELAND (SEPT. 7) UPI - The Cleveland Cavaliers adjusted the contracts for three veteran stars of the team before retaining forward John ''Hot Rod'' Williams by matching a seven-year $26.5 million offer from Miami.

Under NBA rules, a team may go over the league-imposed salary cap to re-sign a free agent, thus it was easier to adjust the contracts of the Cavaliers before officially signing Williams.

The Cavaliers announced Friday that before matching Williams' contract offer Thursday they extended Mark Price's contract, made contract modifications for Brad Daugherty and Larry Nance and signed second round draft pick Milos Babic of Yugoslavia.

The club refused to release details of any of the contracts, but Price said his contract was extended for three years through the 1995-96 season.

Price was already under contract for $1 million a year for the next three seasons. The Akron Beacon Journal reported Friday the extension was estimated to be worth at least $2.5 million a year.

''It's for three years and I can't say much else,'' Price said Thursday night. ''Early in the week, it looked like nothing would happen, but then things changed and we pretty much got it done in one day.''

Price, 26, a second round draft pick in 1986 from Georgia Tech, is the NBA's all-time leader in shooting percentage from 3-point range at 42 percent and has been the Cavaliers' floor leader for the past three seasons. He averaged 19.6 points and 9.1 assists a game last season.

Daugherty, a four-year veteran from North Carolina, averaged 16.8 points and 9.1 rebounds. Nance, entering this 10th season in the NBA, averaged 16.3 points and 8.3 rebounds.

Babic, a 7-foot center, played college basketball at Tennessee Tech.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait.

CAIRO, Egypt - A chartered Iraqi Airways airliner carrying 171 American women, men and children arrived Friday in Jordan from Iraq, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Jordan said. It was the first flight in a U.S. plan to airlift some 2,600 Americans out of Kuwait on chartered ''flight of mercy'' planes.

There was no word on how long the full airlift of Americans out of the Iraqi-occupied emirate would take but the U.S. officials said the air bridge would initially evacuate 1,300 U.S. women and children.

There was no immediate explanation for the reported presence of five men on the chartered flight to Amman, Jordan. Iraq has said men would not be allowed to leave the gulf region.

SEOUL, South Korea - Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady met President Roh Tae-woo and other officials Friday to seek support for the U.S. plan on a collective international effort agaist Iraq in the Persian Gulf crisis. Brady told reporters he received a positive response from the Seoul government.

ATHENS, Greece - Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani scoffed at Iran's Arab neighbors Friday for seeking Tehran's help after 10 years of hostility, Tehran radio reported. He told the families of Iranian soldiers killed in the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war that those who opposed Iran are now quarreling among themselves and seeking Iran's help against Iraq.

LONDON - British defense secretary Tom King told the House of Commons

Friday that more British troops will be deployed to join the U.S.-led multinational force in the Persian Gulf. He declined to identify the number and type of forces that will be sent.

TAIF, Saudi Arabia - Secretary of State James Baker met Friday with the toppled emir of Kuwait after receiving a pledge from Saudi Arabia of billions of dollars to defray the cost of Washington's anti-Iraq mission. Later, Baker visited the United Arab Emirates for talks with leaders before flying to Cairo for talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid.

NEW DELHI - The Indian government acknowledged Friday that Iraq refuses to allow thousands of Indians to leave unless the ships and planes that sent to take them home arrive with cargos of food. Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral said Iraq reneged on some of its pledges to him and he said Iraq's proposed swap of people for food is a ''disconcerting development.''

PARIS - Sixteen employees of a French armsmaker in Iraq were rounded up and taken to a Baghdad hotel after vainly seeking refuge at the French Embassy. A Foreign Ministry official said Friday the employees were taken to the Melia Mansour Hotel, which has been the point of departure for hostages deployed as shields against attack by the multinational force in the region.

ROME - European Community foreign ministers met Friday to devise an economic aid package for countries suffering under the U.N. embargo on Iraq. They also reviewed the situation of foreigners prevented from leaving Iraq and Kuwait and the problem of embassies staying open in Kuwait despite Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's order to close.

BEIJING - Chinese Premier Li Peng told an aide to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein that Baghdad should withdraw from Kuwait and accept mediation by the United Nations, state television reported Friday. He told First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan that Iraq should withdraw unconditionally as soon as possible and settle the dispute by negotiation, the television report said.

CAIRO, Egypt - Egypt's economy, suffering under the weight of massive debt faces its worst labor troubles with the return of thousands of poor and unemployed workers fleeing Iraq and Kuwait. More than 1 million Egyptians were in the two countries when Iraq invaded.

MIAMI (SEPT. 7) UPI - General Development Corp., the Florida developer indicted earlier this year on federal fraud charges, has broken with the New York law firm that was crafting its defense, a spokeswoman said Friday.

Company spokeswoman Nelly Medel said General Development directors decided last week to sever the company's long-standing relationship with Cravath, Swaine & Moore.

The company, which is seeking to negotiate a plea agreement with federal prosecutors, said the responsibility for those talks now shifts entirely to Miami defense attorney Robert Josefsberg.

"We are simply not using their (Cravath's) services on the criminal case, and they are transferring everything over to Josefsberg," Medel said. Medel declined to cite a reason for the move, although she said the decision did not reflect any dissatisfaction with the firm's performance.

The Miami Review, a legal and business journal, reported Friday that company director Chesterfield Smith intends to push for a formal independent investigation of the law firm's performance in the case.

Smith said the probe would be part of a broader investigation "into the role of anybody that might have contributed to the situation in a wrongful way," the journal reported.

A partner with Cravath told the Review that members of the law firm could be called as witnesses in the case. "That would make it difficult to represent the company if the case ever came to trial," said partner Ronald Rolfe.

General Development and two chief executives were indicted in March on federal fraud charges for allegedly inflating the value of homes the company sold in its nine Florida communities. Prosecutors say the fraud may have cost home buyers as much as $100 million.

The company, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in April, later agreed to plead guilty to a conspiracy charge, but the plea agreement was tossed out by U.S. District Judge Lenore Nesbitt, who termed it too lenient. The case is scheduled to go to trial Jan. 7. Medel said company officials hope a plea agreement can be reached before then.

"We are in negotiations with the U.S. attorney at this time. We are going to do everything that is possible in order to reach agreement," Medel said.

GAINESVILLE, FL (SEPT. 7) UPI - A criminal justice authority said Friday the killer who murdered five college students was cold and calculating and probably not the mentally ill suspect in a county jail.

''Generally those sorts of people are not capable of the meticulous, careful crime that we saw involving gloves on ones' hands,'' said James Fox, a professor at Northeastern University in Boston.

Fox made his comments on the Phil Donahue Show, broadcast live Friday from Gainesville.

Several city and University of Florida officials refused to appear on the broadcast, calling it in bad taste, and a letter to the editor in Friday's Gainesville Sun urged people not to watch.

About eight minutes into the broadcast, someone cut four television cables then fled on a bicycle, causing about a 10-second blackout, but technicians switched to the one surviving camera and quickly restrung more cable, and the show went on.

Brevard County Sheriff Jake Miller has said the suspect, Edward Humphrey, 18, has displayed ''psychotic'' behavior since his arrest Aug. 30 for beating his grandmother.

Fox said that the Gainesville serial killer was more likely a sociopath - not a psychopath.

''What we're dealing with is a person who has an insatiable need for power dominance and control, someone who knows what they're doing, who enjoys not only terrorizing his five victims but may also be enjoying the terror that has played on this community. ... It's an evil man. It's obviously not someone who's normal.''

However, another expert, Michael West, a forensics specialist who has used ultraviolet equipment to examine the crime scenes, said he could not rule out Humphrey as the killer.

''It's very possible that any of the suspects that police have right now could be the killer. This man's not a genius. He's just careful,'' West said.

Humphrey, 18, a University of Florida freshman from Indialantic, remained in the Brevard County Detention Center Friday on $1 million bond, charged with aggravated battery for allegedly beating his grandmother Aug. 30.

Arrest warrants also were issued Thursday by UF police, accusing Humphrey of two assaults on campus Aug. 25, the day before the first bodies were found.

Indian River County authorities Tuesday issued arrest warrants for Humphrey, accusing him of armed burglary and attempted sexual battery for a 1988 attack on a woman there.

Gainesville police have refused to characterize Humphrey as their prime suspect.

''We're going to stay away from identifying anyone at this point as a No. 1 suspect,'' police Lt. Sadie Darnell said Friday during a news conference. ''We are looking at eight people strongly and four of those very strongly but their hierarchy in that ranking changes almost daily.''

''I'm of the firm opinion that this individual, the killer, selects victims that appear easy to kill,'' West said. ''He kills small, petite females.

''This man is not courageous. He's not brave. You stand up, you will run him away. You're better off armed than unarmed.''

There has been a run on guns at Gainesville pawn shops and sporting goods stores, however, Gainesville Mayor Pro Tem Rodney Long urged residents Friday to leave weapons to law enforcement officials.

''It's important for this country to know that the city of Gainesville is a city that is in control of the situation, even though we are a city that has been stricken with fear,'' he said.

Authorities on Thursday searched Humphrey's Gainesville apartment, the family home in Indialantic and towed away his car to a crime lab in Jacksonville.

''Evidence, items and information we gained at both the scene here and at Brevard County is promising,'' Darnell said Friday, however she declined to say what was retrieved or if it tied Humphrey to the crimes.

Authorities in Ordway, Colo., reported that Humphrey was arrested there last month for disorderly conduct for failing to pay for gasoline, and while in custody, threatened to kill himself.

Crowley County sheriff's Sgt. Allan Turner said Humphrey's grandmother told him the suspect had left Florida without telling anyone and was apparently en route to Montana, where he had relatives and a girlfriend.

The grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, the victim of the Aug. 30 assault at her home, paid for the gasoline, and the charge was dropped.

At Thursday's hearing, Hlavaty said she wanted the aggravated battery charges dropped.

DENVER (SEPT. 7) UPI - Paul Westhead will bring his uptempo style of basketball to the Denver Nuggets as head coach, General Manager Bernie Bickerstaff announced Friday.

''I'm a fast-break, full-court press kind of coach, and the people who hired me know that,'' Westhead said.

Westhead, who won 50 games and the 1980 NBA Championship after taking over the Los Angeles Lakers from injured Jack McKinney, raised the Loyola-Marymount basketball team from relative obscurity to the NCAA Tournament the last three years. Last year LMU made the final eight before losing to eventual NCAA champion Nevada-Las Vegas.

He became the ninth head coach in Denver's franchise history, dating back to 1967, and the fourth since the Nuggets joined the NBA in 1976.

''Hiring Paul Westhead is a good move for us because his style will fit the players we will put on the floor well,'' Bickerstaff said. ''He is a proven winner in the college and professional ranks.''

Not all the college coaches who have made the leap to professional basketball have enjoyed equal success, but Westhead said his system is a proven winner.

''I never felt there was a great difference in coaching college and pro palyers,'' Westhead said. ''I will improve many of my conditioning and practice techniques, but it's not outside the realm of possibility we would do some of the same sprints we used last year.''

The 51-year-old Philadelphia native said last year's LMU players wore weighted wet suits while doing wind sprints in a deep-water swimming pool.

Bickerstaff said his plan for rebuilding the Nuggets would take from three to five years.

Although neither Westhead nor Bickerstaff revealed the terms of the contract, Westhead said, ''It's a contract which puts me in the thick of those years.''

Other NBA teams that have attempted a fast break, full-court defense have wilted over the grueling 82-game schedule.

Westhead, who had a 247-153 record in 14 collegiate seasons at LaSalle and Loyola-Marymount and a 140-104 record in four pro seasons with the Lakers and Chicago Bulls, said, ''A very fast pace will cause teams great difficulty, not just on offense.

''The roots of our fast break today were planted way before the NBA experience, and in the past three years I've become even a greater believer in a fast, furious defense.''

Westhead said he has not had time to consider any choices for his assistants.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The Pentagon informed Congress Friday of a proposed $3.2 billion fighter deal with South Korea that will allow Seoul to produce copies of the F/A-18 - a move some fear could help create a serious aerospace rival.

The transaction for 120 F/A-18 Hornet fighters calls for the United States to ship 12 aircraft to Seoul in the first phase, provide 36 ''knockdown'' kits for co-production in South Korea in the second stage, and then allow Korean production of 72 of the sophisticated jets in Seoul in the final phase.

The Navy's F/A-18 is built by the McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis. Also included in the deal are 24 GE F-404 spare engines, which are built by General Electric in Lynn, Mass.

The proposed sale will move ahead unless Congress acts in the next 30 days to disapprove it.

Sen. Alan Dixon, D-Ill., a member of the Armed Services Committee, has been the most vocal of the congressional opponents of the transaction, calling it ''a sucker deal'' for the United States.

Dixon has said the deal would cause tens of thousands of Americans to lose their jobs and possibly would undermine America's dominance in the aerospace and aviation industries, where the United States maintains a trade surplus.

He has predicted a ''bitter, bitter brawl'' in Congress over the deal.

Similar concerns were debated on Capitol Hill earlier this year when Congress considered the FSX fighter deal with Japan. That transaction, however, called for only co-production of the plane with General Dynamics Corp. as opposed to full production in the Korean sale.

In a statement, the Pentagon said the sale of these aircraft will ''contribute to the foreign policy and national security of the United States'' by allowing replacement of aging F-4 and F-5 jets in the South Korean defense forces.

South Korean President Roh Tae Woo was asked when he was in Washington last October if South Korea, as critics had charged, was trying to use the Korean Fighter Project as a means of building a Korean aerospace industry.

In a reply that failed to ease congressional concern, Roh said he was certain ''the aerospace industries of both Korea and the United States will be combined to make a success of this project.''

NEW DELHI (SEPT. 7) UPI - The government, after several days of denial, acknowledged Friday that Baghdad has refused to allow thousands of Indians to leave Iraq and Kuwait unless the ships and planes sent to take them home arrive with cargos of food.

Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral, speaking to Parliament, said Iraq had reneged on some of its pleges to him during a recent visit to Baghdad. He described Iraq's decision to release Indians in exchange for food as a ''disconcerting development.''

About 200,000 Indians were working in Iraq and Kuwait at the time of the Iraqi invasion. Nearly 20,000 have been returned to India at a cost of $30 million, officials said Friday, but tens of thousands remain as refugees in Kuwait, Iraq and Jordan.

Gujral's comments came one day after the Indian government sought United Nations support for the plan to send food and medicine to Iraq and Kuwait by air and sea. The empty ships and jetliners would then return Indian refugees to their homeland.

But government officials had repeatedly denied over the past two days that Iraq placed any preconditions on sending ships or planes to pick up the Indian refugees. Instead they described the plan as a humanitarian move to provide food and medicine to those in need.

Gujral's announcement in Parliament came as the Foreign Ministry continued to press its case for sending food and medicine to Iraq, accusing the West for applying a double standard in dealing with the refugee problem in the Middle East.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Aftab Seth said Western countries were chartering Iraqi Airways jets to bring out their citizens while hampering New Delhi's efforts to send ships and airplanes loaded with food and medicine for Indians in Iraq and Kuwait.

''It is inhuman to try to achieve political objectives through a process of starving people,'' he said. ''It is inhuman. It is cruel. And the people who are starving are our own and other Asians.''

''They are not in a position to live in five-star hotels. And they are not in small enough numbers to get out on chartered flights of Iraqi Airways. They have to come out on ships and planes that we send in,'' he added.

The United States has chartered planes for such flights, but a State Department spokesman Thursday declined to comment on the issue when it was raised during a news briefing.

William Clark, the U.S. ambassador to India, told reporters in Washington Friday the United States opposed the Indian plan because it would violate the embargo against Iraq and Kuwait. He also said there was no way to ensure the food would get to Indians, the Press Trust of India reported from Washington.

But Seth denied the plan would break the U.N. embargo against Iraq and said India's view was that food was exempted from the sanctions.

''Our support for the question of U.N. sanctions is unswerving. We are not trying to bust sanctions,'' Seth said. ''Whatever food and medicine we send in, we will send with the approval of concerned authorities. We want that approval and we are working very hard to get it.''

He also reaffirmed India's condemnation of the invasion, saying: ''We have never condoned aggression. We do not recognize merger. We do not recognize annexation. We do not accept that the sovereignty of Kuwait has been extinguished.''

The foreign ministry spokesman said New Delhi recognized the food shipments might end up in Iraqi hands rather than going to help suffering Indians. He said India hoped to deliver the food and medicine to the Red Cross and Red Crescent relief organizations, which could ensure it would go to those in need.

Seth said the problem India faced was in convincing the United Nations that immediate humanitarian relief should be provided to refugees in Kuwait, Iraq and Jordan, where some 20,000 Indians are being housed in refugee camps awaiting return home.

But he said India had been so far unable to convince the Western members of the U.N. Security Council of the need for the assistance.

''The trouble is they seem to not feel that the situation has got bad enough,'' he added. ''That is the tragedy. I mean, when do you decide that children are starving? When they start dropping dead on the streets?''

International relief organizations such as the Red Cross and Save the Children are involved in efforts to help the thousands of refugees stranded on the Jordanian-Iraqi border.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - A year pocked with shame, soreness and unaccustomed defeat may yet develop into a happy ending for Steffi Graf.

There was a scandal involving her father and a model, a fractured thumb as a result of a freak ski accident, a severe sinus condition that required surgery and ultimately there were the defeats.

After winning the Australian Open in January, her eighth Grand Slam of the previous nine, Graf lost the French Open final to Monica Seles and was beaten in the Wimbledon semifinals by Zina Garrison.

''It was a tough time, I wanted to get it over with,'' Graf said Friday, a half hour after she stepped smoothly into the finals of the U.S. Open by crushing Arantxa Sanchez Vicario 6-1, 6-2. ''That's why it means a lot to me to be playing like this.

''It would be something special for me (to win the Open). ''Nothing really mattered much to me for a long time, and now this means a whole ''h to me fo

Graf was most disturbed at the scandal involving her father, Peter, which was played up big in the German press. She admitted this weighed on her mind when she should have been concentrating on tennis.

''I never wanted to go through it, and never will,'' the 21-year- old top seed answered when asked if all the adversity had made her stronger. ''Nobody does, I think.''

With her father sitting in the guest's box, the two-time defending champion allowed nothing to disturb her Friday, least of all Sanchez's futile attempts to make a match of it.

''The way I was playing, I couldn't do much better, so I'm happy,'' Graf said. ''For a change I'm perfect (health-wise). It's good to know I'm physically fit.

''I'll be happy if it (her game) gets better in the final, but I couldn't play much better than this match. I felt very good.''

Gabriela Sabatini, the No. 5 seed, was to play No. 8 Mary Joe Fernandez in the second semifinal. The women's final is scheduled for Saturday.

Graf is 18-3 against Sabatini, an occasional doubles partner, and 1-0 vs. Fernandez.

The men's semifinals also are on tap for Saturday with No. 2 Boris Becker, the defending champion, going against No. 4 Andre Agassi, and No. 12 Pete Sampras playing unseeded John McEnroe.

Graf, seeking to add a third successive U.S. Open crown, toyed with her sixth-seeded opponent, completing her business in 54 minutes. She also displayed a more aggressive attack than usual, approaching the net 23 times and winning 20 of the points.

''Today she hits an unbelievable forehand, everything to the lines,'' Sanchez said. ''She was serving very well, and I didn't have a chance.

''She is playing better than in Paris and Wimbledon. She has the confidence in all her shots, she's playing very well, and I think she'll win the tournament. I try to put the first serve in or I know she'll kill me with her forehand. She pressured a lot and I couldn't do anything.''

After Sanchez held service in the second game, Graf ran off seven games in a row, carrying her to a 2-0 lead in the second set. Sanchez held at 15 in the third game before Graf won three more games.

Sanchez, an 18-year-old Spaniard, now has lost to Graf in eight of nine career meetings, her lone triumph coming in the 1989 French Open final.

''When you beat her one time you think you can beat her again,'' Sanchez said. ''But that (Paris) was a different surface, it's slower, and I could get to her forehand.''

Graf, 21, has dropped one set in reaching the final for the fourth consecutive year, and in her last three victories she has yielded merely 10 games.

''I didn't make mistakes from the beginning or in practice,'' Graf said. ''I felt good and I knew I would get into a rhythm against her. I expected a tougher match.''

In reaching the final, Graf is assured of earning $175,000. This amounts thus far to $29,560.81 per hour, or $581.40 per minute.

Sanchez had only one break point in the match, that coming on Graf's double-fault in the fifth game of the opening set. Graf saved it with a service winner, and after four deuces she was able to hold.

The only other time Sanchez reached deuce on Graf's serve was in the sixth game of the second set after Graf had been ahead 40-0.

The South African team of Pieter Aldrich and Danie Visser, seeded second, won the men's doubles championship with a 6-2, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 victory over Americans Paul Annacone and David Wheaton.

Aldrich and Visser, who also won the Australian crown, split $142,861. Annacone and Wheaton, who were unseeded, receive a total of $71,431.

AMMAN, JORDAN (SEPT. 7) UPI - Americans still trapped in occupied Kuwait are changing hideaways frequently to evade Iraqi soldiers and disguising themselves in native Kuwaiti attire, U.S. women who flew out to safety Friday said.

''The conditions have been very frightening,'' Cyndi Dewey of San Francisco said in an interview with Cable News Network after 171 Americans - mostly women and children - arrived in Amman from Kuwait via Baghdad.

They were on a Iraqi flight chartered by the U.S. government as a result of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's decision to allow foreign women and children to leave Kuwait and Iraq.

Saddam is still detaining most Western men, arresting some and apparently sending them to serve as shields against potential attacks on key military and other installations by U.S. forces deployed to Saudi Arabia.

Dewey said Americans in occupied Kuwait have heard many reports of foreigners being arrested by Iraqi search parties and taken away. They have not been heard from again, she said.

''We've been hiding out,'' said Dewey, a mother of four who said she had arrived in Kuwait less than two weeks before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion. ''We have maybe been out of the house five times since the invasion. We've had to disguise our hair, dye it black, wear ... Kuwaiti dress, to disguise ourselves if we do go out.

''The whole city of Kuwait has been destroyed and taken,'' she said. ''The place is a disaster there. The children have had nightmares. We've all had to sleep in one room because we've been so scared.''

Another of the women on Friday's flight, identified only as Ruthie, a mother of three from Memphis who brought her children out, said Iraqis broke into buildings in search of files with addresses of foreigners living in Kuwait.

She said she has asked her husband, whom she left behind in Kuwait, to check in with the U.S. Embassy every few days as he changes hiding places so she can be sure he is still safe.

She said that Iraqi soldiers have begun house-to-house searches for foreigners and that Kuwaiti friends alert Americans when the soldiers approach the neighborhoods where they are staying.

''If it was close to our area, we would get quickly get in the car and try to find a safe place to go,'' she said. ''But it was dangerous even in the car, because you never knew when they would stop you and search you or discover you're American. We covered up. We covered our hair and arms, wore sunglasses.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - Mayor David Dinkins and city business and congressional leaders warned Friday that a proposed federal tax on stock and bond sales would devastate the economy and throw thousands of people out of work.

Dinkins said the tax would drive the securities industry overseas and possibly push the country into a recession.

The Bush administration has proposed the stock transfer excise tax of 0.5 percent as a way of closing the federal deficit.

But Dinkins said it would immediately throw 10,000 people out of work in the city's financial sector and another 18,000 in related local jobs.

He said that by boosting the cost of trading, the tax would reduce the volume of the U.S. securities market, which is centered in New York, and cut the value of American stocks, costing investors billions of dollars.

''The Bush administration and Congress must relaize that the short- and long-term costs of a securities Transfer Excise Tax are too grave to ignore,'' Dinkins said. ''With this tax, our ability to invest and compete will move backward, not forward, as we begin the 1990s.''

Joining the mayor to denounce the proposal were several local congressmen, business leaders and City Comptroller Elizabeth Holtzman, who said the value of the city's pension funds would drop by $1.2 billion to $1.9 billion if the tax was enacted.

Holtzman said public and private pension funds across the country also would be hurt by the tax.

She said the value of publicly traded equities could fall by as much as $325 billion nationwide.

Rep. Charles Schumer said there was a ''good chance'' of killing the proposal in Congress.

The Brooklyn Democrat said the New York congressional delegation was united against it and hoped to receive help from Illinois, since the tax would hurt the futures industry based in Chicago.

The delegation also might get support in its fight from congressmen from other cities, such as Los Angeles, Boston and Philadelphia, which would suffer under the tax.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - President Bush will use the Helsinki summit to ask the Soviet Union to pull all its military advisers from Iraq and to play a more direct role in the multinational forces arrayed against Saddam Hussein, senior U.S. officials said Friday.

Bush was scheduled to arrive in the Finnish capital Saturday for seven hours of hastily arranged talks on Sunday with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, the third formal meeting of the superpower leaders in less than a year.

As Soviet and American officials describe the encounter, it will be relatively informal, in the pattern of the meeting at Malta in December 1989 or the informal talks at the Camp David presidential retreat that followed their formal sessions in Washington last spring.

A senior American official, speaking on the basis of no further identification, told reporters the Persian Gulf crisis and the international effort to isolate Iraqi President Saddam will be the main topic of the meeting, but not the only one.

The official said that a photograph of the two leaders together after agreeing on further cooperative action to force a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from occupied Kuwait ''would be a very helpful signal'' to send to Saddam.

West German political leader Oskar LaFontaine, who met with Bush at the White House Friday, said the president ''pointed out that he was trying to coordinate gulf policy with Gorbachev and ... that he's well aware of the historic cooperation that exists between the Soviet Union and Iraq.''

The U.S. official said it would be useful but not essential for the Soviets to send ground forces to join the 27 nations that have sent, or intend to send, forces to the Persian Gulf. More than 100,000 U.S. troops are in Saudi Arabia and 50 U.S. warships are operating in the region to protect strategically important oil supplies.

Alexei Vassilev, a top Soviet official and adviser to the Supreme Soviet, told a news conference Friday, ''I can't imagine President Gorbachev could find it possible to send any military forces. There is a strong feeling in public opinion against the use of Soviet forces.''

''But,'' Vassilev said, ''I wouldn't rule out sending one or two ships, in a move that would be more symbolic and psychological than real.''

Another Soviet official, Konstantin Jrouevtsev, head of the Arab department of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, agreed, saying, ''The domestic situation in the Soviet Union is so grave that any event abroad would lead to disturbances inside the Soviet Union and adversely affect Gorbachev's popularity.''

The senior American official said the issue of the Soviet military advisers remaining in Iraq would be raised by Bush in Helsinki. Moscow has said it has 193 uniformed military advisers left in Iraq, as well as about 6,000 civilians and dependents.

The Soviet advisers have been described as being mainly involved in overseeing previously contracted military supplies to Iraq.

The U.S. official said the Soviets have been helpful in the international effort in ''the first post-Cold War crisis,'' and the two leaders also will discuss how to make further use of a United Nations that has been revitalized with the waning of superpower acrimony.

For their part, the Soviets were expected to point out that they have suffered severe economic harm, including the loss of Iraqi oil, and the virtual cancellation $5 billion Baghdad owes Mosocw for military sales.

At the same time, the Soviet economy is on the verge of collapse, with everything from cigarettes to bread and vodka reported in short supply.

Diplomatic officials said Gorbachev is expected to request some short-term economic help from Bush, although the seven leading industrial nations agreed at their July summit in Houston to withhold direct financial support until there has been a basic reform of the Soviet economic system.

One official said the Soviets are expected to ask for American help in upgrading the pipelines and oil-field equipment.

The Soviets have informed some of the foreign customers for Soviet gas and oil that contracts cannot be honored because Soviet pipelines are so leaky and decrepit that a safe flow of oil and gas is not possible.

U.S. officials said that arms control issues will not be a major consideration at the Helsinki meeting.

One State Department source said the strategic arms reduction negotiations in Geneva have progressed steadily until there is only ''a long list of minor, nuts-and-bolts issues to be dealt with, not the sort of thing that requires high-level intervention from the leaders.''

The official said talks on reducing conventional forces in Europe also have progressed, but a few technical issues remain to be settled, including definition of planes and helicopters to be restricted on both sides.

MIAMI (SEPT. 7) UPI - Customs agents conducting a routine cargo inspection at Miami International Airport stumbled across $135 million in stolen British bonds, in what officials Friday described as the largest such seizure in U.S. history.

The 71 negotiable bearer bonds, each worth an estimated $1.9 million, were discovered late Thursday afternoon inside a small package, sandwiched between the pages of two telephone books bound for Lima, Peru, officials said. Customs officials said the bonds were among $554.5 million in securities stolen May 2 from an international courier in London.

"Since that time there has been the worldwide search to find this half billion dollars," said Customs spokesman Mike Sheehan. "Yesterday, we were doing a routine examination. They (Customs agents) were at Miami International Airport, checked a flight, opened a box and found this."

The examination was part of Operation Buckstop, an effort to stem the illegal flow of currency out of the country. Although no arrests have been made in connection with the seizure, officials said their investigation is ongoing.

The package containing the bonds listed a Miami hotel as the return address, and identified the sender as Anthony Gallagher. The package was addressed to Adela Martinez in Lima, Peru.

"We believe the person who dropped off the package in Miami had an Irish accent and may have been Gallagher," said Bill Rosenblatt, the special agent in charge of south Florida operations. "Currently, we are uncertain who these two people are," he added. "It is quite possible these are aliases."

Rosenblatt said Customs inspectors were drawn to the package aboard the Aero Peru cargo flight because of the contract between the surnames. Otherwise, there was nothing unusual about the package, he said.

Rosenblatt speculated that if the bonds had reached Peru, they would have been laundered before being used as collateral for loans. Officials said they did not know how the bonds reached Miami.

Sheehan said the bonds had been missing since a London thief armed with a knife made off with a satchel containing 292 individual securities. With the 71 securities seized Thursday, officials have recovered all but about nine securities worth about $10 million, Sheehan said.

Other securities were recovered in London, Cyprus, Scotland, Germany and New York, officials said. Fourteen people have been arrested in connection with the theft.

LONDON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The House of Commons overwhelming approved the government's handling of the Persian Gulf conflict Friday, and Defense Secretary Tom King announced more British troops will be deployed to the gulf region.

After two days of debate, the Commons endorsed Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's response to Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's invasion of Kuwait by a vote of 437 to 35.

Little opposition was voiced during Parliament's first extraordinary debate since Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands in 1982.

King said more British troops would be dispatched to the gulf. Their composition is under consideration, he said, deferring questions on the number and type of troops.

The British naval and air force presence in the gulf already is costing the country $1.89 million a day, King said. In addition to the operating cost, the tab for deploying the 5,000 troops and their equipment was $142 million.

The deployment of reinforcements is influenced by a variety of factors, he said.

''We are considering this matter, but against the background of some of the figures that I have already given to the House, against the possible threat that still exists, against the overall imperative of insuring that there is no further aggression, and that the defensive shield of Saudi Arabia and of the neighboring gulf states is insured, and to insure that the effective action that we are taking through the United Nations is successful,'' King said.

Labor's defense spokesman MP Martin O'Neill said the gulf conflict was potentially the most serious crisis since World War II.

''Our troops are literally going to have to sweat it out,'' O'Neill said.

''It will be a game of nerves. We will have to wait until Saddam attacks or is replaced. It will be a waiting game.''

About 250 British women and children arrived at London's Gatwick Airport from the gulf early Friday, the biggest group to get out since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait five weeks ago. Aboard the British Airways jumbo jet were 78 children and 20 babies. Most of them were in the bus convoy that left Kuwait for Baghdad Tuesday.

They were relieved to be home but also expressed some anger at Thatcher's hard-line attacks on Saddam.

''Margaret Thatcher's going on and on about it. Let those women go before she had a go at Suddam. We were waiting for him to change his mind,'' said Alison Bouhamed. About 2,000 Britons remain in Kuwait.

Other women told of hiding in cupboards to avoid being found by Iraqi troops.

The Foreign Office said another 140 to 150 Britons were in Baghdad applying for exit visas.

British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd planned to fly to Tokyo Saturday to discuss the gulf conflict with his counterpart and the prime minister. He was expected to ask Japan to come up with more financial support for the Western military effort than the $1 billion Tokyo already has promised.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - The festering crisis in the Middle East and economic uncertainties at home have pushed mortgage rates up about 0.5 percent, translating into higher payments of about $40 a month, the Mortgage Bankers Association said Friday.

James Nelson, the association's president-elect, said the prospects for even higher mortgage rates are good should the Middle East standoff erupt into a shooting war.

''It's safe to say we think (rates are) at a peak,'' Nelson said. ''All bets are off if we start shooting at each other.''

Mortgage rates spiked to 10.7 percent during August from 10.2 percent at the end of July.

On Friday, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. reported interest rates for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages fell to 10.19 percent from 10.24 percent while adjustable-rate notes slid to 8.29 percent from 8.30 percent the week before.

Nelson, who is also president of Eberhardt Mortgage Co. of Minneapolis, said mortgage rates are likely to ''stabilize'' at their current high levels during the next few months, making short-term, adjustable-rate mortgages more attractive.

''We hope long-term rates will come down somewhat once there is a better definition of the situation in the Middle East,'' Nelson said.

Extreme volatility in the mortgage market and tightened mortgage underwriting standards have given some prospective first-time homebuyers fits during the summer, the association said.

Sixty percent of the 30 mortgage bankers surveyed by the association said their companies have tightened lending requirements. Nelson said saving for a down payment continues to be the major stumbling block facing first time buyers.

''

The assocation's survey also showed a surprising upswing in the number of unmarried couples buying homes. Eighty-nine percent of the lenders surveyed said more unmarried couples - termed ''mingles'' by the association - are taking out home loans than five years ago.

Nelson attributed the increase to greater social acceptance - even among bankers - of couples living together outside of marriage.

''There's a recognition on the part of mortgage lenders that buyers of the 'mingle' category make good borrowers,'' Nelson said. ''I think it's an evolution that acknowledges social realities.''

A federal appeals court in Denver has ruled 2-1 against government regulations that keep federally funded family planning clinics from offering abortion counseling or referrals. The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the regulations are unconstitutional. It said the regulations violate the rights that women have in making informed decisions about abortions.

A second denial has been given by a judge in Chicago as a father tries to get a court order to have three-and-a-year-old twins tested as possible bone marrow donors for their 12-year-old half-brother. The brother is dying of leukemia and a bone marrow transplant might offer some hope of survival. But the courts have turned down requests that the tests be taken.

Sheehan says the bonds were found during a routine inspection at Miami International Airport. NO

LAS VEGAS, NE (SEPT. 7) UPI - Sales and marketing executives of Australia's Foster's Brewing Company and its U.S. marketing and importing companies Friday unveiled a new $10 million futuristic advertising campaign designed to poke fun at more traditional beer advertising.

The campaign, revealed during two days of meetings in Las Vegas, begins next month and features three 30-second spots which utilize the talents of SFX, the special effects and make-up experts behind the movie "Alien" to create humorous, futuristic-looking vignettes that parody the stilted chatter of bar-goers and conventional beer ads.

The ads, which were created by AC&R Advertising of New York, also feature James Brown's party classic, "I Feel Good," Sports Illustrated swimsuit models Rachel Hunter and Kathy Ireland and the tagline "Break the Mold with Foster's, It's Australian Beer."

"The ads are being launched in mid-October during World Series telecasts, with heavy saturation in major markets including New York and Los Angeles " said Jim Mullahy, vice president of marketing for Molson Breweries USA, Foster's U.S. marketing and importing company.

"They are being supplemented with major print and radio campaigns. We think they'll be a major force in our push to gain market share in the U.S., to surpass the 26 percent growth we're experiencing this year in 1991," Mullahy said. The new ads mean that Foster's will say goodbye to Paul Hogan, the Australian actor who has been a popular spokesman for the company since 1986.

"We decided not to use Paul Hogan because we wanted to de-emphasize Foster's Australian heritage," said John Barnett, the president and chief executive of Molson. The new ad campaign is being used to introduce a new low-calorie Foster's Light Lager and Foster's Draught to promote its regular brand of beer.

Foster's is expected to sell about 3.5 million cases of beer this year. The import leader, Heineken, will sell about 20 million cases and Molson will sell 14 million.

KIGALI, RWANDA (SEPT. 7) UPI - Pope John Paul II flew into the small central African country of Rwanda on a hot humid Friday afternoon for a two-day visit to the country's 3.06 million Catholics.

He spoke immediately of his sorrow at the famine which earlier this year killed about 200 people and brought thousands to the edge of starvation in the overpopulated, over-farmed Rwandan hills.

Stepping from an Air France Boeing 747 at the capital Kigali''s airport, he gave his traditional salute to the country''s soil, dropping to his knees and kissing the ground as he has always done on visiting a country for the first time.

He was met by Rwanda's president, 53-year-old Gen. Juvenal Habyarimana, who has ruled his tiny country of 10,169 square miles - about the size of Belgium - since 1973.

''On the threshold of my visit, my thoughts go out to the whole of the Rwandan people and more particularly to those who are suffering,'' the Pope said.

''I know that a serious famine recently struck a part of the country and that in some regions the famine took on tragic dimensions. I commend to God those victims who succumbed,'' the Pope added.

Rwanda has 6.9 million mouths to feed from its steep-sided hills and is the most densely populated country in Africa with an average density of 675 people per square mile.

President Habyarimana, in appeals this year for international food aid, has pointed out however that in parts of the country the density is close to a staggering 2,560 people per square mile.

Poor harvest precipitated a brief crisis in February this year, and emergency food brought mainly from neighboring Uganda came too late for at least 200 people.

The pope drove from the airport past huge cheering crowds of people, some of whom had waited all day for a glimpse of the pontiff. They lined roads decorated with cut and replanted banana palms.

''Papa, Papa,'' they chanted. The pope was scheduled to pay a brief evening visit to Kigali''s cathedral.

John Paul flew in from Burundi, Rwanda's southern neighbor after a two-day visit in which he urged Burundians to put aside their tribal differences, curb their own population growth through stricter morality and view AIDS as an ethical problem.

HAYDENVILLE, MA (SEPT. 7) UPI - The owners of New England Monthly magazine, which has been losing more than $1 million a year, said Friday the award-winning publication is closing, a victim of the area's collapsing economy.

The September issue, published in mid-August, will be its last, said John Van de Kamer, president of New England Monthly Holdings Inc., which bought the publication about 18 months ago. The magazine struggled for six years to hack out a market niche for a top-quality publication in the six-state region.

New England Monthly provided the first-rate writing, with both fiction and journalism from the likes of novelist John Updike and Tracy Kidder, author of such non-fiction books as "House" and "Soul of a New Machine."

But it could never put together enough circulation in a clearly defined market to attract sufficient advertising. New England Monthly claimed 120,000 circulation.

Van de Kamer said the magazine lost "well in excess of $1 million last year" and he projected it would have lost "a million-plus every year" in the foreseeable future had it continued to publish.

A group that included Van de Kamer's Telemedia Inc. and the Southam newspaper chain, both of Canada, bought the magazine when it was already threatened with extinction. But Van de Kamer said the swiftness of the reversal in New England's economic fortunes surprised them and sealed the magazine's fate. "The turn-down (in New England's economy) was pretty fast. Frankly, we didn't see it (as being) as sharp and as fast as it happened."

The founders of the magazine, Daniel Okrent, and publisher Robert Nylen, both alumni of Texas Monthly, had sought in some ways to repeat the success of the Texan magazine.

Although some critics have argued that New England Monthly could never pull together a single identity in a region of six disparate states, the current editor and publisher, Richard Todd, disputed that.

He said New England's culture and history make it quite unified. "What it doesn't have is a single government. And its markets are a little diffused." However, "in terms of culture, it's very much a region." "This recession really took the starch out of us. Had things kept going along as they had been, we'd still be here."

TORONTO (SEPT. 7) UPI - Businesses reacted cautiously Friday to the election of Ontario's first socialist government, but most feel a wholesale political and economic realignment won't happen.

Premier-elect Bob Rae and the New Democratic Party won with a decisive victory Thursday that many analysts found surprising, sweeping the five-year-old Liberal government and Premier David Peterson out of office. The NDP won 74 of the 130 seats in Ontario's legislature, with the Liberals hanging on to 36 and the Progressive Conservatives capturing 20.

David McFadden, president of the Toronto-based Canada-U.S. Business Association, said Rae is an intelligent and seasoned politician who realizes the Ontario economy is on the verge of a recession and therefore must be managed cautiously. McFadden said Rae may act on one or two promises of "symbolic importance" to the NDP, but wholesale change is unlikely.

Rae told reporters Thursday night the business community is "sophisticated and understanding enough" to know that the party will work with them. "We've done it in many countries in Western Europe which are very prosperous and have a very dynamic marketplace," Rae said of other socialist governments. "That's the kind of economy which we very much want to run here."

Fred Ketchen, a senior trader at ScotiaMcLeod Inc., said initial reaction in the investment community was "negative but cautiously negative." "Cautious simply because we don't quite know yet what Bob Rae really stands for," Ketchen said.

Rae is expected to have his hands full with about 60 novice politicians and a platform widely described as anti-business. The NDP's key business-related policies include a minimum eight percent tax on corporate profits, a state-run car insurance plan, higher minimum wages and tighter pay equity laws.

The NDP also has talked about stricter rent-control laws, affirmative action legislation, freezing the development of nuclear power, taxes on property speculators and an inheritance tax on estates valued at more than $1 million.

Linda Matthews, president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, said she believes "there is room for common ground" between the new government and the business community. "It's the economic prosperity of the province that will ensure the success of social programs," Matthews said.

In a policy document for the election, the NDP outlined a series of proposals that would add $3.57 billion to the province's annual tab, but only detailed $2.04 billion in new taxes to cover the increased costs.

Paul Pannkuk, an analyst with the New York-based bond rater Standard & Poor's, said Ontario could keep its top ranked triple AAA rating even if Rae runs up major deficits.

Pannkuk said the province has "a fair cushion of fiscal flexibility" that would allow it to run a deficit for several years without harming its bond rating. But he said the rating will be reviewed after the NDP government issues its first budget.

The Canadian dollar and Toronto's stock exchange were both off in early trading Friday. The Canadian dollar, which closed Thursday at 86.49 cents, was off nearly three-quarters of a cent at 85.79 cents at the opening before recovering to 85.97 cents at midday.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's 300 Composite Index was off 24.1 points, less than one percent, at 3,288.7 points at noon. Thirteen of the index's 14 sub-groups were down with financial services issues leading the way. "Sometimes the assumption of power moderates some of the policies that you have put forward in an election campaign," Ketchen said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Because of tensions created by the gulf crisis, the Peace Corps has quietly pulled its contingent of 46 volunteers out of Yemen, officials confirmed Friday.

According to Peace Corps officials, the U.S. ambassador in Sanaa, Yemen, Charles Dunbar, decided that the volunteers should be removed for their own safety. Without any public announcement, they were flown out of the country two weeks ago.

Most of the 46 volunteers had been working in provincial villages, working either as language teachers or agricultural advisers. It was the only Peace Corps contingent in any Middle East Arab country.

Yemen was one of the few countries in the world to shown any sympathy for Iraq in the crisis. Shortly after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, there were anti-American demonstrations in Sanaa.

As a result the State Department issued a travel advisory, suggesting that all Americans defer travel to Yemen. The department ordered the departure of all non-essential embassy personnel and dependents, and advised private Americans to leave the country, in view of the potential danger.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 7) UPI - A University of Chicago chemistry professor who helped develop the atomic bomb during World War II has died of a heart attack, hospital officials said Friday.

Nathan Sugarman, 73, died late Thursday at the University of Chicago Hospitals of a heart attack, a spokeswoman said.

Sugarman worked at the Los Alamos Science Laboratory in 1945 and 1946 when scientists were developing the atom bomb and ''was still doing research on nuclear reactions at the University of Chicago,'' said Tanya Macaloon, his daughter.

He began as a chemistry professor at the university in 1946 and retired in 1988 but never cut his ties with the institution, credited with beginning the Atomic Age on Dec. 2, 1942, with the creation of the first self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction.

''He worked with thousands of students and he either made them go into chemistry or get out of it,'' said Macaloon. ''He never gave the same lecture twice and would spend hours working on them.''

Sugarman was honored with the Quantrell award in 1966 for excellence in undergraduate teaching. A memorial service was scheduled for Tuesday at the university.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Officials in New Delhi now admit Baghdad refuses to let thousands of Indians leave Iraq and Kuwait unless rescue ships and planes arrive with cargoes of food. About 200-thousand Indians were working in Iraq and Kuwait at the time of the Iraqi invasion... only about 20-thousand of them have returned to India.

Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze says the Persian Gulf crisis is an opportunity to clear up Middle East woes under a U-N Security Council framework. Ending four days in Tokyo, Shevardnadze said the U-N could tackle the Arab-Israeli conflict and problems in Lebanon, after dealing with what he calls ''Iraqi aggression.''

Numerous religious leaders in Jordan are calling for a holy war. They believe the issue in the Persian Gulf crisis is NOT the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait... but a struggle by Islam against years of Western dominance. Many also see Kuwait as a monarchy that hoarded oil profits that should be shared among Arabs.

President Bush says his budget negotiators are ''somewhat optimistic'' they can reach agreement with Democrats soon. Bush spent less than 30 minutes at the opening of weekend talks at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland. Democratic leaders scrambled to counter a Republican formula for reaching those targets.

Deadly storms in Michigan, Ohio, and Indiana overnight headed east today... prompting flood and storm warnings in Pennsylvania and New York. In Lake Erie... powerful waves whipped by 57-mile-an-hour winds slammed a sailboat against a rocky wall in Cleveland last night... killing two women and leaving a third missing.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - The New York Post's unions put on a brave face Friday and said they were determined to keep the tabloid in business, as the clock ticked on a deadline for far-reaching financial concessions.

''They need the relief or they will go out of business,'' said Allied Trades Printing Council President George McDonald. ''I firmly believe that we have a crisis here.''

''We're all concerned and we're going to do everything possible to stay in business,'' he said at a midtown Manhattan news conference.

Citing a flow of red ink that has cost him $80 million in his two years of ownership, owner Peter Kalikow this week threatened to shut down the 189-year-old newspaper by Sept. 15 if he did not achieve up to $25 million in savings.

Two of Kalikow's top executives responded to a request for a brief meeting with leaders of the council, the umbrella group representing the 10 newspaper unions, and both left the meeting before the news conference smiling and trading jokes with some union officials.

Asked how efforts were going to beat the Sept. 15 deadline, one of them, Post General Manager Richard Nasti answered, ''Well. Things are good.''

The Post agreed to open its books to the unions, and McDonald said KPMG Peat Marwick accountants would pour over the accounts and report back to the unions by early next week.

He said round-the-clock negotiations with Post management representatives would begin Monday or Tuesday, although no hotel site had been secured yet.

Job security and other contract rules would be ''sacrosanct,'' and each union will negotiate separately over staffing and salary issues, said Theodore Kheel, a longtime newspaper contract mediator advising the union.

''Unless all of them agree, then the Post will go down the drain,'' he said.

Nonetheless, the Newspaper Guild, the newspaper's largest union, representing 337 editorial and advertising workers, voted at an angry meeting Thursday to reject Kalikow's first proposal for cuts that the union said totalled 46 percent in salaries and benefits.

Michael Alvino, president of the drivers union, said his 263 members had not voted on the propsoed givebacks yet, but had been asked to accept staffing and overtime cuts worth about 54 percent in costs.

Union officials raised concerns about the impact of contract concessions at the Post on the unions at the city's other three major newspapers, saying they would not cave in to unreasonable demands just to reach an agreement.

''If we happen to fail to reach agreement on the proposed concessions, we're not going to blame each other,'' said McDonald, who repeatedly contrasted the ''honest'' efforts by the Post with what he called a ''cynical'' spirit by the management of the Daily News, owned by Tribune Co., which has taken an aggressive bargaining stance toward its unions this year.

McDonald said he was optimistic, but acknowledged that ''everybody is still in shock.''

In the Post newsroom, one reporter said, ''The numbness hasn't left. Nobody still knows what's going to happen or if they'll be coming to work a week from Monday.''

Were the Post to be closed, it would leave the city - which once boasted as many as 12 daily newspapers - with just three major dailies - The News, The New York Times and New York Newsday. Since the 1960s, the city has seen the demise of a number of once-prominent papers, including the Mirror the Herald Tribune, the Journal-American, the World Telegram and Sun and the Long Island Press.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - Some analysts are disappointed by today's figures on UNemployment... five-point-six percent joblessness in August. That's the highest level in two years. But at least one economist says the Labor Department numbers show the American economy is ''holding its own'' despite the Middle East crisis.

South Africa's Ministry of Foreign Affairs says President de Klerk will be in Washington D-C September 24th to meet with President Bush. It will be the first official visit by a South African president to the United States in more than 40 decades of apartheid rule. Bush invited de Klerk to Washington after Pretoria adopted racial reforms last February.

Reports from Rangoon indicate Burma's military junta cited ''security reasons'' in the arrests of two acting leaders and four other members of a political party that swept recent elections. General Saw Maung says the arrests of the two elderly moderates was part of action being taken to prevent unrest.

The number of newly reported AIDS cases worldwide in August reached one of its largest monthly increases in recent years. The World Health Organization today said 10-thousand cases were reported last month. The United States accounts for almost half of the cumulative total... with African countries making up much of the rest.

A California fire official will get a 500-thousand-dollar bill for accidentally igniting a 100-acre wildfire when he burned tree branches at his San Jose home. Forestry officials say the blaze Luke Goodrich started burned two days, causing 400 firefighters to work overtime using six helicopters to help bring the blaze under control.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 7) UPI - Exiled Kuwaiti diplomats on Friday strongly defended the U.S.-led military buildup in the Persian Gulf, but said they would like the force to act quickly to restore Kuwait's ousted government.

The diplomats expressed bitterness and anger at some Arab states particularly Jordan, along with the Palestine Liberation Organization, for taking a soft line toward Iraq and its occupation of Kuwait.

''Military buildup in the gulf region became urgent after the Iraqi President (Saddam Hussein) unveiled his real faith and his expansionist plan, when he threatened Saudi Arabia after his troops invaded Kuwait,'' said one Cairo-based Kuwaiti diplomat who asked that his name not be used.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney disclosed Thursday that the United States had an estimated 100,000 U.S. troops in the region as part of Operation Desert Shield to counter Iraqi aggression.

In addition, Britain, France and several Arab states have sent naval and air troops to the region to beef up the American forces and other European Community states have sent warships. Japan has said it will send money to help support the operation.

Egyptian troops have been deployed at the Saudi-Kuwaiti border and would be the first to see combat if the standoff should deteriorate into a war.

Diplomatic sources said deposed Kuwaiti officials are pressuring Saudi Arabia and the U.S.-led Western forces to speed up the end of the crisis and force Iraq troops from the occupied emirate. But the Western forces apparently prefer to wait and see if a U.N.-imposed economic blockade against Iraq has the desired effect.

Iraqi authorities are holding male Westerners hostage at key economic and military installations in Iraq and Kuwait to guard against possible attack.

Kuwaitis worry they are getting lost as the Gulf crisis becomes larger and more complex.

''The hostage crisis became the major issue while the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait became secondary,'' one Kuwaiti diplomat said.

''In our view the major issue for us now is to liberate our country from the Iraqi occupation no matter the way it will take place,'' he said. ''We have to restore our legitimate government led by the Al Sabah family.''

''They (the U.S.-led force) are free to decide the means,'' he continued. ''It could be through a coup to topple Saddam Hussein or it could be a military strike to force Saddam to pull his troops out of Kuwait.

''In both cases wer are capable of rebuilding our country,'' he said.

The diplomat, along with Kuwaiti officials living in exile, expressed anger and bitterness over pro-Iraqi stands taken by Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

''What Saddam has done to Kuwait is similar to what Israel had done to the Palestinians,'' one Kuwaiti official in Cairo said.

''Why did (Jordan's) King Hussein and (PLO leader) Yasser Arafat side with Saddam Hussein,'' he asked. The diplomat accused the Palestinians living in Kuwait, where 400,000 were employed as workers, with aiding Iraqi soldiers after the invasion.

''They (the Palestinians) are acting as guides for the Iraqi soldiers,'' he said. ''They guided them to the homes of the members of the Al Sabah familiy. They are looting our homes and taking everything.''

Analysts say the Palestinians living in Kuwait will be the big loser in the Gulf crisis because they are dealing with a regime that could fall at any time.

''They (the Palestinians) are gambling on the Iraqi regime,'' the Kuwaiti official said. ''Nobody knows the future of this regime. A pro- Western one could come one day.''

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - The dollar closed mixed against major world currencies Friday after a government report on employment failed to sway the Federal Reserve Bank to lower interest rates.

Late in the New York trading session, the dollar was quoted at 1.568 German marks, up from 1.5565 Thursday, and at 140.00 Japanese yen, off from 140.65 Thursday.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.305 Swiss francs, up from 1.2975; 5.253 French francs, up from 5.2150; and 1,170.10 Italian lire, up from 1,161.50.

The British pound fell to $1.8930 from $1.9125 Thursday.

The much-anticipated Labor Department report on employment showed the U.S. civilian jobless rate climbed to 5.6 percent in August, the highest level in two years, as more factory and construction workers lost their jobs.

Many dealers had been anticipating a report so weak, however, as to prompt the Fed to ease monetary policy, analysts said.

''The interesting thing is what didn't happen,'' said Kevin Logan, chief economist in New York for Swiss Bank Corp.

''There was a lot of anticipation the Federal Reserve would ease its policy today based on anticipation of a weak employment report,'' he said. ''But the employment report was not as weak as some anticipated. It didn't show excessive weakness in the economy.

''Had the Fed eased, the dollar probably would have gone lower,'' he said. ''The lack of a Fed move and the relative stability of U.S. interest rates left the dollar essentially unchanged.''

In European trading, the U.S. dollar closed higher against the major European currencies.

The session began with all eyes on the pound, which at one point was more than two cents lower than the previous night's close of 1.9070, but it was the U.S. dollar which later dominated the scene.

The pound initially fell after heavy selling in the Far East overnight. Also pushing sterling down was a denial by the Chancellor of the Exchequer that he would be taking the unit into the European Exchange Rate Mechanism this weekend.

Along with the denial came a warning that inflation in Britain had not peaked yet and would breach the 10 percent level before falling later in the year.

The squeeze on the pound was halted with the release of the U.S employment figures.

In London, the pound closed down against the dollar at $1.8940 from $1.9070.

The dollar closed higher in Frankfurt, up to 1.5660 German marks from Thursday's close of 1.5590, and it was also higher in Zurich to 1.3055 Swiss francs from 1.3010.

The dollar was up in Paris, Brussels and Milan, at 5.2285 French francs vs. 5.2055, 32.05 Belgian francs vs. 32.01, and 1,163.95 Italian lire vs. 1,158.90.

Earlier in Tokyo, the U.S. dollar plunged to an 11-month low against the Japanese yen as a strong expectation of a U.S. interest-rate cut gripped investors.

The dollar closed at 140.25 yen, down from Thursday's close of 141.65 yen, the Bank of Japan said. It was the lowest closing since Oct. 2, 1989, when the dollar closed at 139.30 yen.

Dealers said the dollar's trend was still bearish after the five straight losing sessions since Monday. Market players had anticipated the Fed would cut its key interest rate to stimulate the economy.

Gold closed unchanged in Zurich at $387.50 an ounce, but was down in London at $387 an ounce compared to $389.75 Thursday.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold at $390.50 an ounce, up from $390 Thursday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled contract gold at $389.50 an ounce, off from $389.70.

Silver closed unchanged in Zurich at $4.80 an ounce, and was down in London at $4.80 an ounce, from $4.89 an ounce.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.83 an ounce, up from $4.795. Comex silver finished at $4.80 an ounce, up from $4.77.

(SEPT. 7) UPI - The unmanned Air Force Titan 4 rockets are the most powerful boosters in the American inventory after NASA's space shuttle.

Each of the 1.9-million pound, triple-barreled rockets is capable of placing 10,000-pound satellites into the high orbits favored by spy spacecraft.

The first Titan 4 was launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla., June 14, 1989 and a second was launched this past June. Sources said a third is being prepared at Cape Canaveral for launch later this month.

By 1995, up to nine Titan 4s will be launched a year from launch complex 41 at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station adjacent to the Kennedy Space Center in Florida, or from Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., where payloads weighing up to 32,000 pounds can be launched into low-Earth polar orbits.

Initial launch power comes from two large, solid-fuel boosters attached to the sides of a liquid-fueled first stage ''core'' vehicle. The boosters, which consist of seven segments, are 112 feet tall, 10 feet in diameter and weigh 692,000 pounds each. Burning about two minutes, each rocket generates 1.4 million pounds of push.

It was a solid propellant booster segment that exploded Friday at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave Desert.

The first stage of the core rocket, built by Martin Marietta, is 86.5 feet long, 10 feet in diameter and is equipped with dual nozzles. It burns aerozine 50 and nitrogen tetroxide for 200 seconds, producing a thrust of 548,000 pounds.

The Titan 4 rocket lifts off under the power of its two solid-fuel boosters. The first-stage core engine does not fire until shortly before booster separation.

SAN ANTONIO (SEPT. 7) UPI - Six of the 13 servicemen killed in an air crash while ferrying cargo to Saudi Arabia in Operation Desert Shield were buried Friday, remembered as devoted guardians of the American way of life.

''Freedom is not free,'' John Hagee, pastor of the non- denominational Cornerstone Church, said at the funeral for Staff Sgt. Daniel Garza of San Antonio.

''Daniel gave his last measure of devotion to preserve the American Dream '' Hagee said.

Four other funerals were held Friday at other churches throughout San Antonio, and another was held in Laredo in deep south Texas. On Thursday, two funerals were held in San Antonio and one in Houston.

Of 13 people killed when a military C-5A Galaxy cargo plane crashed shortly after takeoff from Ramstein Air Base in West Germany last week, nine were reservists from the 433rd Military Airlift Wing headquartered at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio. One of the four injured survivors also was from the 433rd.

Although the 433rd had not been called up into active duty, the men had volunteered to support Operation Desert Shield, ferrying cargo and troops aboard the C-5As to U.S. troops in Saudi Arabia. The plane that crashed was laden with supplies.

A memorial service for all the victims from the 433rd was scheduled Saturday morning at an airplane engine hangar at Kelly Air Force Base. Base officials said 2,500 people were expected to attend.

UNITED NATIONS (SEPT. 7) UPI - As some countries sought to help their citizens trapped in the Persian Gulf region by sending them medicine and foodstuffs, the United States said Friday it opposes the sending of food to Iraq because that nation has no urgent need for such shipments.

A senior U.S. official in New York said U.N. sanctions clearly prohibit exports of foodstuffs to Iraq, which became the target of a worldwide trade and military embargo after its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

The occupation of Kuwait by more than 100,000 Iraqi troops triggered an exodus of tens of thousands of third-country nationals seeking to return home. But they were not able to do so because of a lack of transportation and forced to live in refugee camps, mostly in Jordan.

India, China and Iran have demanded that the United Nations allow humanitarian assistance to the refugees. Iraq, on the other hand, wanted to trade the refugees for food that should come with planes or ships intended to bring the refugees back to their countries.

The issue of food shipments as humanitarian assistance has forced the U.N. Security Council's sanctions committee to ask Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to send fact-finding missions to the gulf to determine the food situation there.

''No individual countries have the prerogative to decide for themselves,'' the U.S. official told reporters after the five permanent members of the Security Council met to discuss implementation of the sanctions, imposed Aug. 6 to punish Iraq for refusing to withdraw from Kuwait.

The U.N. sanctions allow medicine and foodstuffs to be shipped to Iraq or Kuwait for ''humanitarian circumstances.''

The U.S. official said the permanent members have been considering additional steps to tighten the implementation of the sanctions, including an aerial blockade and a reduction of Iraqi diplomatic personnel accredited to the United Nations, but he said talks on those steps have not ''crystallized.''

The official said the 15-nation Security Council will await for Perez de Cuellar's assessment of the food situation in Iraq and Kuwait before deciding what kind of food should be sent to these countries.

But he said, ''There is no current food emergency in Iraq.'' The official said his assessment was based on Iraq's own statements that its food supplies can last many months.

He said food should be sent through international aid agencies and not by commercial means to thwart the Iraqi government from diverting the needed supplies to its army and people.

India, which has more than 200,000 of its people working in Iraq and Kuwait, asked the U.N. for authorization to send food and medicine in planes or ships that will take the refugees home.

The sanctions committee, composed of all 15 member-states of the Security Council, has met regularly to compile a list of countries that have abided by the sanctions and those that needed help as a consequence of the sanctions, like Jordan and Egypt.

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (SEPT. 7) UPI - A vandal cut four television cables Friday, briefly blacking out the Phil Donahue show during a live remote broadcast on the recent serial killings that have terrorized the college town.

The picture went black for only a few seconds but the audio portion of the program was not affected, officials said.

''What happened is that a young man of about 35 years of age on a bicycle stopped, had clippers and clipped ... (our) cables. Five of our six cameras went out. We had only one camera, and there was black on the screen for about seven seconds. For the next 10 minutes we were using only one camera before the other cameras were hooked up and working again. We do not know who the person was,'' said Karin Lippert, Donahue spokeswoman.

''Obviously, they knew what they were doing,'' said Matt Benedict, remote coordinator for FNF Productions, the Tampa company handling the local production.

''There were mixed feelings about having a television show ... in the city at this time. Many people at Gainesville felt that it was time to heal, for the city to heal and to do so without the eye of the camera there,'' said Lippert.

It has been a difficult week for Donahue in Gainesville. Several city and University of Florida officials refused to appear on the broadcast. One was University of Florida President John Lombardi, who called it in bad taste.

A letter to the editor appearing in Friday's Gainesville Sun urged people not to watch the program.

''We may not be able to prevent the broadcast, but we can and must show our outrage by refusing to be involved. ... Enough is enough! Let us unite in not welcoming Phil Donahue and others in further degrading our community,'' wrote Mary Dean.

''You've invaded our town with satellite feeds and bad attitudes,'' the student newspaper, The Independent Florida Alligator, charged in an editorial earlier this week aimed at all reporters and photographers who have descended on Gainesville.

Five college students, four from the University of Florida and one from Santa Fe Community College, were found stabbed to death in their apartments during a 48-hour period between Aug. 26 and Aug. 28. At least three of the bodies were mutilated and two of the students had also been bludgeoned.

Also declining to appear on the Donahue show were Police Chief Wayland Clifton Jr., Mayor Courtland Collier and Michael Browne, student body president of the University of Florida.

''The Donahue show, like most talk shows, is basically entertainment. Mr. Donahue is very professional, maybe the best in his business. However, I feel it's not in the benefit of the students I'm supposed to represent or the community, and I felt by appearing on the show, I would be being a hypocrite for all the things I've been talking to the media about for the last two weeks. It's simply not in good taste,'' Browne said.

About the time the picture went black, Donahue acknowledged to his television audience that several local officials had refused to appear.

''You cannot be criticized for your decision. I ask you not to criticize us. I promise you this: Our purpose here is to provide information and ... insure that this program in no way enhances the pain that must already be felt by the loved ones of the victims, not to mention the people of this community.''

A police report indicated the vandal sliced through four camera cables on the back of an FNF production truck.

''There was one camera cable that was not cut for some reason that was overlooked, so they put that camera on the air until they could run more camera cable,'' said Benedict.

MIAMI (SEPT. 7) UPI - Hurricane Isidore and its 85 mph winds swirled harmlessly in open Atlantic waters Friday, but forecasters predicted it could strengthen as it marched on a north-northwesterly path.

At noon EDT, Isidore was centered near latitude 19.2 north, longitude 38.1 west, or about 850 miles west of the Cape Verde Islands off the African coast, National Hurricane Center specialist Max Mayfield said.

The hurricane was moving north-northwest at near 12 mph, and Mayfield predicted it would continue that direction for the next day, slowing down some by Saturday.

Maximum sustained winds were near 85 mph, up 5 mph from earlier Friday, and some strengthing was expected during the next 24 hours. Hurricane force winds extended as far as 35 miles from the center, with tropical storm force winds extending as far as 200 miles.

It was too soon to predict whether Isidore would turn north or take a westerly course toward the Caribbean islands, Mayfield said. A northerly course would take the storm toward cooler waters and out of harm's way. If the hurricane were to turn west, it still would be at least five days away from land, he said.

Isidore, the ninth named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, developed from a tropical depression Wednesday. Three other storms - Bertha, Diana and Gustav - have grown to hurricane strength this season.

Forecasters said the nine-storm total was two or three more storms than average for this time of year, but the impact of those storms has been minimal. The season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (SEPT. 7) UPI - A segment of a test version of an Air Force Titan 4 rocket booster was dropped as it was being moved and exploded Friday, killing one person, injuring two workers, and generating a huge toxic cloud visible for miles.

Edwards Air Force Base officials said the Advanced Solid Rocket Motor was being transferred from one location to another at the base's Aeronautics Laboratory when it was accidentally dropped and exploded at 10:45 a.m.

An Air Force official at the base said one person was missing. However, the Pentagon said one victim was killed. A lab spokeswoman said two people were taken to a base hospital with injuries. Their conditions were not immediately known.

Facilities surrounding the lab, situated on a 65-square-mile area of the base, were evacuated as a precaution. The damage was contained to the lab and the fire was extinguished about 1 p.m.

The huge toxic cloud, laced with hydrochloric acid released by the booster's burning fuel, rose above the site and could be seen for more than 30 miles.

Shirley Dewar, a resident of nearby Boron, said: ''The white smoke had made a mushroom-like cloud and then there was black smoke after that.''

Her daughter, Renea Green, added, ''I just saw the cloud of smoke coming up from the mountain. There were red flames underneath the ''the mo

Other witnesses said a bright orange geyser of flame reaching about 100 feet into the air accompanied the blast.

The lab spokeswoman, Airman 1st Class Michelle Orosco, said the cloud was moving away from populated areas and at a high speed and altitude so that it posed no immediate threat to residents in the area.

Edwards is located in a sparsely populated area of the Mojave Desert, about 100 northeast of Los Angeles.

Police cleared highways in the area as a precaution.

The Titan 4 is the nation's largest unmanned launch vehicle, ordered by the Air Force after the Challenger disaster grounded NASA's shuttle fleet.

It consists of a two-stage liquid-fueled vehicle and two solid propellant boosters attached to the sides of the liquid-fueled rocket. The Titan 4's maiden flight was in June 1989 and its second launch occurred June 8. On both occasions, the rocket lifted off from Cape Canaveral Air Force

Station near Florida's Kennedy Space Center, carrying classified military payloads.

One unidentified worker at Edwards, quoted by a Los Angeles area radio station, said, ''I was getting ready to eat lunch and the guys came in and said, 'Get out, there's a toxic cloud.'''

There was no immediate word from the maker of the rocket, Martin Marietta in Denver.

In Washington, Air Force Brig. Gen. Donald Hard, a spokesman for the Air Force's space programs, said the toxic cloud ''was not enough to be of major health consequences.''

He said the explosion occurred ''around a test stand where we were moving a solid rocket motor segment that would be used with the Titan 4 test vehicle ... (and the) solid material in there ignited and burned.''

Each Titan booster, which is 112 feet tall and is designed to fire for about two minutes, consists of seven segments. The Air Force is developing an advanced booster for the Titan and it was a test version that was involved in the accident.

The California Highway Patrol closed the eastbound lanes of Highway 58 and Highway 395 where they intersect at Four Corners, east of the base. The roads were opened 30 minutes later, after the plume had dissipated, said CHP Officer Sandi Palmer.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - The Dow industrials registered little change this week and trading remained very light as the unsettled situation in the Persian Gulf hung over the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 23.26 Friday to end the week at 2619.55, edging up 5.19, or 0.2 percent, for the week.

Among broader market indexes, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index added 0.62 to end the week at 323.40 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index rose 0.54 to close the week at 177.51.

Advances led declines 909-896 among the 2,131 NYSE issues traded this week. Weekly Big Board volume totaled 463,003,660 shares, compared with 639,340,540 a week earlier and 621,258,120 shares a year ago.

Trading never really picked up this week after the Labor Day holiday Monday. Analysts attributed this to nervousness about the Persian Gulf crisis, and, for the most part, stock prices responded inversely to movements in oil prices.

Stocks edged lower Tuesday in another session of record-low volume for the year, as some late program buying wiped out sharp losses in the Dow industrials.

Oil prices soared to about $29 a barrel as hopes waned for a diplomatic resolution to the crisis after U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar said last weekend he had not made headway in negotiations with Iraq's foreign minister.

By Wednesday, volume finally topped 100 million shares for the first time since the previous Thursday, and stocks gained even though oil prices rose about 77 cents a barrel, as investors took their cue from the bond market.

On Thursday, oil prices went back on the warpath, sending stocks tumbling, but analysts assigned little significance to the move since trading in stocks was so thin. Oil closed up $1.66 on the day to $31.43, breaking the $30- and $31-a-barrel marks.

But certain market sectors and stocks were hit especially hard in Thursday's sharp decline, with weak August sales reports making it a tough day for major retailers. In the technology sector, Motorola plunged more than 10 percent amid reports that analysts at several brokerages have expressed concerns about the strength of its business in a weakening economy.

Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp., said what happened to Motorola is a sign of how nervous the market still is, with the Mideast crisis still unresolved and the Federal Reserve standing pat on interest rates even as the eocnomy shows further signs of weakness.

''That indicates we're still on thin ice, still vulnerable,'' said Johnson. ''It means the market still has not reached a level where it has discounted all the possible bad news that's out there.''

But despite earnings-related selloffs in a few companies, Johnson said the market's focus remained squarely on the region where bad news is most likely to come from these days: the Mideast.

''That's still keeping most investors at bay,'' he said. ''No one wants to assume new positions or buy stocks when that cloud hangs over the market. It's very hard to imagine how we can put together anything sustainable till its resolved.

''There are moments of hope - like when (U.N. Secretary-General Javier) Perez de Cuellar goes to the Mideast and negotiates, and now everyone's looking at the Helsinki summit this weekend (between President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev). But with every day the chance of a face-saving settlement looks dimmer, and this is weighing on the market,'' Johnson concluded.

Alfred Goldman, market strategist at A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis agreed that the market remains hostage to the actions of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

''We're trapped by Saddam Hussein,'' he said.

Goldman also acknowledged that Wall Street is worried about the outlook for corporate earnings, which he said is deteriorating.

Expecting both higher interest rates and higher inflation, Goldman said: ''When you surround this with the serious unknowables created by the Mideast, people step back from the market. And the trend is down.''

On the trading floor this week, General Electric was the most active issue down 1 3/8 to 60 5/8.

AT&T followed, off 1 1/4 to 31 1/8. Toys ''R'' Us was third, off 2 1/4 to 23 1/8 as analysts were said to cut earnings estimates for the company.

Among other blue chips, IBM jumped 3 5/8 to 105 1/2, Boeing lost 1 1/4 to 47, Exxon rose 7/8 to 50 7/8 and General Motors fell 2 1/8 to 37 5/8. Other oil stocks, spurred by the rise in oil prices, also did well.

On the week, Motorola - a market leader in recent weeks - plunged 10 5/8 to 61 1/4.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index rose 0.38 to close Friday at 323.77. Declines led advances 403-343 among the 955 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 40,071,885 shares, compared with 58,692,010 traded a week earlier and 51,027,125 traded in the same week a year ago.

Salomon's put warrants on the Tokyo market's Nikkei index led the Amex actives, up 1 3/8 to 17.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 0.83 to end the week at 380.38.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 7) UPI - A chartered Iraqi Airways airliner carrying 171 American women, men and children arrived Friday in Jordan from Iraq, a U.S. Embassy spokesman in Jordan said. The flight was the first in a U.S. plan to airlift some of the 2,200 Americans out of Kuwait on chartered ''flight of mercy'' planes.

There was no word on how long the full airlift of Americans out of the Iraqi-occupied emirate would take, but the U.S. officials said the air bridge would initially evacuate 1,300 U.S. women and children.

There was no immediate explanation for the reported presence of five men on the chartered flight to Amman, Jordan. Iraq has said foreign men would not be allowed to leave and will be used as shields against attack at strategic sites.

The flight flew from Kuwait City to Baghdad and arrived in Amman, Jordan, about 9:45 a.m. EDT.

The State Department said a second U.S.-chartered Iraqi Airways Boeing 707 would airlift Americans out of Kuwait Saturday and they will join the Americans already in Amman for a flight aboard a U.S. military Boeing 747 that is to arrive in Charleston, S.C., Sunday.

More ''mercy'' flights are expected to fly out of Kuwait over the weekend. U.S. officials are pressing Iraq to allow American men to leave as well as the women and children that Iraq says may go. But Baghdad Radio Friday said about 900 U.S. male nationals were still considered ''guests'' and would not be allowed out of the region.

A U.S. State Department official said no access was permitted to an American who was shot in the arm by an Iraqi soldier in Kuwait Wednesday and taken to a hospital in Baghdad Thursday.

A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Jordan said the freed Americans arriving on the Iraqi Airways jet looked ''visibly exhausted.''

''I have had a terrible experience,'' Patricia Hammer, who is divorced from a Kuwaiti, told reporters on arrival at Jordian's Queen Alia airport. ''We were in hiding for five weeks. Palestinian friends brought (us) food at their expense.''

Another unidentified freed hostage, asked if she had been mistreated, responded, ''If you consider being a hostage and having to hide being mistreated, then yes.''

More British and Canadian nationals arrived in their home countries Friday.

About 250 freed British women and children arrived at London's Gatwick Airport from the gulf early in the day, the biggest group to get out since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait five weeks ago. Aboard the British Airways jumbo jet were 78 children and 20 babies, many of whom were in a bus convoy that left Kuwait for Baghdad on Tuesday.

A planeload of 133 people, including 11 Americans, arrived in Toronto Friday. They were part of a group of Canadian, American and Irish citizens who fled Kuwait City and Baghdad a day earlier. The Americans were met by U.S. officials and were bound for home.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker flew to the United Arab Emirates Friday, one of several gulf Arab oil producers who have requested U.S. military aid to deter Iraqi aggression.

Earlier Friday, Baker held talks in the Saudi resort of Taif with Kuwait's toppled emir. Arab diplomats in Cairo said Kuwaiti Emir Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah pledged billions of dollars to maintain the U.S. military presence in the gulf.

The diplomats also said the emir is pressing the United States to adopt a first-strike option against Iraq to liberate Kuwait.

Saudi Arabian King Fahd was reported to have pledged billions to maintain U.S. troops in his kingdom. He will reportedly pay for items such as fuel, water and transportation, but neither U.S. officials nor the Saudis would say exactly how much money Saudi Arabia would contribute. The U.S. operation in the Saudi kingdom was expected to cost $6 billion by the end of the year.

Baker was scheduled to fly to Cairo late Friday for talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid. He was also expected to hold talks with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak in Alexandria.

While in Saudi Arabia, Baker dismissed signs from Iran, India and China that those countries were about to break ranks with the West and send food and medicines to Iraq on humanitarian grounds.

''It is the position of the United States of America that humanitarian exemptions (to U.N. sanctions) certainly should not and cannot run to commercial food sales,'' Baker said.

''We take note as well that the Iraqi leadership themselves (who said) they have sufficient food for quite a number of months. So it is our view at least, that we are not at the point of invoking any ... exception for humanitarian cargo.''

U.S.-led naval forces are imposing a naval blockade on Iraq and have already turned back a number of ships headed for Iraqi or Jordanian ports with cargo for Baghdad.

The Indian government acknowledged Friday, after several days of denial, that Baghdad has refused to allow some 180,000 Indians to leave the gulf region unless cargos of food are flown in on the planes intended to ferry the Indian nationals home.

(SEPT 7) UPI - Rumors Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had been ousted in a coup forced crude-oil prices down as much as $2 a barrel Friday when traders elected to take profits on recent gains after the rumors turned out false.

In the previous five trading sessions, U.S. crude had risen $5.51 a barrel or 21.2 percent, to $31.43 a barrel on concerns that the Persian Gulf crisis would become a war.

Starting in Asia and Europe, markets opened lower Friday, on rumors that first surfaced on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, and stayed lower despite the expectations of some traders that they would resume their upward march.

''It was profit taking before the weekend,'' explained Martin Cherkes, vice president of commodity risk management for Continental Bank in Chicago.

''There's a psychological barrier at $32 a barrel,'' he said. Oil companies have told him ''we'll sell as much as we can at $32,'' Cherkes said.

Selling resulted because traders ''felt uncomfortable being in buy positions going into the weekend at these high levels,'' agreed Randall Rothenberg of Dean Witter Reynolds' International Energy Futures Group in New York.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended Friday at $30.04 a barrel, down $1.39 on the day but still up $2.72 a barrel on the week.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent plunged $2.25 to $30.40 a barrel, $2.20 above last Friday's close.

''Traders remembered that, two weeks ago, they got killed on (the following)Monday by remaining heavy in buy positions over the weekend,'' said Michael McDermott of PaineWebber Inc. in New York.

On Aug. 27, crude plunged by $4 a barrel and gasoline by 17 cents a gallon -both records - when Iraq raised hopes of a peace settlement by ordering its ship captains not to contest a U.S. naval blockade.

Brent normally sells at a lesser price than WTI because of the pull of the huge U.S. market and the need to discount shipping costs.

But since mid-August, Brent has been higher than U.S. crude, apparently as a result of Europe being hit harder by the U.N. embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude imposed after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped primarily to the Far East - plummeted $1.20 to $26.60 a barrel, $2.10 higher than a week earlier.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery ended the day down 2.01 cents at 93.06 cents a gallon, up 6.88 cents on the week.

October home-heating oil plummeted 4.26 cents to 83.98 cents a gallon, still ahead 7.42 cents on the week.

The week's petroleum product increases appeared to be largely the result of the October contract rising to the level of the September contract, which expired a week ago.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI lost $1.45 to $30 a barrel, a gain of $2.70 a barrel on the week.

Sun Co., based in Radnor, Pa., along with Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp., and Du Pont's Conoco Inc. subsidiary in Houston, lowered their posted price for crude at the wellhead to $28.50 a barrel for WTI. Sun's reduction was $1.25; Conoco and Marathon's were $1.50 a barrel.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - Gabriela Sabatini, still looking for her first big breakthrough victory, will receive another golden opportunity Saturday when she plays her long-time nemesis, Steffi Graf, for the U.S. Open championship.

Sabatini, coming from behind virtually all afternoon, finally wore down Mary Joe Fernandez, 7-5, 5-7, 6-3, Friday in 2 hours and 43 minutes to reach a Grand Slam final for only the second time.

In sharp contrast, Graf required merely 43 minutes to squash Arantxa Sanchez Vicario, 6-1, 6-2.

Graf has a career record of 18-3 over Sabatini, her sometime doubles partner. While Graf is in quest of her 10th Grand Slam championship, Sabatini's only previous chance in a final came in 1988 when she lost a three-setter to the 21-year-old West German in this same championship.

''I really want to win and I think I'm ready to beat Steffi,'' Sabatini said. ''I think I'm ready to win, we'll see tomorrow.

''Being very tough mentally will be the toughest part tomorrow. Right from the beginning I'll try to take control of the match. I'm really eager to win the tournament.''

Sabatini played a gambling match against Fernandez, a 19-year-old Floridian seeded eighth. She continually charged the net behind her sliced backhand on service return, totaling 92 approaches on which she won 56 points.

''Maybe I rushed too much when she was coming in instead of just going for a spot and hitting it,'' said Fernandez, who lost the Australian Open final to Graf. ''It's a process of learning. The more I do it (reach the semifinals of a major) the better I'll become at it.

''I didn't take advantage of the times I was up on her serve. I didn't put enough pressure on her when I was up 0-15 and 0-30.''

Sabatini fell behind two service breaks in each of the first two sets. Still, she managed to win the opening set, which extended for 70 minutes, on breaks in the sixth, eighth and 10th games.

After falling behind 3-0 in the second set, the tall Argentine again clawed even at 4-4, only to allow Fernandez to break again for 5- 4. Although Sabatini got the break back, Fernandez followed with yet another break and held at love to even the match.

Following 12 service breaks in the first two sets, there was only one in the third, and Sabatini claimed that one with a pair of backhand drop volleys.

At 30-15 on her serve in the ninth game, Sabatini dove to the left for a winning backhand volley, and on match point Fernandez was wide with a forehand.

''I was down many times and I kept fighting,'' said Sabatini, 20. ''I played well when I had to play well.''

Sabatini also was extended for 2 1-2 hours in her previous match, against Leila Meskhi, but contends she is physically ready for Saturday's final. Her coach, Carlos Kirmayr, agreed, saying, ''She can stay here five hours.''

A bittersweet year pocked with shame, soreness and unaccustomed defeat may yet develop into a happy ending for Graf.

There was a scandal involving her father and a German model, a fractured thumb in a freak ski accident, a severe sinus condition that required surgery, and ultimately there were the defeats.

After winning the Australian Open in January, her eighth Grand Slam of the previous nine, Graf lost the French Open final to Monica Seles and was beaten in the Wimbledon semifinals by Zina Garrison.

''It was a tough time, I wanted to get it over with,'' Graf said Friday, a half hour beating Sanchez. ''That's why it means a lot to me to be playing like this.

''It would be something special for me (to win the Open). Nothing really mattered much to me for a long time, and now this means a whole lot to me.''

Graf was most disturbed at the scandal involving her father, Peter, which was played up big in the German press. She admitted this weighed on her mind when she should have been concentrating on tennis.

''I never wanted to go through it, and never will,'' the 21-year- old top seed answered when asked if all the adversity had made her stronger. ''Nobody does, I think.''

With her father sitting in the guest's box, the two-time defending champion allowed nothing to disturb her Friday, least of all Sanchez's futile attempts to make a match of it.

''The way I was playing, I couldn't do much better, so I'm happy,'' Graf stated. ''For a change I'm perfect (health-wise). It's good to know I'm physically fit.

''I'll be happy if it (her game) gets better in the final, but I couldn't play much better than this match. I felt very good.''

The men's semifinals also are on tap for Saturday with second seed Boris Becker, the defending champion, going against No. 4 Andre Agassi, and No. 12 Pete Sampras playing unseeded John McEnroe.

Graf, seeking to add a third successive U.S. Open crown, toyed with her sixth-seeded opponent, completing her business in 54 minutes. She also displayed a more aggressive attack than usual, approaching the net 23 times and winning 20 of the points.

''Today she hits an unbelievable forehand, everything to the lines,'' Sanchez said. ''She was serving very well, and I didn't have a chance.

''She is playing better than in Paris and Wimbledon. She has the confidence in all her shots, she's playing very well, and I think she'll win the tournament. I try to put the first serve in or I know she'll kill me with her forehand. She pressured a lot and I couldn't do anything.''

After Sanchez held service in the second game, Graf ran off seven games in a row, carrying her to a 2-0 lead in the second set. Sanchez held at 15 in the third game before Graf won three more games.

Sanchez, an 18-year-old Spaniard, now has lost to Graf in eight of nine career meetings, her lone triumph coming in the 1989 French Open final.

''When you beat her one time you think you can beat her again,'' Sanchez said. ''But that (Paris) was a different surface, it's slower, and I could get to her forehand.''

Graf, 21, has dropped one set in reaching the final for the fourth consecutive year, and in her last three victories she has yielded merely 10 games.

''I didn't make mistakes from the beginning or in practice,'' Graf said. ''I felt good and I knew I would get into a rhythm against her.

''I expected a tougher match.''

In reaching the final, Graf is assured of earning $175,000. This amounts thus far to $29,560.81 per hour, or $581.40 per minute.

Sanchez had only one break point in the match, that coming on a Graf double fault in the fifth game of the opening set. Graf saved it with a service winner, and after four deuces she was able to hold.

The only other time Sanchez reached deuce on Graf's serve was in the sixth game of the second set after Graf had been ahead 40-0.

The South African team of Pieter Aldrich and Danie Visser, seeded second, won the men's doubles championship with a 6-2, 7-6 (7-3), 6-2 victory over Americans Paul Annacone and David Wheaton.

Aldrich and Visser, who also won the Australian crown, split $142,861. Annacone and Wheaton, who were unseeded, receive a total of $71,431.

CAIRO, EGYPT (SEPT. 7) UPI - Secretary of State James Baker received a pledge Friday from Saudi Arabia of billions of dollars to bankroll the cost of sustaining Washington's anti-Iraq mission, and then met with the toppled emir of Kuwait before flying to Egypt for talks with President Hosni Mubarak.

Baker arrived in Cairo shortly after 9 p.m. for his meeting Saturday with Mubarak.

The U.S. secretary of state was to have met with his Egyptian counterpart, Issmat Abdul Maguid, but Maguid was injured in a car accident earlier in the evening as he was heading to Cairo for the scheduled meeting.

The Egyptian newspaper Akbar al-Youm said the car in which Maguid was riding blew a tire and flipped four times. It said the foreign minister was hospitalized with injuries to his shoulder and a concussion.

Baker was in Saudi Arabia Friday morning where he met with Kuwaiti officials at the mountain resort of Taif. He flew from there to the United Arab Emirates to brief officials on the Persian Gulf situation and the upcoming summit between President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

The American delegation arrived at the hill resort of Taif about 10 a.m. and opened discussions with senior officials of the government in exile and Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah.

After Saudi Arabia, Baker visited the United Arab Emirates for talks with its leaders Friday before he boarded a flight to Cairo for talks with Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel Meguid later the same day.

Baker was expected to hold talks with Mubarak in Egypt's Mediterranean city of Alexandria Saturday morning before heading for Helsinki later the same day where Bush will hold summit talks Sunday with Gorbachev.

Before leaving Jeddah Friday, Baker had a final working breakfast with King Fahd that followed a two-hour session he had with the monarch Thursday about their combined strategy to push Iraqi occupation troops out of Kuwait.

Baker said before leaving Jeddah that he did not believe Baghdad was eligible for exemptions to a U.N. trade embargo that has a clause allowing for the imports of medicine and emergency food.

''It is the position of the United States of America that humanitarian exemptions certainly should not and cannot run to commercial food sales,'' he said. ''We take note as well that the Iraqi leadership themselves, they have sufficient food for quite a number of months. So, it is our view at least, that we are not at the point of invoking any ... exception for humanitarian cargo.''

U.S. officials said Saudi Arabia had agreed to pay billions of dollars to fund Washington's daily costs for items such as water, fuel and transport vital to the U.S. military deployment, now exceeding 70,000 ground personnel.

The officials said an international campaign would also be launched to procure donations from gulf states and other nations such as Japan, which benefit from the U.S. military presence in the vital oil-rich region.

Baker, in the news briefing also attended by Foreign Minister Saud al

Faizal, called for nations to show their support for the U.N. embargo by giving money to the anti-Iraq effort.

''It is important that we maintain the unprecedented international consensus. One way of course to do that is for people of each of those countries participating in that international consensus to feel that the responsibility of carrying out the United Nations resolutions is going to be equitably shared.''

Saudi and U.S. officials denied reports that Baker had proposed a NATO-style defense scheme as a security framework for the gulf region should U.S. forces eventually withdraw.

''It is for the people in the region to help themselves,'' a senior Saudi official said. ''Definitely all of this depends on what happens as the outcome of the crisis.''

The official said neither side finalized how much would be paid by the kingdom for maintenance of the U.S. troops, or the mechanics of payment, which one U.S. official said could be in ''cash or kind.''

''We didn't nail down dollar amounts. We talked about orders of magnitude '' said the U.S. official. ''We are talking billion-dollar figures.''

''You can assume that the Saudis will do their fair share,'' the Saudi official said. ''Everybody has to pitch in ... there is no lack of donors ... it is responsibility sharing.''

The U.S. cost, estimated at $6 billion this year, would cover the whole gamut of expenses in dispatching vast amounts of men and war material halfway around the planet.

Tokyo last week pledged $1 billion to assist nations that have been hard hit by the crisis, but the White House may ask even more and recently suggested U.S. loans to Egypt totaling about $7 billion may be written off in acknowledgment of Cairo's support.

''There are going to be contributions from a lot of other countries,'' a U.S. official said. ''The figures could change a week from now but we would like to cover the incremental costs to the United States.''

He said he did not know how Japan's contribution would be spent, but explained that ''one way or another there is going to be a big international effort to help the United States government.''

The official said both sides talked about ways of fine-tuning a campaign to isolate Baghdad for its Aug. 2 invasion and subsequent annexation of Kuwait. The possibility of imposing an air blockade against Iraq was discussed, but not in great detail, he said.

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (SEPT. 7) UPI - The attorney for Power Securities Corp., a penny-stock company banned in New York now being sued by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, said Friday his client will ''vigorously contest'' the charges.

Attorney Arthur Salzberg of Washington, who represents Power and chief executive Richard Marchese, added he had not reviewed the charges in full, but his clients had cooperated fully with the SEC's 18-month probe of the company.

The SEC filed its lawsuit in Denver Thursday, charging Power, Allied Capital Group Inc., and a dozen current and former officers with stock fraud associated with illegal insider trading.

The SEC is seeking repayment of $20.7 million to investors and more than $3 million in penalties.

Power Securities, formed by Marchese, a Rochester native, and headquartered in Las Vegas, had thousands of clients in western New York. The state attorney general's office got an injunction in February 1989 forcing Power to close its New York operations.

The SEC accuses Power and Allied of of charging investors more than $9.4 million in excess markups on the low-priced penny stocks of six companies. The commission also says the companies cheated clients by making it hard to liquidate their holdings or withdraw cash.

Among other things, the SEC said the company engaged in activity called ''flipping,'' in which which brokers ''simultaneously recommend to customers the sale of one security and the purchase of another for the purpose of increasing commissions.''

The 'flips' occurred when the brokers offered to buy a customer's security at a premium price higher than the bid price in order to induce the customer to sell and purchase new securities, the SEC said.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - Manville Corp. said Friday it has agreed in principle to restructure the trust fund established to pay health claims by victims exposed to asbestos products formerly made by the company.

The restructuring, which was ordered by a federal judge, provides additional funding for the trust, said Leon Silverman, an advisor appointed by a federal bankruptcy court.

The refinancing plan includes a revised payment schedule, under which distributions after the second year are subject to Manville's performance and financing, and a stock conversion that will result in the trust owning about 80 percent of Manville's outstanding common stock.

The trust now holds about 50 percent of the common stock.

The refinancing plan continues the 20 percent of net company profits to be paid to the trust each year.

The trust announced earlier this year it was unable to pay current asbestos personal-injury claimants for more than 20 years.

The trust faces more than 130,000 claims, and ran out of cash in settling the first 23,000 cases.

Assets of the trust, which was formed as part of Manville's 1986 bankruptcy court reorganization, consist mostly of Manville stock.

Two year later, the Denver-based company emerged from bankruptcy protection that was brought on by numerous asbestos liabilities.

On orders of U.S. District Court Judge Jack Weinstein of Brooklyn, company representatives and Silverman developed the plan, Manville said in a statement.

''We are satisfied the understanding that has been reached between the parties is in the best interest of all our shareholders, and sets the framework around which the restructuring of the trust can continue,'' said Tom Manville, Manville chairman and chief executive officer.

John Sawhill, chairman of the board of trustees of the trust, said in a statement the trustees were pleased with the agreement in principle.

''The trustees believe the proposed funding will assist the trust in meeting commitments to beneficiaries and will allow flexibility to maximize the value of the trust's assets,'' Sawhill said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - Mexico and the United States will start official free trade negotiations in mid-1991, taking a giant step forward in the move to bring the two economies closer together, Mexico's ambassador said Friday.

Mexican Ambassador to the United States Gustavo Petricioli said that President Carlos Salinas de Gortari took a decisive step by sending a formal petition for negotiations to President Bush last week.

Congress will take several months to authorize negotiations, which should begin by the middle of next year.

Petricioli, a former finance minister, said he was enthusiastic about the possibilities that free trade could offer to Mexico and the United States, whose bilateral trade reached $53 billion in 1989.

Bush and Salinas, who met in Washington in June, jointly announced negotiations would include trade barriers, tariffs, investments, goods, services, copyrights and trademarks.

U.S. Embassy officials in Mexico City said recently the talks could last up to five years, adding that the process would be long and tedious because of the great number of issues involved in forming such an agreement between two countries that share a 1,933-mile border.

Petricioli said his country has discovered that ''there is life after the foreign debt,'' and has been reorganizing its economy to compete successfully on world markets.

Mexico has a $95 billion debt owed to creditor banks that was recently renegotiated under the U.S.-backed Brady Plan.

A major part of the country's economic adjustment program was to end the almost complete dependency on oil-produced income, which at one point made up 75 percent of the country's incoming funds. Petricioli said Mexico now receives 35 percent of its income from oil sales.

Petricioli said Mexico is convinced that competition in international exports ''will be the name of the game'' in the future and is preparing itself to widen trade not only with the United States but also with Latin America and the rest of the world.

He added that reaching an agreement ''will not be easy'', but said the opening of export markets is crucially important to Mexico, so that the country can increase jobs and take advantage of its growing labor force.

A free trade agreement could provide up to 1 million more jobs a year, Petricioli said.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 7) UPI - President Bush departed Friday night for a superpower summit meeting in Helsinki, Finland, where U.S. officials said he will ask Mikhail Gorbachev to withdraw all Soviet military advisers from Iraq.

The officials said Bush also will urge Gorbachev, who supports a worldwide economic embargo against Saddam Hussein, to have the Soviet Union play a more direct role in the multinational forces arrayed against the Iraqi leader.

Bush was scheduled to arrive in Helsinki at 4 a.m. EDT Saturday for five hours of hastily arranged talks on Sunday with Gorbachev, the third meeting of the two leaders in the last 10 months.

The Persian Gulf crisis marks the first time since World War II that the two superpowers have been on the same side in a regional conflict, and Bush wants to build on the new union.

''We have reached a turning point in history, one in which we have a chance to define a new and more peaceful international order,'' Bush said in a written statement to reporters accompanying him on the eight- hour flight to Helsinki.

As Soviet and American officials describe the summit, it will be relatively informal, in the pattern of the meeting at Malta in December 1989 or the informal talks at the Camp David presidential retreat that followed their formal sessions in Washington last spring.

A senior American official, speaking on the basis of no further identification, told reporters Friday that the Gulf crisis and the international effort to isolate Saddam will be the main topic of the meeting, but not the only one.

The official said that a photograph of the two leaders together after agreeing on further cooperative action to force a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from occupied Kuwait ''would be a very helpful signal'' to send to Saddam.

West German political leader Oskar LaFontaine, who met with Bush at the White House Friday, said the president ''pointed out that he was trying to coordinate gulf policy with Gorbachev and ... that he's well aware of the historic cooperation that exists between the Soviet Union and Iraq.''

The U.S. official said it would be useful but not essential for the Soviets to send ground forces to join the 27 nations that have sent, or intend to send, forces to the Persian Gulf. More than 100,000 U.S. troops are in Saudi Arabia and 50 U.S. warships are operating in the region to protect strategically important oil supplies.

Alexei Vassilev, a top Soviet official and adviser to the Supreme Soviet, told a news conference Friday, ''I can't imagine President Gorbachev could find it possible to send any military forces. There is a strong feeling in public opinion against the use of Soviet forces.''

''But,'' Vassilev said, ''I wouldn't rule out sending one or two ships, in a move that would be more symbolic and psychological than real.''

Another Soviet official, Konstantin Jrouevtsev, head of the Arab department of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, agreed, saying, ''The domestic situation in the Soviet Union is so grave that any event abroad would lead to disturbances inside the Soviet Union and adversely affect Gorbachev's popularity.''

The senior American official said the issue of the Soviet military advisers remaining in Iraq would be raised by Bush in Helsinki. Moscow has said it has 193 uniformed military advisers left in Iraq, as well as about 6,000 civilians and dependents.

The Soviet advisers have been described as being mainly involved in overseeing previously contracted military supplies to Iraq.

The U.S. official said the Soviets have been helpful in the international effort in ''the first post-Cold War crisis,'' and the two leaders also will discuss how to make further use of a United Nations that has been revitalized with the waning of superpower acrimony.

For their part, the Soviets were expected to point out that they have suffered severe economic harm, including the loss of Iraqi oil, and the virtual cancellation $5 billion Baghdad owes Mosocw for military sales.

At the same time, the Soviet economy is on the verge of collapse, with everything from cigarettes to bread and vodka reported in short supply.

Diplomatic officials said Gorbachev is expected to request some short-term economic help from Bush, although the seven leading industrial nations agreed at their July summit in Houston to withhold direct financial support until there has been a basic reform of the Soviet economic system.

One official said the Soviets are expected to ask for American help in upgrading the pipelines and oil-field equipment.

The Soviets have informed some of the foreign customers for Soviet gas and oil that contracts cannot be honored because Soviet pipelines are so leaky and decrepit that a safe flow of oil and gas is not possible.

U.S. officials said that arms control issues will not be a major consideration at the Helsinki meeting.

One State Department source said the strategic arms reduction negotiations in Geneva have progressed steadily until there is only ''a long list of minor, nuts-and-bolts issues to be dealt with, not the sort of thing that requires high-level intervention from the leaders.''

The official said talks on reducing conventional forces in Europe also have progressed, but a few technical issues remain to be settled, including definition of planes and helicopters to be restricted on both sides.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 7) UPI - Disciplinary proceedings have been initiated against three prominent physicians accused of prescribing potentially life-threatening doses of painkillers to actress Elizabeth Taylor, the state Medical Board said Friday.

The proceedings against Drs. William Skinner, Michael Gottlieb and Michael Roth could result in the suspension or revocation of their licenses, said Deputy Attorney General Earl Plowman, who represents the board.

The physicians could also be reprimanded or restricted from writing prescriptions for restricted drugs, Plowman said.

Skinner, identified by investigators as Taylor's primary physician, is a nationally recognized expert on drug abuse. He is medical director of the chemical dependency center at St. John's Hospital and Medical Center in Santa Monica.

Gottlieb is the immunologist who reported the first AIDS case in the United States. Roth, a prominent AIDS specialist, is Gottlieb's former partner.

Last April, the District Attorney's office declined to file criminal charges against the three doctors, saying that while they displayed poor judgment in prescribing drugs to Taylor, there was no criminal intent.

Prosecutors referred the the matter to the state medical board for possible administrative sanctions.

After reviewing the evidence against the physicians, the board on Aug. 28 filed allegations accusing the doctors of unprofessional conduct for prescribing ''copious and excessive amounts of controlled substances far beyond what would be medically justified for a single patient,'' Plowman said. The allegations were announced Thursday.

Plowman said the board accused the physicians of writing more than 1,000 prescriptions for Taylor since the mid-1980s for painkillers, tranquilizers, sleeping medications and diet pills. The prescribed drugs included injectable Demoral - often described as synthetic heroin - Percodan and Valium.

The board will hold hearings on the allegations before an administrative law judge sometime in the next few months. At the conclusion of the hearings, the judge will recommend disciplinary action against the physicians to the board.

Taylor, 58, who won best actress Academy Awards for ''Butterfield 8'' in 1960 and ''Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf'' in 1966, has frequently admitted her dependence on pills and alcohol. She also has made several well-publicized attempts at detoxification - efforts which Plowman said were undermined by the three physicians.

''While this patient was making efforts to de-toxify, these physicians continued to prescribe drugs to her,'' Plowman said.

''I think it goes beyond simple negligence. With that amount of prescriptions, the patient could easily have killed herself with an overdose,'' he said.

Deputy District Attorney Daniel Feldstern, who declined to file criminal charges against the three doctors in April, concurred.

''The poor judgment exercised by these physicians in prescribing massive doses of narcotics exposed their patient to the very real possibility of a life-threatening overdose,'' he said in a written report.

Taylor, who did not face possible charges as part of the district attorney's probe, has suffered recurring back problems since she fell from a horse in 1945 during the filming of the motion picture ''National Velvet.'' She also suffers from curvature of the spine, a herniated disc, muscle spasms and arthritis in her neck.

Skinner and Gottlieb also are accused of intentionally omitting Taylor's drug use from her medical records at St. John's Hospital. Such an omission could have proved fatal in a medical emergency, the medical board said.

The donation will be shipped by the end of this month. More than 120-thousand people... most of them Asians who worked in Kuwait... are stranded in refugee camps on Jordan's border with Iraq. They badly need food and water.

171 Americans flew out of Iraq to Jordan today. U-S officials hope it's the first of a series of charter flights to get some 22-hundred U-S citizens out of Kuwait. The freed hostages report changing hideouts every few days and wearing disguises to escape Iraqi soldiers. A number of British and Canadian nationals held in Kuwait also left and flew home

NEW YORK (SEPT. 7) UPI - New York Yankees executive vice president Leonard Kleinman met with Commissioner Fay Vincent for two more hours Friday to discuss his role in the Howard Spira incident.

Kleinman met with Vincent for six hours Thursday regarding his part in former Yankee general partner George Steinbrenner's dealings with admitted gambler Spira. The hearing was recessed until Sept. 17.

Vincent summoned Kleinman, the club's executive vice president, regarding Kleinman's role in former general partner George Steinbrenner's payment of $40,000 to Spira.

Kleinman tried unsuccessfully to block the hearing, filing a lawsuit against Vincent, claiming vincent is biased against him. U.S. District Judge Leonard B. Sand Wednesday turned down Kleinman's request for a temporary restraining order.

Steinbrenner's $40,000 payment to Spira for information on former Yankees outfielder Dave Winfield was the key factor in Vincent's decision to order Steinbrenner to give up his position as the team's general partner.

Steinbrenner agreed last month to give up control of the Yankees and nominated Kleinman to take over as general partner. Vincent rejected Kleinman as a candidate, claiming he also was under investigation for his part in the Spira incident.

The Yankees limited partners then selected Broadway producer Robert Nederlander.

PITTSBURGH (SEPT. 10) UPI - Leaf Inc. North America Friday announced it was seeking a buyer for its Clark brand candy bar and would transfer all candy production from its Pittsburgh facilities in late 1991.

''The reorganization of our production facilities and our decision to sell the Clark brand is part of Leaf's long-range strategy of consolidation, modernization and simplification,'' said James Hanlon, Leaf's president and chief executive officer.

''While the Clark bar is and remains a strong regional brand, it is no longer part of our ideal product mix,'' Hanlon said. ''We believe the Clark bar will be a successful brand addition for another company, particularly one that is set up to market regional brands.''

Hanlon said the plans were revealed in advance of the Pittsburgh plant closing to give Leaf's 170 area workers at least a year to find new jobs.

All production will be transferred from the Pittsburgh plant in the fourth quarter of 1991, he said.

Hanlon said Leaf plans to transfer production of its Zagnut brand candy bar to the company's peanut facility in Centralia, Ill., and of P.B. Crunchers to its Robinson, Ill., facility.

In 1992 and 1993, Leaf will transfer production from its two Chicago plants to facilities in Robinson, Tenn., and Memphis, Tenn., as was announced earlier this year.

Hanlon said the moves were necessary to combine manufacturing operations of ''like products in plants with similar capabilities.''

Leaf brands also include Jolly Rancher, Milk Duds, Whoppers, Heath Bar, PayDay, Good & Plenty, Donruss Baseball Cards, and Switzer licorice and cherry candy.

Leaf Inc. was formed in 1983 when Huhtamaki Oy of Finland acquired the operations of Leaf Confectionery Inc., the Beatrice Confections unit of Beatrice Foods Co. and the Donruss division of General Mills Inc.

LOS ANGELES (SEPT. 7) UPI - A series of chemical-related explosions rocked a chemical plant in an unincorporated county area near Torrance Friday, sending panicky employees running for shelter, authorities said.

No one was hurt, officials said.

The first explosion was reported about 9 p.m. EDT at the Amoco Chemical Corp. facility, sheriff's Sgt. Lamar Blevins said.

A second-alarm fire broke out and was followed by more explosions, said a dispatcher for the Los Angeles County Fire Department, who confirmed the company stores large quantities of chemical products at the plant.

Employees fled the plant, but no injuries were reported. Seventy- five firefighters squelched the flames within a half-hour.

County fire inspector Tony Duran said the explosions were traced to a volatile mixture of some form of mineral oil and styrene, an ingredient used in the process of making plastic.

Roads leading to the area were closed briefly. Fire officials abandoned plans to evacuate the neighborhood surrounding the facility when it was determined the smoke did not pose an immediate health threat.

There was no immediate damage estimate.

DALLAS (SEPT. 8) BUSINESS WIRE - Coming out swinging with its new line of high-performance network products, Microsoft Corp. will play the world's largest electronic golf game, for 35,000 people, at Fall NetWorld 1990 starting Monday.

All NetWorld attendees at the Dallas Convention Center will be able to play the Microsoft ShowNet Open on more than 200 workstations spread through the exhibit halls.

The ShowNet Open was developed in cooperation with H.A. Bruno, NetWorld's trade show management firm, and Lante Corp., the provider of the ShowNet LAN that supports the trade show. It was implemented by H.A. Bruno.

''People who have wondered whether our new products are on par with the competition may discover that we're several strokes ahead,'' said Mike Murray, general manager of the network business unit at Microsoft. ''This is a way to let NetWorld attendees have a little fun and also demonstrate the power of our systems under enormous loads. It's a fair way to test us and maybe we can chip away at the market.''

Grand prize for the contest is a world-class network server consisting of Microsoft LAN Manager version 2.0, a powerful network operating system, and a COMPAQ SYSTEMPRO, donated by Microsoft and Compaq Computer Corp. Second prize is round-trip plane tickets to anywhere in the United States; and other smaller prizes will be awarded.

Spread throughout the exhibition floor will be more than 200 workstations that attendees can use to play the game, tied together by LAN Manager systems provided by Microsoft and 3Com Corp. Microsoft SQL Server, a high-performance, intelligent multiuser relational database management system, stores and manages records for each of the show's attendees along with their scores for each ''round'' of the golf game.

In addition, SQL Server tracks and reports the top 10 contestants on an hourly basis. This is a task of some magnitude for 35,000 attendees -- demonstrating the power of LAN Manager and SQL Server in meeting the demanding requirements for high performance is an online transaction processing (OLTP) environment.

Contestant information and scores are protected by security and fault-tolerance features that are standard in Microsoft LAN Manager. LAN Manager's sophisticated network administration tools, including multi-server control facilities, will ensure easy administration and monitoring of the game by the ShowNet organizers.

The ShowNet Open is designed as a client-server application running on LAN Manager and SQL Server. Lante developed a front-end application to SQL Server for data entry into the ShowNet Open database. The front-end application relies on SQL Server's high-speed transaction processing design to handle the large number of simultaneous requests from users accessing the contestant and scoring database.

LONDON, (SEPT 8) - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Saturday that the Soviet Union should be encouraged to send forces to the Gulf.

"I think if (Soviet President Mikhail) Gorbachev would be prepared to send something, it would be good," Mrs. Thatcher told journalists during a visit to Scotland.

"It would not be the first time. In the Iran-Iraq war, things got a bit tricky in the Gulf because there were mines being laid affecting the safety of shipping," she continued.

"At that time the United States were there, we were there, our Dutch friends were there, Belgium -- and there was part of the Soviet fleet. It was very good cooperation," she said.

Before leaving Washington for a meeting in Helsinki with Mr. Gorbachev, U.S. President George Bush had said he did not plan to ask the Soviet leader to dispatch forces to the Gulf.

Mrs. Thatcher also noted that "the U.N. resolution (enforcing trade sanctions on Iraq) was passed by the Security Council, which has 15 countries, but it applies to everyone."

She called the summit meeting "a very good idea," adding, "What is vital, as the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe have made these massive changes, is to bring them to more regular talks and discussions so we know what one another is thinking. You start then to shape policy, because you know how the other reacts."

HELSINKI, (SEPT 8) - U.S. President George Bush stopped his motorcade at a Finnish market on Saturday for a bit of campaign-style flesh-pressing.

DAR ES SALAAM, (SEPT 8) - President Saddam Hussein's campaign to win Africa's support for his invasion of Kuwait was rejected by Tanzanian President Ali Hassan Mwinyi Saturday.

A presidential statement issued here said Mr. Mwinyi voiced his opposition

Mr. Mwinyi told Mr. Hussein's visiting Labour Minister Omadi Medhat Mubarak that "both Iraq and Kuwait have been Tanzania's very close friends, but the truth has to be said."

He said Tanzania fully supports the United Nations Security Council's resolutions calling for Iraqi's withdrawal and immediate restoration of the royal family of Kuwait.

This was the first time Tanzania had made public its policy stand on Kuwait's invasion by neighbouring Iraq.

Mr. Mwinyi, who was until 1981 a Tanzanian ambassador to the Middle East said his country hoped that a peaceful settlement would be found as it was in everybody's interest that war did not erupt in the Gulf.

He said the first step towards a peaceful settlement would be for Iraq to pull out of Kuwait, followed by the withdrawal of external forces from the Gulf.

Mr. Hussein's roving envoy, whose visit has been snubbed by both the Kenyan and Ugandan governments, was accompanied by Iraqi ambassadors to Tanzania and Zimbabwe, Fauzi Al-Bandari and Essam Abdul-Ghana.

WASHINGTON, (SEPT 8) - The United States plans to sell Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates hundreds of advanced tanks, on top of other arms sales announced earlier, the New York Times said Saturday.

The paper quoted administrative officials as saying the Pentagon was likely to notify Congress as early as next week that it wants to sell Riyadh 385 units of the M-1A2 tank, a large, modernised version of the M-1, with bigger guns and technological improvements.

Other armoured vehicles such as the M-2 Bradley may also be included in the package, the official said, and a separate tank sale was being ''viewed favorably'' for the United Arab Emirates.

Last week the administration announced an emergency 2.2-billion-dollar sale to Saudi Arabia of 24 F-15 fighter jets and 150 of the older M-60 tanks, to be taken from U.S. units and shipped immediately to Saudi Arabia to bolster Saudi forces facing Iraq.

The additional sale would almost double that order.The M-1A2 cost more than 3 million dollars each, the paper said, and would take years to build and deliver.

The paper said several longstanding Saudi arms requests that had previously been placed on the back burner were now being given urgent consideration due to the Gulf crisis.

Secretary of State James Baker has said that Washington aims to bolster the Gulf's self-sufficiency in arms so that future Middle East crises will not require such massive deployments of U.S. troops.

The Soviet and U.S. presidents are to meet Sunday in Helsinki for a summit focused on the Gulf crisis.

INA, monitored here, said Mr. Hussein's message was to be broadcast at 9:00 p.m. local time (1700 GMT).

HONG KONG (SEPT. 10) - A giant panda named Qingqing was successfully nursing two cubs for the first time after giving birth to twins recently in Chengdu Zoo in Sichuan province, the New China News Agency (NCNA) reported.

In a report monitored here, NCNA said the twins were conceived by artificial insemination using frozen semen.

It was the first time one panda had nursed two cubs, said a spokesman for the Chengdu research base for the artificial breeding of giant pandas.

One of the twins was a female, tentatively named Guanguan, while the other was a male named Junjun. They were 16 days old and healthy, the official report said Saturday.

Guanguan has grown to 360 grams (12.6 ounces) from 150 grams (5.25 ounces) at birth while Junjun has grown to 335 grams (11.7 ounces) from 140 grams (4.9 ounces), the report said.

Qingqing, herself artificially bred, gave birth to her first cub in October and it was reported to be doing fine.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - 28 people who registered for a yoga class in Stephens County, Georgia, will have to seek another method of relaxation. That's because fundamentalist Christian Philip Lawrence... who sees yoga as Satan's work... was able to convince county and town officials in Toccoa to NOT sponsor the class. Lawrence said the calm offered by yoga gives the devil free reign to manipulate the mind of the yoga practioner.

In Romulus, Michigan, a judge has ordered a California man to stand trial on murder charges for helping his cancer-stricken wife commit suicide. The man said he and his wife went to the Detroit area under the mistaken impression it was legal in Michigan to assist in a suicide. Authorities say 72-year-old Bertram Harper suffocated his 69-year-old wife with a plastic bag after she took a number of sleeping pills last month.

GAINESVILLE, FL. (SEPT. 8) UPI - A criminal justice authority believes the killer who murdered five college students is cold and calculating and probably not the mentally ill suspect in a county jail.

''Generally those sorts of people are not capable of the meticulous, careful crime that we saw involving gloves on ones' hands,'' said James Fox, a professor at Northeastern University in Boston.

Fox made his comments on the Phil Donahue Show, broadcast live Friday from Gainesville.

Several city and University of Florida officials refused to appear on the broadcast, calling it in bad taste, and a letter to the editor in Friday's Gainesville Sun urged people not to watch.

About eight minutes into the broadcast, someone cut four television cables then fled on a bicycle, causing about a 10-second blackout, but technicians switched to the one surviving camera and quickly restrung more cable, and the show went on.

Brevard County Sheriff Jake Miller has said the suspect, Edward Humphrey, 18, has displayed ''psychotic'' behavior since his arrest Aug. 30 for beating his grandmother.

Fox said that the Gainesville serial killer was more likely a sociopath - not a psychopath.

''What we're dealing with is a person who has an insatiable need for power dominance and control, someone who knows what they're doing, who enjoys not only terrorizing his five victims but may also be enjoying the terror that has played on this community. ... It's an evil man. It's obviously not someone who's normal.''

However, another expert, Michael West, a forensics specialist who has used ultraviolet equipment to examine the crime scenes, said he could not rule out Humphrey as the killer.

''It's very possible that any of the suspects that police have right now could be the killer. This man's not a genius. He's just careful,'' West said.

Humphrey, 18, a University of Florida freshman from Indialantic, remained in the Brevard County Detention Center Friday on $1 million bond, charged with aggravated battery for allegedly beating his grandmother Aug. 30.

Arrest warrants also were issued Thursday by UF police, accusing Humphrey of two assaults on campus Aug. 25, the day before the first bodies were found.

Indian River County authorities Tuesday issued arrest warrants for Humphrey, accusing him of armed burglary and attempted sexual battery for a 1988 attack on a woman there.

Gainesville police have refused to characterize Humphrey as their prime suspect.

''We're going to stay away from identifying anyone at this point as a No. 1 suspect,'' police Lt. Sadie Darnell said Friday during a news conference. ''We are looking at eight people strongly and four of those very strongly but their hierarchy in that ranking changes almost daily.''

''I'm of the firm opinion that this individual, the killer, selects victims that appear easy to kill,'' West said. ''He kills small, petite females.

''This man is not courageous. He's not brave. You stand up, you will run him away. You're better off armed than unarmed.''

There has been a run on guns at Gainesville pawn shops and sporting goods stores, however, Gainesville Mayor Pro Tem Rodney Long urged residents Friday to leave weapons to law enforcement officials.

''It's important for this country to know that the city of Gainesville is a city that is in control of the situation, even though we are a city that has been stricken with fear,'' he said.

Authorities on Thursday searched Humphrey's Gainesville apartment, the family home in Indialantic and towed away his car to a crime lab in Jacksonville.

''Evidence, items and information we gained at both the scene here and at Brevard County is promising,'' Darnell said Friday, however she declined to say what was retrieved or if it tied Humphrey to the crimes.

Authorities in Ordway, Colo., reported that Humphrey was arrested there last month for disorderly conduct for failing to pay for gasoline, and while in custody, threatened to kill himself.

Crowley County sheriff's Sgt. Allan Turner said Humphrey's grandmother told him the suspect had left Florida without telling anyone and was apparently en route to Montana, where he had relatives and a girlfriend.

The grandmother, Elna Hlavaty, the victim of the Aug. 30 assault at her home, paid for the gasoline, and the charge was dropped.

At Thursday's hearing, Hlavaty said she wanted the aggravated battery charges dropped.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Rumors Iraqi President Saddam Hussein had been ousted in a coup forced crude-oil prices down as much as $2 a barrel when traders elected to take profits on recent gains after the rumors turned out false.

In the previous five trading sessions, U.S. crude had risen $5.51 a barrel or 21.2 percent, to $31.43 a barrel on concerns that the Persian Gulf crisis would become a war.

Starting in Asia and Europe, markets opened lower Friday, on rumors that first surfaced on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, and stayed lower despite the expectations of some traders that they would resume their upward march.

''It was profit taking before the weekend,'' explained Martin Cherkes, vice president of commodity risk management for Continental Bank in Chicago.

''There's a psychological barrier at $32 a barrel,'' he said. Oil companies have told him ''we'll sell as much as we can at $32,'' Cherkes said.

Selling resulted because traders ''felt uncomfortable being in buy positions going into the weekend at these high levels,'' agreed Randall Rothenberg of Dean Witter Reynolds' International Energy Futures Group in New York.

The benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude for October delivery ended Friday at $30.04 a barrel, down $1.39 on the day but still up $2.72 a barrel on the week.

On the European spot market, where crude is bought and sold for cash, Britain's widely traded North Sea Brent plunged $2.25 to $30.40 a barrel, $2.20 above last Friday's close.

''Traders remembered that two weeks ago they got killed on (the following) Monday by remaining heavy in buy positions over the weekend,'' said Michael McDermott of PaineWebber Inc. in New York.

On Aug. 27, crude plunged by $4 a barrel and gasoline by 17 cents a gallon - both records - when Iraq raised hopes of a peace settlement by ordering its ship captains not to contest a U.S. naval blockade.

Brent normally sells at a lesser price than WTI because of the pull of the huge U.S. market and the need to discount shipping costs.

But since mid-August, Brent has been higher than U.S. crude, apparently as a result of Europe being hit harder by the U.N. embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti crude imposed after Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of oil-rich Kuwait.

The United Arab Emirates' Dubai light - the key OPEC crude from the Middle East shipped primarily to the Far East - plummeted $1.20 to $26.60 a barrel, $2.10 higher than a week earlier.

Unleaded gasoline for October delivery ended the day down 2.01 cents at 93.06 cents a gallon, up 6.88 cents on the week.

October home-heating oil plummeted 4.26 cents to 83.98 cents a gallon, still ahead 7.42 cents on the week.

The week's petroleum product increases appeared to be largely the result of the October contract rising to the level of the September contract, which expired a week ago.

On the U.S. Gulf Coast spot market, where crude is bought and sold to the highest bidder, prompt-delivery WTI lost $1.45 to $30 a barrel, a gain of $2.70 a barrel on the week.

Sun Co., based in Radnor, Pa., along with Marathon Oil Co., the Findlay, Ohio, unit of USX Corp., and Du Pont's Conoco Inc. subsidiary in Houston, lowered their posted price for crude at the wellhead to $28.50 a barrel for WTI. Sun's reduction was $1.25; Conoco and Marathon's were $1.50 a barrel.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - President Bush is scheduled to arrive in Helsinki, Finland, Saturday on the eve of his mini-summit with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. The current crisis in the Persian Gulf is the first time since World War Two that Moscow and Washington have lined up on the same side of a regional conflict. Aides to Bush say he will urge his Soviet counterpart to be more active against Iraqi aggression.

A White House-arranged meeting on the state of America's wetlands turned into a debate Friday between conservationists and developers. The Anchorage session of the president's Domestic Policy Council Task Force on Wetlands... the fifth of six scheduled around the country... saw oil industry lobbyists ask for Alaska's exemption from wetlands protection policies. Environmentalists said the oil industry position was ill-advised.

Workers at an Iowa armaments plant Friday rejected a labor pact offered by the plant's contractor. Then the some 11-hundred workers overwhelmingly voted to walk off their jobs at the Iowa Army Ammunition Plant, which makes anti-tank missiles and other weapons deployed to the Persian Gulf. A spokesman for one of the unions involved in the action said the strike would receive negative press, but he said the company is also to blame for the walkout.

The National Science Foundation is going to reconsider an award it made because of an UNprecedented request... and bitter attack... by M-I- T. The Massachusetts school charged the award of a magnetics laboratory to Florida State University probably will force M-I-T to close its own lab. According to M-I-T, the closed lab would set back American research at least five years.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Almost one out of every eight Americans is now a Californian, according to that state's Department of Finance. The department estimates California's population will reach 30-Million Sunday... exactly 140 years after the Sunshine state joined the union. The estimate is far above the state's original population, which ranked well below the number of elk that dotted the state back then.

Members of the Buffalo Philharmonic Orchestra say their group's first name could be subject to change if the price is right. The musicians published a nationwide advertisement Friday offering to relocate the renowned orchestra to a community that can support it. A spokesman for the musicians say the ad was a symbolic way to nudge the Buffalo area to NOT reduce the debt-ridden ensemble's size or reduce wages.

HONOLULU (SEPT. 8) UPI - A federal judge late Friday refused again to halt the transfer of U.S. chemical weapons from stockpiles in West Germany to Johnston Island in the Pacific for destruction.

U.S. District Judge David Ezra, who earlier rejected a bid for a temporary restraining order, refused to issue a preliminary injunction sought by environmentalists and two native groups.

''The court does not, nor can it, pass on the wisdom of the decision made by Congress and the President to remove the European stockpile from the FRG (Federal Republic of Germany) to Johnston Atoll,'' Ezra said in a 44-page ruling. That was up to the executive and legislative branches of government, he said.

But, the judge said, the Army and Department of Defense appear to have complied with their obligations under the National Environmental Policy Act, and he cited enhanced risks associated with halting the stockpile in transit.

Sierra Club Legal Defense fund attorney Skip Spaulding said he was disappointed with the decision and planned to appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday.

Spaulding said he was told by Justice Department attorneys that the weapons are still at a railhead at Miesau and will not be taken to the North Sea port of Nordenham until later next week. The Army last month agreed not to ship any of the weapons before Sept. 10.

Greenpeace, the Institue for the Advancement of Hawaiian Affairs, and the World Council of Indigenous Peoples-Hawaii said the Army had not complied with environmental laws before starting the movement.

The groups said the shipments to the atoll, 825 miles west- southwest of Hawaii, would threaten the Pacific environment, a view echoed by a number of South Pacific nations.

A government study of possible scenarios during the ocean transport, such as explosion, fire, rocket attack, or grounding of the vessel, concluded the risks were small and the effects would be slight. Opponents said such calamities could cause severe damage to the environment.

Ezra said the ''speculative harm'' the plaintiffs complained of was inherent in any form of movement and even in destruction of the munitions at their present location. He said every phase of the movement had been given a ''hard look.''

''... An injunction at this time would interrupt the defendants' carefully timed operation and require munitions to be left in temporary and less secure storage in Mmiesau or Nordenham,'' the judge said.

He said it could also force rescheduling of detailed plans for movement and security, cause the Army to risk deteriorating weather conditions, and possibly subject the West German people and the environment to the risk of a repeat of the entire process if the groups' lawsuit is unsuccessful.

The judge repeated his ruling that U.S. environmental law cannot be applied to the movement of the weapons in West Germany, especially since the transfer has already been upheld in German courts.

The Army plans to move about 100,000 rounds of nerve gas - 8-inch and 155-millimeter projectiles containing the nerve agents GB and VX - to Johnston from Germany, where they have been stored since 1968. Officials said the weapons constitute less than 6 percent of the nation's retaliatory stockpile.

The bulk of the U.S. stockpile of chemical weapons is stored at eight sites on the mainland, and the Army has proposed building similar incineration plants at each site to destroy them.

NEW YORK (SEPT. 8) UPI - The family of Brian Watkins, the Utah tourist slain while defending his parents from muggers, said they were ''pleased'' with the indictment of eight youths charged in the case.

District Attorney Robert Morgenthau announced the indictments Friday at a news conference, adding that one of the most powerful pieces of evidence against the suspects will likely be videotaped confessions made by seven of them.

Morgenthau also said he telephoned Watkins' father in Provo, Utah, with news of the indictment.

''He said he was pleased. I assured him of a vigorous prosecution as quickly as possible,'' Morgenthau said. ''I expressed my condolences to him and told him there was nothing we could do to bring back his ''d to

The body of 22-year-old Brian Watkins was expected to be buried in Provo on Saturday. He was killed in a midtown Manhattan subway station last Sunday night.

Meanwhile, Criminal Court Judge Robert Straus ordered the youths to appear before state Supreme Court Justice Carol Berkman on Sept. 24, at which time bail may be set. Until then, Strauss said, they will be held without bail.

In a courtroom packed with teenage supporters and relatives of the young men, Assistant Manhattan District Attorney Tom Schiels told Straus that a state grand jury had indicted each of the youths.

''A grand jury has returned an indictment charging each of these defendants with murder in the second degree, robbery in the first degree and robbery in the second degree,'' the prosecutor announced to a chorus of groans from the supporters.

If convicted of the most serious charge - murdering someone during the commission of a felony, in this case, robbery - they face 25 years to life behind bars.

Because there were so many youths and defense lawyers, they were called in two batches to hear the indictment.

Each time the teens, dressed in T-shirts and jeans and their hair tossled, stood silently in a row facing the judge and then silently filed back to their holding cells after the 2-minute proceeding.

Their sobbing girlfriends rushed from the courtroom surrounded by their male friends, who swore at photographers snapping pictures and threatened them with physical violence.

Those charged in the case are Yull Morales, 19 - who allegedly stabbed Watkins; Anthony Anderson; Emilo Fernandez, 17; Louis Fernando Montiero, 20; Jonnie Hincapie, 18; Pascal Carpenter, 18; Ricardo Nova, 18, and Ricardo Lopez, 18.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - For the second straight night, the Los Angeles Dodgers picked up a game on the first-place Cincinnati Reds with a rookie right-hander who joined the team in midseason leading the way.

One day after Mike Hartley threw a three-hit shutout against Atlanta, Jim Neidlinger tossed a four-hitter over eight innings Friday night as the Dodgers crept to within 5 1-2 games of the NL West lead with a 3-1 victory over Cincinnati.

''Those were two outstanding performances,'' Los Angeles Manager Tommy Lasorda said. ''Talk about coming at the right time when we needed them. They couldn't have been more meaningful.''

Neidlinger, 4-1, also had a two-out RBI single as Los Angeles survived some shoddy play to take the opener of the three-game series. The clubs are scheduled to meet five more times in the next nine days.

Cincinnati has dropped four of its last five games.

''I don't want to talk about the pennant race; I'll talk to you about the ballgame,'' Manager Lou Piniella said. ''We just didn't hit the ball.''

Neidlinger, making only his eighth big-league start, did not walk a batter or permit a runner past second base until the ninth, when he left for Jay Howell after shortstop Alfredo Griffin committed his second error of the game to put runners on the corners.

Neidlinger, who used a sinking fastball to register 17 infield outs, received a standing ovation from the crowd of 47,720 as he walked off the field.

''That was unbelievable,'' he said. ''I looked up at all the people standing, and there was an automatic rush of adrenalin through my body.''

In 53 innings, Neidlinger has walked just 11 while striking out 34. Howell got three outs for his 14th save of the season.

Jose Rijo, 11-7, surrendered just three singles over seven innings but walked six, five in the first three innings. Two of the three runs he permitted were unearned.

In other National League games, St. Louis edged Chicago 4-3, Montreal defeated Pittsburgh 4-1, Philadelphia dropped New York 4-1, Atlanta sank San Diego 4-1 and Houston downed San Francisco 2-1.

In the AL, it was: Oakland 7, New York 1; Baltimore 6, California 2; Boston 5, Seattle 4 in 11 innings; Toronto 3, Chicago 1; Minnesota 2, Cleveland 0; Milwaukee 6, Detroit 5 and Texas 9, Kansas City 4.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 3

At Chicago, Tom Pagnozzi delivered an RBI single and tie-breaking sacrifice fly and Bob Tewksbury hurled seven strong innings to help rally St. Louis. Tewksbury improved to 10-5 and Lee Smith came on in the ninth to earn his 25th save. Greg Maddux fell to 12-13.

Phillies 4, Mets 1

At Philadelphia, Dale Murphy twice singled home Lenny Dykstra and rookie Jose DeJesus hurled a four-hitter, sending New York to their fifth-straight loss. DeJesus, 5-6, struck out three and walked three while gaining his third complete game of the season. David Cone, 8-11, suffered the loss despite tying his career high with 12 strikeouts over 6 1-3 innings.

Expos 4, Pirates 1

At Pittsburgh, Dennis ''Oil Can'' Boyd tossed a three-hitter over 6 2-3 innings and Montreal scored two unearned runs on a throwing error end the first-place Pirates' six-game winning streak. Boyd, 9-5, walked four and struck out six and Tim Burke notched his 17th save. John Smiley, 8-8, allowed three runs and six hits over 5 2-3 innings.

Braves 4, Padres 1

At San Diego, Charlie Leibrandt pitched a four-hitter for his 100th career victory and Andres Thomas stroked a two-run double. Leibrandt, 8- 8, has now won his last three starts without yielding an earned run. He walked two and struck out five to raise his career record to 100-87. Ed Whitson, 12-8, had a personal five-game winning streak snapped.

Astros 2, Giants 1

At San Francisco, Ken Caminiti's based-loaded walk with none out in the ninth snapped a scoreless tie, forcing home Gerald Young with the go-ahead run. Danny Darwin lowered his league-leading ERA to 2.01 and improved to 11-2. Dave Smith notched his 23rd save and the Giant's John Burkett fell to 11-7.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, CA (SEPT. 8) UPI - Floodlights bathed a ridge above a dry lake bed early Saturday to aid emergency workers searching for the body of a worker killed in the fiery eruption of an experimental Titan 4 booster motor.

The motor component, filled with 255,000 pounds of solid rocket fuel, dropped from a crane and burst into flames Friday morning, injuring at least nine people, including one worker who suffered chemical burns.

The Titan Advanced Solid Rocket motor was being transferred from an unspecified location to a position near a test tower at the base's Astronautics Laboratory when it fell about 10 feet and erupted into a geyser of flames.

Lt. Col. Jan Dalby, an Air Force spokesman at the base, said one person was missing. That person, a civilian employed by a defense contractor, was presumed dead, said a high-ranking official who requested anonymity.

The missing worker was believed to be buried beneath a pile of rubble left by the fire.

''The crane split and hit some concrete blocks,'' said Sgt. Cordelia Rackley, an Air Force spokeswoman who visited the fire scene a few hours after the accident. ''We think the person (listed as missing) might be under those blocks.''

One of the most seriously injured workers, who suffered third- degree chemical burns, was moved Friday night from the base hospital to nearby Antelope Valley Medical Center.

The 100-foot-high flame from the booster motor was whitish yellow with the steady intensity of a welder's torch. Dalby said the fire mangled the crane and quickly consumed all of the fuel in the booster motor, an experimental unit developed by Hercules Aerospace Co. of Magna, Utah.

''Once it's going, it's gone. You can't stop a fire like that,'' Dalby said.

He said the fire, which ignited about 10:45 a.m. PDT, sent a huge ''tornado-like'' cloud of smoke some 10,000 feet into the air above Rogers Dry Lake, a landing strip for space shuttles.

The smoke plume - black at the base near flame and billowing to a large white puff - drifted northward toward the community of Boron and was visible for 30 miles across the Mojave Desert.

Air Force officials evacuated test areas near the fire as a precaution, while aircraft flew into the smoke cloud to determine if it posed a health risk to Boron's 2,500 residents.

The smoke contained trace amounts of hydrogen chloride, but the slight amount of the chemical and its quick dissipation posed no threat to base employees or nearby residents, Dalby said.

Boron school officials, however, acted cautiously, keeping students inside until the air cleared.

In addition to the burn victim, six others - including a firefighter - were treated for smoke inhalation, one person suffered a broken elbow and another a cut on the hand.

The Titan booster motor was destroyed and the test tower was burned, but there was no immediate damage estimate and no word on the accident's effect on the Titan program.

Air Force officials immediately launched an investigation into the cause of the fire.

Kim Olds, who moved only a week ago to the community of North Edwards when her husband was transferred from March Air Force Base in Riverside, said she noticed the fire when she stepped outside to get the mail.

''All I saw was the pretty little mushroom (cloud) and all the military cars flying down the freeway'' toward the missile site, she said.

Edwards is located in a sparsely populated area of the Mojave Desert, about 100 miles northeast of Los Angeles.

The Titan 4 is the nation's largest unmanned launch vehicle, ordered by the Air Force after the Challenger disaster grounded NASA's shuttle fleet.

It consists of a two-stage liquid-fueled vehicle and two solid propellant boosters attached to the sides of the rocket.

The Titan 4 made its maiden flight in June 1989 and its second launch June 8, 1990. Each $200 million mission, launched from the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station near Florida's Kennedy Space Center, carried classified military payloads.

Each Titan booster, which is 112 feet tall and designed to fire for about two minutes, has seven segments. The Air Force is developing an advanced booster for the rocket and it was a test version that was destroyed in the accident.

The Edwards' complex is responsible for developing technology for future missile systems, taking advantage of a remote location and topography to conduct solid rocket motor, liquid rocket engine and advanced propulsion experiments.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Tony Pena's head-first slide into home not only won the game but ended a slide of another kind.

Pena's game-winning run in the 11th inning Friday night halted the Boston Red Sox' three-game losing streak and gave them a 5-4 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

In the process, the AL East-leading Red Sox maintained their 5 1-2 game lead over second-place Toronto, who took a 3-1 decision from the Chicago White Sox.

Pena opened the 11th with a single off reliever and loser Mike Jackson, 5-7, and was sacrificed to second by Randy Kutcher. After Jody Reed was intentionally walked, Carlos Quintana grounded a 2-1 pitch past third baseman Edgar Martinez into left. Henry Cotto's one-hop throw to catcher David Valle just missed the sliding Pena.

''It was a slider inside,'' said Quintana, whose sacrifice fly tied the game in the ninth. ''When it was 2-0 he threw me a fastball down the middle. I said to myself, 'Wait, for the slider.'''

''(Martinez) has to knock that ball down,'' Seattle Manager Jim Lefebvre said. ''That's what killed us tonight, not making the little plays. He has to at least knock that ball down.''

Quintana drove in Kutcher in the ninth to tie the game 4-4 despite some confusion earlier in the inning. Kutcher entered as a pinch runner for Phil Plantier, who drew a one-out walk from Jackson. Reed then delivered a hit-and-run single, allowing Kutcher to race to third although he wasn't sure of the play.

''I thought it was a hit-and-run, but they wiped it off,'' explained Kutcher. ''I took my eyes off (the third-base coach) too quick.''

Seattle blew several opportunities, scattering 15 hits and stranding 10 runners, including a four-hit fifth inning which failed to produce a run.

''We just left too many men on base early,'' said Seattle infielder Harold Reynolds. ''Or this would have been over early.''

Boston reliever Jeff Gray worked the 11th and picked up the victory to improve to 2-3.

Elsewhere in the American League, Oakland pummeled New York 7-1, Baltimore pounded California 6-2, Toronto downed Chicago 3-1, Minnesota blanked Cleveland 2-0, Milwaukee edged Detroit 6-5 and Texas dumped Kansas City 9-4.

In the NL, it was: St. Louis 4, Chicago 3; Philadelphia 4, New York 1; Montreal 4, Pittsburgh 1; Atlanta 4, San Diego 1; Los Angeles 3, Cincinnati 1 and Houston 2, San Francisco 1.

A's 7, Yankees 1

At New York, Mark McGwire drove in two runs, one with his 35th homer, to power Oakland. McGwire tied the score with a fifth-inning homer, then delivered a run-scoring grounder in a five-run sixth against Andy Hawkins, 5-12. Curt Young, 8-5, went five innings for the win. Todd Burns pitched four innings for his third save.

Orioles 6, Angels 2

At Baltimore, Sam Horn belted a three-run homer to highlight a four-run seventh inning and rookie Ben McDonald pitched eight strong innings to help the Orioles snap a six-game losing streak. Horn's 11th homer off reliever Mike Fetters climaxed a four-run seventh inning that helped McDonald, 6-4, halt a personal four-game losing streak. Rookie Joe Grahe, 1-3, took the loss.

Blue Jays 3, White Sox 1

At Toronto, Mookie Wilson's two-run double in the seventh inning snapped a 1-1 tie and Todd Stottlemyre scattered four hits over eight innings to lead Toronto. Stottlemyre, 13-14, who allowed one run while striking out six, outdueled Melido Perez, 12-13. Tom Henke recorded his 27th save.

Twins 2, Indians 0

At Minneapolis, Allan Anderson scattered five hits over 8 1-3 innings and Kent Hrbek drove home a run and extended his consecutive- game hitting streak to 17. Anderson, 7-17, who has won two of his last three starts, allowed just one walk while striking out two. Rick Aguilera struck out the only two batters he faced to recorded his 28th save. Bud Black fell to 10-10.

Brewers 6, Tigers 5

At Milwaukee, Robin Yount belted a three-run homer to highlight a four-run first inning and Teddy Higuera notched his third straight victory. Cecil Fielder belted his major league-leading 45th homer in the sixth for the Tigers, who lost for the third straight game. Teddy Higuera, 10-6, gave up seven hits in 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Jack Morris, 11-17, took the loss.

Rangers 9, Royals 4

At Arlington, Texas, Pete Incaviglia collected five RBI and stroked two homers and Juan Gonzalez went 4 for 5 with a homer to power Texas.

Incaviglia became the first player in Rangers' history to hit 20 homers in five consecutive seasons. Texas starter Charlie Hough, 11-10, pitched eight innings, surrendering four runs and eight hits. Loser Tom Gordon worked 4 2-3 and evened his record at 10-10, allowing seven runs and 10 hits.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Around the world... around the clock... news from United Press International:

President Bush took off last night for Finland and his third summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. The get-together was arranged in a hurry because of the Persian Gulf crisis. U-S officials say Bush will ask Gorbachev to remove Soviet advisers from Iraq. Bush says he has NO plans to ask for Soviet troops in the Persian Gulf.

Three people were killed by typhoon Dot when it hit Taiwan today with winds of 85 miles an hour. A 65-year-old man was swept off a roof, and the two other victims drowned. Officials say the typhoon weakened into a severe tropical storm and headed toward mainland China. Earlier, Dot killed four people in the Philippines.

The former chief of Mexico's security police and his assistant have been sentenced to 30 years in prison for the murder of an agent. A government spokesman said Jose Antonio Zorrilla was sentenced yesterday. He said the agent apparently was killed because he had knowledge of Zorrilla's business dealings.

A man who said marijuana is a ''way of life'' has been sentenced to more than 24 years in prison for masterminding the smuggling of 60 tons of marijuana from Southeast Asia to the West Coast. William Uhler was sentenced in federal court in Los Angeles. The smuggling operation is called the biggest ever known of its type.

An armed man fired several shots yesterday from the top of a 15- story building in Pittsburgh, and then shot himself and fell to the street dead. NObody else was hit during the five-hour sniping ordeal. A detective said the sniper, Paul Fisher, ''was a loner all his life.''

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - President Bush arrived in Helsinki Saturday for a superpower summit to urge Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to turn up the pressure on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

''Here in Helsinki, President Gorbachev and I meet hopefully to strengthen our common approach to this unjustifiable act of aggression,'' Bush said in an arrival statement. ''Much is at stake and there is much to gain if we succeed.''

''If the nations of the world, acting together, continue as they have been to isolate Iraq and deny Saddam the fruits of aggression, we will set in place the cornerstone of an international order more peaceful, stable and secure than any that we have known,'' Bush said.

The president said the summit meeting ''comes at a critical time, at a moment when the actions we take can shape this new world for years to come.''

Senior U.S. officials said Bush intends to ask Gorbachev to withdraw all Soviet military advisers from Iraq, and will try to persuade Moscow to play a more direct role in the multinational effort against the Baghdad leader.

Bush arrived about 4:10 a.m. EDT under cloudy skies aboard Air Force One and was met at Helsinki's international Vantaa airport by Finnish President Mauno Koivisto.

Gorbachev was scheduled to arrive later in the day.

''We have reached a turning point in history, one in which we have a chance to define a new and more peaceful international order,'' Bush said Friday in a written statement to reporters who accompanyed him on the trip to the Finnish capital.

''Our discussions in Helsinki will, I hope, help propel us forward toward that goal,'' the president said.

The scheduled five hours of talks with Gorbachev in Helsinki on Sunday will mark the third superpower summit in the last 10 months.

But Bush told reporters aboard Air Force One that he had ''no plans'' to ask Gorbachev during their meeting to commit ground forces to Saudi Arabia to complement a multinational deployment spearheaded by 100,000 U.S. troops.

The Soviet Union has joined the United States and much of the world in denouncing Iraq's Aug. 2 takeover of Kuwait and in backing a U.N.-mandated economic embargo against the Middle East nation.

The Persian Gulf crisis represents the first time since World War II that the two superpowers have been allies in a regional conflict and Bush wants to build on the the renewed union.

The Bush administration has said that it will not use the possibility of more U.S. aid to Moscow as incentive for more Soviet pressure on Iraq.

Yet just hours before leaving, Bush announced that a U.S. trade delegation headed by Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher will visit the Soviet Union next week, and that members of the delegation will meet with him in Helsinki after the Summit.

As Soviet and American officials describe the summit, it will be relatively informal, in the pattern of the meeting at Malta in December 1989 or the informal talks at the Camp David presidential retreat that followed their formal sessions in Washington last spring.

Officials said the issue of the Soviet military advisers remaining in Iraq will be a key topic in Helsinki. Moscow has said it has 193 uniformed military advisers left in Iraq, as well as about 6,000 civilians and dependents. These advisers have trained Iraqi troops in the use of Soviet weaponry sold prior to the U.N. embargo.

It is viewed by the United States that it would be useful, but not essential, for the Soviets to send ground forces to join the 27 nations that have sent, or intend to send, forces to the Persian Gulf region. More than 100,000 U.S. troops are in Saudi Arabia and 50 U.S. warships are operating in the region to protect strategically important oil supplies.

But the Soviet Union, still haunted by a Vietnam-like memory of its 10-year involvement in Afghanistan, has been reluctant to send soldiers.

A top Soviet official said there was a chance Moscow would send ''one or two ships,'' but added that he ''can't imagine'' Gorbachev would agree to a deployment of ground forces with public sentiment against it.

Another Soviet official said domestic problems in the Soviet Union is ''so grave'' that a dramatic foreign policy move could trigger disturbances inside the Soviet Union and hurt Gorbachev's popularity.

But a senior American official said that a photograph of the two leaders together after agreeing on further cooperative action to force a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait ''would be a very helpful signal'' to send to Saddam.

Bush raised another issue regarding ground forces in Saudi Arabia, saying he would like to visit U.S. troops there, but had no timetable for such a visit. ''Not now,'' Bush told reporters. ''Eventually, I want very much to do it. I may wait for a while until all our forces are there and things calm down and (the troops) get settled in.''

The U.S. official said the Soviets have been helpful in the international effort in ''the first post-Cold War crisis,'' and the two leaders also will discuss how to make further use of a United Nations that has been revitalized with the waning of superpower acrimony.

For their part, the Soviets were expected to point out that they have suffered severe economic harm, including the loss of Iraqi oil, and the virtual cancellation $5 billion Baghdad owes Mosocw for military sales.

At the same time, the Soviet economy is on the verge of collapse, with everything from cigarettes to bread and vodka reported in short supply.

Diplomatic officials said Gorbachev is expected to request some short-term economic help from Bush, although the seven leading industrial nations agreed at their July summit in Houston to withhold direct financial support until there has been a basic reform of the Soviet economic system.

One official said the Soviets are expected to ask for American help in upgrading the pipelines and oil-field equipment.

The Soviets have informed some of the foreign customers for Soviet gas and oil that contracts cannot be honored because Soviet pipelines are so leaky and decrepit that a safe flow of oil and gas is not possible. Bush said he would encourage the use of U.S. oil expertise in the Persian Gulf.

U.S. officials said that arms control issues will not be a major consideration at the Helsinki meeting.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - A cool front settled into the Northeast early Saturday, clearing skies and dropping temperatures and humidity levels throughout the region, following a record heat wave in the South.

Temperatures later in the day were expected to reach into the low to mid-70s, under sunny and pleasant conditions. But the cold front was expected to be just that for at least some spots in western New York and the Berkshires in Massachusetts, where temperatures were to drop to a chilly low of 45 Saturday night.

Clouds also were expected to move into the region from western Pennsylvania by Saturday night.

Record hot temperatures in the 90s and low 100s sizzled parts of the South Friday, including Asheville, N.C.; Columbus, Ga.; Greenville, S.C.; Huntsville Ala.; Meridian, Miss.; Tallahassee, Fla.; and Tupelo, Miss. Beckley, W.Va., posted 85 degrees, also a record.

In the West, a thunderstorm ignited more than a dozen fires in Idaho's Boise National Forest Friday and set off several others west of Boise. The largest of several fires was the Schafer Creek fire, a 35- acre blaze burning brush and scattered trees on steep slopes, but no structures were threatened.

Cooler weather headed for the Puget Sound area of Washington. Strong gusty winds along with a band of showers and scattered thundershowers hit some areas Friday and moved to the east but little rain fell.

An upper low off the California coast which fathered the unstable weather in Washington remained stationary and was expected to keep skies cloudy into the weekend.

It hit 101 in Las Vegas, 3 degrees above normal, with the high expected to reach to 105 during the weekend under sunny skies.

Thunderstorms roared over south-central Kansas Friday, producing 90 mph winds in Wichita. No injuries were reported.

Violent thunderstorms that killed at least three in the Midwest Thursday spread throughout much of the East Friday, submerging Pennsylvania streets and forcing the National Guard to rescue circus animals trapped by waist-high floodwater.

Storms hit New York state and New England Friday and up to 6 inches of rain that deluged western Pennsylvania drove creeks beyond their banks and poured 10 feet of water through Houston, 20 miles south of Pittsburgh.

Water in an electrical box was blamed for a fire that raged through a downtown print shop for several hours and threatened nearby businesses.

''It's terrible,'' Houston borough secretary Maxine Burt said. ''There was so many sirens here (for the flooding) that I didn't hear the one for the fire. ... It's a mess.''

As much as 4 feet of water swamped the nearby American Legion grounds where the five-ring Carson & Barnes had sent up its tents and trailers.

''I woke up with an elephant bellowing in my window,'' said Ted Spara, who lives next door to the American Legion property. He found seven horses seeking shelter in his yard.

''The circus people (were) down there up to their waist in water trying to get their animals out ... but they're all flooded out,'' Spara said. The National Guard brought in boats to lead the animals to safety.

The Pennsylvania storms, which caved in the roof of a Sears store near Pittsburgh, were formed by the same east-moving cold front responsible for storms that slammed into Michigan, Ohio and Indiana late Thursday and early Friday. Utilities reported thousands of people were without power in the region.

BEIJING (SEPT. 8) UPI - Economists at a leading government think tank have called for swift, substantial reform of China's centralized price system, criticizing the practice of keeping prices low through state subsidies, news reports said Saturday.

A senior economist also blamed Beijing's controversial retrenchment program for causing massive layoffs in what appeared to be growing opposition to austerity measures imposed in late 1988.

Experts at the State Council Research Center have proposed immediate rises in coal prices and suggested a reduction in government loans to ailing enterprises, the official China Daily reported.

The State Council Research Center advises the government on economic and other policy issues. Price reform - increasing prices long kept artificially low by budget-draining state subsidies - is perhaps the most explosive issue facing Chinese economic planners.

The economists, identified as Qiao Gong and Li Youpeng, called for a 12- to 14-percent price hike rate, double the 7 percent announced earlier in the week as a target for next year by Zou Jiahua, a senior government economic official.

In a report on China's social and economic blueprint for 1990, Zou parroted the standard line that the country's troubled economy is recovering and said inflation would be held at 7 percent.

But the Research Center economists said the country's price system required ''major surgery'' and blamed lavish subsidies for exacerbating the sluggish economy, along with the practice of propping up money- losing state-owned industries.

''It is regrettable ... that none of the unprofitable enterprises has been closed down, even as the industry's overall level of efficiency continued to decrease,'' the economists said.

Tight credit and a cash crunch have forced factories nationwide to stop or slow production, leaving millions of workers idle. The workers have had their salaries cut but cannot be fired under the current state employment system.

Qiao and Li proposed that China develop a social welfare system for surplus workers instead of relying on massive subsidies to keep them on unproductive jobs.

Their criticism of the system was echoed by prominent economist and government official Li Yining.

Li called for greater investment in science and technology to improve economic efficiency, warning that ''production stoppages will intensify the problem of unemployment,'' according to a report in the semi-official China News Service.

The unemployment rate is officially given at around 4 percent but does not include millions of workers sent home on reduced pay.

The increasingly bold calls for economic reform in the state-run press appear to be related to what government officials privately characterize as growing impatience with the slow pace of reform.

Even senior members of China's hard-line leadership are now aware that ''central planning doesn't work,'' said an official who requested anonymity.

''They know we need price reform but they are afraid to do anything about it,'' the official said, adding that the forthcoming 7th Communist Party Central Committee plenum, to be held after the Asian Games conclude in October, will focus on economic reform.

The official said recent calls for substantial reform are ''not just lip service'' but that would-be reformers are inhibited by elderly leaders who favor a planned economy, such as veteran revolutionary Chen Yun.

''We are just waiting for people to die before real reforms can be implemented,'' the official said.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (SEPT. 8) UPI - The Philippines will press for the removal of a clause allowing the United States "unhampered use" of its strategic military facilities in upcoming talks on the renewal of U.S. basing rights, an official said Saturday.

Health Secretary Alran Bengzon, a member of the Philippine panel in the bases talks, also said Manila was preparing to discuss the role the bases will play in the current Persian Gulf crisis if U.S. negotiators raised the issue.

The second round of talks on the 1947 pact covering six facilities, including the giant Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval complex, is scheduled Sept. 17-21. Special negotiator Richard Armitage will lead the U.S. panel. The bases treaty is due to expire in Sept. 1991.

''First of all, that's why we want to discuss the current agreement because there is a clause which says unhampered military use,'' said Bengzon in a radio interview when asked if the government will allow Washington to use the bases to support combat operations in the gulf.

''In my opinion that phrase is not good and we need to change that because we are the only country hosting military facilities where there is a clause like that,'' said Bengzon, a key adviser of President Corazon Aquino.

Although the bases pact allows the unhampered use by the United States of its facilities, both Philippine and U.S. officials have said any use of the installations as a staging area for combat operations required consultation.

Philippine officials, worried about the fate of some 50,000 Filipinos in Iraq and 5,000 in Kuwait, have repeatedly stressed the need to consult following Iraq's invasion of the tiny Arab emirate. U.S. officials have said they will comply.

A bill seeking to ban nuclear weapons in the country has long been pending in the Philippine Congress. U.S. officials have refused as a matter of policy to confirm or deny the presence of nuclear armaments in the faciliteis but have said if the measure is passed, it would be difficult for Washington to keep the bases.

''They have to notify us to get permission. Up to now we have not yet gotten any word so we are assuming that these facilities are not actively involved or used for the Middle East operations,'' Bengzon said.

ALEXANDRIA, Egypt (SEPT. 8) UPI - Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak met with Secretary of State James Baker Saturday and said afterward the Soviet Union and the United States must agree on an approach to solving the Persian Gulf crisis or face a "hell of a problem."

Baker and Mubarak met privately for an hour at the Ras El-Tin Palace in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria and then held an breakfast meeting with close advisors.

In addition to the gulf crisis, the two men discussed the Middle East peace process and bilateral relations, as well as economic reforms.

Baker praised Mubarak, who has been supportive of U.S.-led efforts to counter Iraqi aggression, for the outstanding and courageous leadership he has demonstrated throughout the crisis.

He said he believed the U.S. Congress would approve a plan to cancel Egypt's $7.1 billion military debt to the United States.

Baker also said at a news conference with Mubarak that the gulf crisis, touched off Aug. 2 when Iraq invaded Kuwait, should not be linked with the overall Middle East peace process, but Mubarak later said he believed the Palestinian question was ''the crux of the problem in the whole area.''

The secretary of state was on a swing through the Middle East before heading to Helsinki, where U.S. President George Bush and Soviet Leader Mikhail Gorbachev is to meet Sunday to discuss the gulf crisis.

''I hope Gorbachev and Bush have one line for dealing with this problem,'' Mubarak told reporters during the joint news conference with Baker. ''I do not like any differences because it will be a hell of a problem in this area if there are differences.''

Mubarak also said world leaders would continue their attempt to find a peaceful solution to the problem before using military force, saying war was not a solution ''unless it is a hopeless case.''

He said Egypt, which sent an estimated 4,000 troops to Saudia Arabia, was helping the oil-rich kingdom ''as much as we can.'' But he said Egypt would send more forces ''in the near future.'' He refused to say when, or how many more troops would be involved.

Baker was asked about a plan to establish a permanent security presence in the region much like NATO in Europe. Sources in Washington said several Arab leaders, including Mubarak, were against the plan and wanted Western forces to withdraw from the region as soon as the Gulf crisis was settled.

''American forces have been in the Persian Gulf since 1947,'' Baker said at the news conference. ''So if we were to assume ... that American forces would remain in the Persian Gulf, it would not be the establishment of a presence. We don't have anything specific in mind.''

He said he and Mubarak had discussed the importance of safety in the region, ''giving some thought to what form of security arrangement can best guarantee peace and stability in the Persian Gulf after we get beyond this current crisis and after we see full implementation of the United Nations Security Council resolutions'' against Iraq.

Mubarak sidestepped questions about whether he would support a permanant security force in the Gulf.

Baker was to have met with Egyptian Foreign Minister Issmat Abdul Maguid. But the Egyptian official was slightly injured in a car accident Friday night near Cairo and could not attend the consultations.

Before flying to Egypt Friday night, Baker met with officials in the United Arab Emirates and with Kuwait and Saudi leaders in Saudi Arabia. Kuwaiti's exiled government and the Saudis pledged to provide millions of dollars in support of the U.S-led military force in the region.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - The Department of Health and Human Services says more than a quarter of a Million U-S teen-agers have used anabolic steroids to build muscles. Secretary Louis Sullivan called the findings ''disturbing.'' Serious side effects have been reported from using steroids, which are to be used only with a doctor's prescription.

A U-S appeals court in San Francisco says the government can NOT bar aliens from working while they wait for deportation hearings. The court struck down the immigration regulations, saying they would force some people who could legitimately stay in the United States to choose between ''starving on the streets or remaining in detention.''

Hungary says NO political prisoners are left in its jails. Hungarian radio

MIAMI (SEPT. 8) UPI - Hurricane Isidore's winds decreased to 90 mph Saturday as the storm spun on a north-northwesterly course in the open Atlantic.

At 6 a.m. EDT, Isidore was centered near latitude 23.3 north, longitude 38.9 west, or about 980 miles northwest of the Cape Verde Islands.

The hurricane was moving north-northwest near 15 mph and was expected to continue that motion Saturday. Its maximum sustained winds were 90 mph, down from 100 mph Friday, and forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said additional weakening was likely Saturday.

Hurricane-force winds extended up to 35 miles from the center and tropical storm-force winds extended up to 200 miles.

Forecasters said it was too soon to tell whether Isidore would turn north out of harm's way, or take a westerly course toward the Caribbean Islands.

Isidore is the ninth named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season, which runs from June 1 to Nov. 30, and the fourth to reach hurricane strength.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Here is a roundup of the latest major events in the Persian Gulf crisis stemming from the Aug. 2 Iraqi invasion of the oil-rich emirate of Kuwait.

President Bush flew to Helsinki, Finland, Saturday to discuss a joint approach with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev to the Persian Gulf crisis, while in Amman, Jordan, a U.S. military Boeing 747 stood ready to take hundreds of Americans airlifted out of Kuwait back to the United States.

Bush said he hoped to forge a strategy with Gorbachev to raise the pressure on Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait. Bush said there is ''much at stake and much to gain if we succeed.''

The two leaders planned to meet for five hours of hastily arranged talks on Sunday in the first time since World War II that the two superpowers have been on the same side in a regional conflict.

Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, after meeting Saturday with Secretary of State James Baker, said the Soviet Union and the United States must agree on an approach to the Persian Gulf crisis or face a ''hell of a problem.'' Baker and Mubarak discussed the Middle East peace process and bilateral relations, as well as economic reforms.

Exiled Kuwaiti diplomats strongly defended the U.S.- led military buildup in the Persian Gulf but said they want it to act quickly to restore Kuwait's ousted government. The diplomats expressed bitterness and anger Friday at some Arab states, particularly Jordan, along with the Palestine Liberation Organization, for taking a soft line toward Iraq and its occupation of Kuwait.

The United States needs cargo ships quickly to transport supplies to the Perisan Gulf and is disappointed over the small number provided by its NATO allies, a top U.S. official said. Richard Clarke, assistant U.S. secretary of state for politico-military affairs, said only Britain, Italy and Portugal have responded favorably to the U.S. request.

The House of Commons overwhelming approved the government's handling of the Persian Gulf conflict and Defense Minister Tom King announced more British troops will be deployed to the gulf region. After two days of debate, little opposition was voiced during Parliament's first extraordinary debate since Argentina invaded the Falkland Islands in 1982.

The United States will provide $12 million worth of rice, flour and vegetable oil to help feed the thousands of refugees created by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, Bush administration officials said. The foodstuffs will be shipped by the end of September from the Gulf Coast to the port of Aqaba, Jordan, or wherever necessary, an official said.

Rumors that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein was ousted in a coup forced crude-oil prices down as much as $2 a barrel when traders elected to take profits on recent gains after the rumors turned out false.

Starting in Asia and Europe, markets opened lower Friday, on coup rumors that first surfaced on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, and stayed lower despite the expectations of some traders that they would resume their upward march.

World stock markets ended the week on a rebound that did not erase earlier declines, including a steep four-day losing streak in Tokyo. Wary investors stayed away from the market, increasingly feeling the rigors of five weeks of erratic trading dominated by news from the Middle East and wide swings in crude oil prices.

CHICAGO (SEPT. 8) UPI - A federal court refused to expedite an appeal by death row inmates of a judge's refusal to delay next week's scheduled execution of a man who refuses to participate in efforts to save him from death.

The 7th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals decision Friday means that unless Gov. James Thompson intervenes, Charles Walker, 50, will be put to death by lethal injection Wednesday morning at Stateville Prison near Joliet.

Thompson, a death penalty supporter, has said he will decide Monday if he will stop the execution. He is considering only a request for clemency by an anti-death penalty group because Walker has said he wants to die and will not participate in appeals to stop the execution.

The appeals court said it would not speed up the legal process and hear an appeal by attorneys for the 130 death row inmates in Illinois, who filed suit to stop the execution.

The lawsuit contends the state's lethal injection machine has not been used for so long - Thompson's execution would be the first in Illinois in 28 years - that it might not function properly and cause a slow and painful death. The suit also says the method of execution is unconstitutional.

U.S. District Judge James Zagel ruled last week the inmates' suit was not a class action and therefore did not cover Walker and he denied the inmates' request for an injunction against the execution.

Attorney Stuart Altschuler said the group went to the 7th Circuit in hopes of getting an expedited hearing before Walker is put to death. The court refused to speed up the legal process because Walker has filed an affadavit with the court saying he wanted no part in the lawsuit to block his execution.

''We continue to believe our appeal is well founded and we will announce our next steps Monday,'' Alstchuler said.

ARLINGTON, TX (SEPT. 8) UPI - Nolan Ryan's planned return for the 1991 season did not come as a shock to Texas Rangers General Manager Tom Grieve. It was, however, a relief.

Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, said Friday he would return next year and collect the $3.3 million the Rangers have agreed to pay him. He had dropped hints over the last month he would return and finally made it official in order to end the constant questioning about his future plans.

''But it was still nice to hear him say it,'' Grieve said. ''I would have been unbelievably shocked had he decided not to come back. I was reassured when he said he was coming back.''

Ryan was the scheduled starting pitcher in Saturday night's meeting with the Kansas City Royals and took a 13-7 record into the game.

Other than the money he will make, the two chief reasons for Ryan's return are his family and his back.

''It came down to the family wanting to come back, and physically I was feeling better,'' Ryan said.

Ryan, who will turn 44 next season, went on the disabled list this year with pain in his lower back. Doctors said he had a stress fracture in his back, but could not damage it further by pitching.

After coming off the disabled list, Ryan was still in pain. Despite the discomfort, however, he threw the sixth no-hitter of his career and two months later reached the 300-win plateau.

Over his last few starts, his back has improved dramatically.

''My back has gotten better,'' Ryan said. ''Once we decided what to do (stay for another season), I decided to get it out of the way now instead of letting it carry on.''

The Arlington Chamber of Commerce said Ryan's decision could mean as much as $14 million to the local economy - based on the hotel business generated by the sellout crowds which routinely come to see Ryan pitch.

Technically, the Rangers still must exercise their option on Ryan for next season and will wait until the end of the season to formally do so. They will wait as a protective measure in case Ryan should suffer an injury over the final month of the season that would threaten his plans to pitch in 1991.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 8) UPI - Federal budget problems are forcing the closure next month of seven historic Philadelphia buildings, including the home where Thomas Jefferson wrote drafts of the Declaration of Independence, officials said.

The buildings in Independence National Historical Park will be shut down and nearly 20 seasonal employees laid off two months early unless the park obtains additional operating funds, park Superintendent Hobart Cahood said.

''We think this is an intelligent management decision because we have very little hope of obtaining the funds necessary to operate them,'' Cahood told the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Six of the park's 18 buildings that are open to the public were shut down last winter because of budget constraints.

Cahood said if Congress does not agree on a plan to trim the deficit and automatic budget cuts are imposed, the park may have to shut down all its buildings this winter except the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall and put its employees on a four-day week.

The federal budget has not been approved but park officials have been told to expect at least a $400,000 reduction.

Buildings to be closed include the Marine Corps Memorial Museum, the Second Bank of the United States, the Army-Navy Museum and the Graff House where Jefferson lived in 1775 and 1776 and wrote the drafts of the declaration.

Also slated for shutdown are the Bishop White House, a restored 18th century home; the Todd House, where Dolly Todd lived before she married James Madison, the fourth president; and Franklin Court, the site of Benjamin Franklin's home.

Cawood said the Edgar Allen Poe National Historic Site, where the writer once lived, and the Thaddeus Kosciuszko National Memorial, the former home of the Polish engineer who fought for the colonists during the revolution, also will be shut down on weekdays.

They are not officially part of Independence National Historical Park but are operated by the Park Service.

COLUMBUS, GA (SEPT. 8) UPI - The State Department has tentatively identified a former Atlanta investment banker as the American shot by Iraqi soldiers this week in Kuwait City, the man's relatives said Saturday.

Ann Hoffman said State Department officials told her they believe her son, Miles Hoffman, 33, was the man shot by Iraqi soldiers breaking into his apartment in Kuwait City.

A State Department spokesman refused Saturday to confirm Mrs. Hoffman's report.

''He's been put in the hospital and they (State Department officials) are trying to get someone in to see him,'' Mrs. Hoffman said.

Relatives said Miles Hoffman, a former Atlanta investment banker working since 1987 for the Kuwaiti government as a consultant, was to have been married Aug. 17 but could not leave Kuwait because of the invasion.

He was last home in July, preparing for his marriage to Nikki Murgatroyd of Forton, England, said Hoffman's aunt, Catherine Ford of Atlanta. The two met in Kuwait but Murgatroyd was in England when the invasion began, Ford said.

Ford said none of the relatives are sure how seriously Hoffman was wounddd.

''There are so many conflicting reports and there's no definite news,'' Ford said. ''We've heard he was shot in the hand, in the forearm - we've heard he has one broken leg, two broken legs.''

Relatives hope Iraq will release Hoffman now that it has acknowledged its soldiers shot him.

''Jesse Jackson got some of the medically ill out. It seems to me like he's a casualty they'll not want to take care of,'' Ford said. ''I do think now that they shot him, they won't kill him because of the publicity.''

Mrs. Hoffman said she last heard from her son Aug. 2, the day of the invasion, when he called to say he was safe.

The investment banker left his job with Trust Company Bank in Atlanta in 1987 to work for the Kuwaiti government.

FORT WORTH, Texas (SEPT. 10) UPI - Continuing problems in the airline industry caused by rising fuel prices and sagging profits prompted giant American Airlines to cancel plans to issue $300 million in interest-deferred, convertible debt securities.

American officials said the debt securities - called LYONS, or liquid yield option notes - were to be tied to the stock price of its parent company, AMR Corp. But the decline in the stock's value made the debt issue a less attractive vehicle for raising part of the $21 billion the Fort Worth carrier plans to spend by 1995 on aircraft and equipment.

American spokesman John Hotard said Friday the airline has shelved its plan to issue the debt securities and is not considering issuing them any time soon because of the lowered stock price.

The carrier said Friday AMR stock has declined by almost 30 percent since the debt issue was announced July 19.

AMR's stock closed at $61.625 a share the day before the debt issue was announced. That same day - July 18 - a barrel of West Texas Intermediate crude was $18.55 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Friday, the price of a barrel of West Texas Intermediate was $30.04.

Airlines are among the biggest users of oil, as jet fuel, and have seen their stock prices plummet because of the sharp increase in oil prices since the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

AMR's stock closed Friday at $44.50 a share, a drop of about 27 percent since July 18.

In late July, jet fuel was selling at 57 cents to 60 centa a gallon. This week, U.S. airlines paid an average of 89 cents on the spot market, according to Aviation Daily, a trade publication.

Analysts now expect industry profits to be slim in the third quarter, which normally is the best quarter of the year, and flat in the fourth quarter, a typically slow travel period.

That outlook could worsen, depending on what American Chairman Robert Crandall says Wednesday when he addresses a gathering of airline industry analysts in New York.

Robert Baker, American's executive president-operations, said he expects Crandall's speech to paint a fairly negative picture.

''We're all in the tank for the rest of the year,'' Baker said, referring to U.S. airlines. ''Nobody is going to make a dime.''

Other analysts said they expect Crandall to predict flat earnings, in part because of the on-going contract negotiations with its 8,500- member pilots union. The Allied Pilots Association is seeking a large pay hike in the wake of the 12 percent pay hike Delta Air Lines granted its pilots Aug.1.

American's management is seeking greater employee contributions towards the cost of retirees health benefits and trying to prevent a sudden jump in personnel costs.

The two sides are far apart after nearly a year of negotiations.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - The following is the verbatim text of President Bush's arrival speech in Helsinki, Finland, Saturday prior to Sunday's summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

President Koivisto, Mrs. Koivisto, and members of the Finnish government, the city of Helsinki has often been a meeting place for nations seeking to advance the cause of peace. And my thanks to the people of Finland first for hosting this meeting and for setting an example for all the world in your resolute commitment to liberty and independence.

When President Gorbachev and I met in Washington, we discussed the possibility of meetings such as the ones we'll hold here tomorrow. We agreed that the United States and the Soviet Union had reached a stage in our relations where meetings should occur more frequently - less fanfare, working meetings held as circumstances might dictate. And our aim was that these meetings be unstructured and informal, with an open agenda and a maximum opportunity to exchange views of mutual importance.

Well, in keeping with that aim, here in Helsinki President Gorbachev and I will focus on a full range of issues. We seek continued movement toward a new Europe, whole and free. We seek to advance the pace of arms control, strategic and conventional. And I want to hear about the progress of the Soviet reform and explore other issues of interest to our two countries. And, of course, I expect that we will devote a large part of our time together to the situation in the Persian Gulf.

I've said many times this past year that we have entered a new era in world affairs. This meeting comes at a critical time; at a moment when the actions we take can shape this new world for years to come.

In the past, many regional conflicts have played themselves out against the background of the larger conflict of the cold war. Renegade regimes and unpredictable rulers resorted to force, counting on superpower stalemate to frustrate a united response. International law and international organizations were often paralyzed, powerless to prevent conflict or restore the peace.

But the international response to Iraq's invasion proves how much has changed. Here in Helsinki, President Gorbachev and I meet, hopefully to strengthen our common approach to this unjustifiable act of aggression.

Much is at stake and there is much the world stands to gain if we succeed. If the nations of the world, acting together, continue, as they have been, to isolate Iraq and deny Saddam the fruits of aggression, we will set in place the cornerstone of an international order, more peaceful, stable and secure than any that we have known.

To our Finnish hosts, let me simply say that I intend to take full advantage of this very brief but welcome opportunity to renew America's warm friendship with Finland.

I meet today with President Koivisto, whose counsel I have valued over the years. Barbara and I often talk about our visit here in the early '80's - 1983. And it was then that I first met your president - President Koivisto. We've stayed in very close touch since then. And I look forward to sharing his views on the many issues that I've just mentioned and others as well.

Finland has long been a voice of peace and stability between nations. In the councils of the CSCE, as a member of the United Nations peacekeeping forces. And today at this time of challenge, Finland once again stands with the forces of peace. I thank the government of Finland for its staunch support as a member of the United Nations Security Council, upholding international law in face of Iraq's unwarranted aggression.

Together, with the nations of the world, I am confident that we can reverse the dangerous course of events brought on by the actions of Saddam Hussein and restore peace, stability and respect for the rule of law.

Thank you Mr. President. And may God bless the people of Finland. Thank you.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived in Finland's capital Saturday for Sunday's superpower summit with President George Bush.

Gorbachev arrived under overcast skies aboard a special Soviet flight and was met at Helsinki's international Vantaa airport by Finnish President Mauno Koivisto.

Bush arrived earlier Saturday. The two leaders had no plans to meet until Sunday, when they have scheduled seven hours of talks at the Finnish presidential palace before winding up with a joint news conference.

The meeting will mark the third superpower summit in the last 10 months.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - Presidents George Bush of the United States and Mauno Koivisto of Finland agreed Saturday that U.N. sanctions against Iraq must be ''fully and strictly implemented'' but did not discuss a possible air embargo or military strike, a Finnish official said.

The two leaders met for 90 minutes after Bush arrived in Helsinki for his Sunday summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, who landed in the Finnish capital Saturday evening.

Bush rebutted Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze's call for an international conference on the Middle East to deal with Iraq's invasion and annexation of Kuwait, telling Koivisto that the United Nations is the proper forum to discuss conflicts in the region.

Bush said in a brief arrival statement that consolidated world isolation of Iraq would ''set in place the cornerstone of an international order more peaceful, stable and secure than any we have known.''

In a break with past practice, Bush and Koivisto rode together in the Finnish president's car from Helsinki's Vantaa International Airport to the 19th-century Presidential Palace. Finns, some of them holding small American flags, lined the capital's main thoroughfare, Mannerheimvagen, as the motorcade passed.

A beaming Bush shook hands with some of the hundreds of local residents, who enthusiastically greeted him outside the Presidential Palace.

Jaako Blomberg, director of the Finnish Foreign Ministry's political department, told reporters that Bush and Koivisto's talks had focused on the Persian Gulf crisis and the internal situation in the Soviet Union.

''The presidents discussed the (gulf) situation primarily from the point of view of the U.N. Security Council and agreed on the need to have Security Council sanctions fully and strictly implemented,'' Blomberg said.

Bush and Koivisto did not discuss a U.N. air embargo, U.S. military action or other possible tougher steps beyond the five U.N. measures in place against Iraq, Blomberg said.

''Future prospects of (possible) decisions were not discussed, other than the enforcement of sanctions as they are,'' he said.

Bush and Koivisto addressed the plight of tens of thousands of mainly Arab and Asian refugees who have fled Iraq and occupied Kuwait in the wake of Baghdad's Aug. 2 invasion.

They also discussed the fate of foreign nationals held hostage in Iraq, agreeing that those detained by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ''have to leave the country without any conditions,'' Blomberg said.

Koivisto raised concerns about the harmful effects of the U.N. economic blockade against Baghdad on Eastern and Central European countries heavily dependent on Iraqi oil and other imports.

Asked whether the two men had discussed Shevardnadze's call for an international conference to consider the gulf crisis in a broader context, Blomberg that Bush had made a ''reference ... to the United Nations being the proper forum for Middle East issues.''

Shevardnadze, who arrived in Helsinki with Gorbachev, previously said: ''I believe this (Middle East conference) plan is feasible even though, as far as I am aware, (U.S.) Secretary of State James Baker is not very enthusiastic at the moment.''

In an apparent reference to possible unilateral military action against Iraq by Saudi-based U.S. troops, Shevardnadze said the superpower summit ''will give both sides an opportunity to agree'' that all operations in the gulf must be based on U.N. resolutions.

''Neither the Soviet Union nor the United States have any ready- made formula to achieve a peaceful settlement to the gulf crisis,'' Shevardnadze told Soviet journalists Friday as he flew to Moscow from Japan to conclude a week-long Asia tour.

Shevardnadze said he was prepared to go to Iraq to help negotiate an end to the crisis.

But Gorbachev's spokesman, Vitaly Ignatenko, told reporters in Helsinki that Iraqi Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz would not be welcome in Moscow for more talks unless he brought new proposals.

The invasion of Kuwait has seriously harmed relations between the Soviet Union and Iraq, which had been close allies with numerous economic and military ties.

On arriving at Helsinki's airport Saturday, Gorbachev said of his meeting with Bush, ''It is important for us to compare our political approaches and to cooperate in order to protect the important trends developing in the world today.'' He said it was important to make sure those trends ''are not thwarted.''

Finns said they were proud that their neutral, non-aligned country had been chosen as the venue for the summit.

''Finland is a small country, and now everyone is watching and interested in Helsinki and what's going to happen here,'' said Maria Roivas, an 18-year-old music student.

Bush noted in his arrival remarks that ''the city of Helsinki has often been a meeting place for nations seeking to advance the cause of peace.''

A senior Soviet official in Helsinki before Gorbachev's arrival said it was ''absolutely unpredictable'' whether the superpower leaders would stick to their plans of holding only one day of talks.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - U.S. help for the Soviet oil industry probably will be the topic when President Bush meets with American businessmen Sunday after his Helsinki summit with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev on the Persian Gulf crisis.

Oilmen are heavily represented among 15 U.S. businessmen that will tour the Soviet Union next week with Commerce Secretary Robert Mosbacher in an attempt to bolster lagging Soviet oil production and improve trade.

Mosbacher told reporters Thursday the group will stop in Helsinki Sunday on its way to Moscow to meet with Bush after his summit with the Soviet leader.

The ''presidential mission,'' arranged before Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of neighboring oil-rich Kuwait, is officially unrelated to the hastily called summit meeting to discuss the gulf crisis.

But as a result of the Soviet's help in the gulf, which Bush has called ''real and very helpful support,'' the United States appears ready to speed up help to the ailing Soviet oil industry.

''If they had taken a different position, our attitude might not have been so positive,'' Mosbacher, a former oilman, told reporters.

The Soviet Union is the world's largest oil producer and oil exports account for about half of its sorely needed hard-currency earnings from abroad.

But production from Soviet oil fields is dropping and Moscow needs American technology and know-how to find new fields as well as maintain and raise output from existing ones.

Soviet production is forecast to fall by 600,000 barrels a day to a 11.5 million-11.6 million barrel-a-day average in 1990, following a 350,000 barrel-a-day decline in 1989 from 12.48 million barrels daily in 1988, said Robert Ebel, international vice president of Enserch Corp. in Washington.

Even if deals were made soon, it probably would be two years before help from Western oil companies could reverse the decline, the former Soviet affairs analyst for the CIA said.

To some extent, it is in the U.S. interest to help the Soviets increase their oil production, he said.

''We would not want another competitor for Middle East oil because of the current dependence of the United States, Europe and the Pacific Rim nations on oil from the region,'' Ebel said.

U.S. participation and investment in Soviet oil fields have been held back by the lack of a trade treaty between the two nations and the need for tax and investment agreements, he said.

''These kinds of treaties give you protection under the law,'' Ebel said. ''U.S. companies are in a position to help but they are being cautious and looking at the situation carefully. Can you make money and does profit recycling exist?'' he questioned.

There is no set agenda for the summit and the presumption is that the need for a trade agreement, which has been delayed by emigration restrictions against Soviet Jews, will at least come up.

But there is no indication ex-oilman Bush and Gorbachev will discuss ways to improve Soviet oil production.

Ebel said Energy Department officials have told him the White House had not requested any background data Bush might need to discuss the subject.

The Soviets have actively sought joint ventures with U.S. oil companies but Ebel said Soviet laws covering such ventures are ''immature.''

''It's difficult to know who has the final decision authority,'' he said.

Leighton Steward, president of Louisiana Land & Exploration Co. in New Orleans, said the U.S. businessmen are scheduled to meet with Gorbachev and possibly Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian Republic.

''I hope they will tell us that the individual republics will be able to make their own deals,'' said Steward, who heads one of the largest independent U.S. exploration and production companies.

Cutting out the central Soviet bureauracy would shorten the time to complete a deal by as much as half, the executive said.

''I hope to come back with a firmer idea of when a deal could be cut,'' Steward said. His company already has held preliminary talks with the Soviets, he said.

''I would hope to be paid in oil rather than in rubles. I'm sure most of the deals will be cut on that basis,'' Steward said.

Even if the trip does not result in movement toward a deal, Chesley Pruet, president of Pruet Oil in El Dorado, Ark., said he would be willing to give the Soviets any technical advice sought.

''We want to support the process of economic reform,'' said the head of the drilling contractor and oil production company.

Chevron Corp. Chairman Ken Derr will be among the group touring the Soviet Union next week.

''Barring unforeseen circumstances, Chevron hopes to have a deal (with Moscow) by the end of the year,'' said Mike Libbey, spokesman for the San Francisco-based oil giant.

Chevron announced in June it was was studying the feasibility of including the huge Tengiz oil field near the Caspian Sea in a joint venture it has been discussing with Moscow for two years.

The potential of Tengiz rivals Alaska's North Slope, with nearly 10 billion barrels of recoverable crude.

But because of the field's difficult geology, the Soviets have not been able to exploit this potential and are seeking outside technological help.

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 8) UPI - As U.S. and foreign diplomats describe it, Sunday's Helsinki summit began with a series of telephone calls, starting with President Bush and Secretary of State James Baker, to Moscow about two weeks ago.

Speaking by telephone and by the telex ''hot line,'' the Americans suggested to Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze that it would be mutually profitable to have a meeting and soon. As one senior official put it, the idea was ''to see where we are after the first crisis of the post-Cold War period.''

The Americans divided their goals into long and short term.

In the short term, Bush and Baker wanted to tighten up the noose around Iraq's economic lifeline, to make Saddam Hussein give up any lingering hopes of driving a wedge between the two superpowers and to drive home the idea that it really is a case of Iraq against the rest of the world.

In the longer term, Bush wanted to discuss what American officials call the ''architecture'' of the future, focusing on a newly revitalized United Nations that is no longer paralyzed by East-West rivalry.

From the beginning, Bush and Baker emphasized that the meeting should be low key, informal and brief, in the pattern of December's Malta meeting.

Gorbachev, who had his own agenda, quickly agreed in principle to the meeting.

As one diplomatic official involved in the pre-summit arrangements said, ''In the Soviet Union today, there are only two charismatic leaders, Gorbachev and (Russian President) Boris Yeltsin. Yeltsin is immensely popular domestically, but only Gorbachev has international credibility and stature.''

Gorbachev, at a time when he is under intense domestic political pressure, appeared to be eager for any help he can get, one diplomat said.

The next question was where to hold the summit. Moscow and Washington were quickly ruled out because the protocol and accompanying bureaucratic teams in each capital would make an informal meeting impossible.

Gorbachev, according to diplomatic officials, wanted the meeting to be in some neutral site in Europe, preferably close to Moscow.

Helsinki, which has survived the daunting experience of housing, feeding and providing communications for thousands of journalists during several recent international conferences, quickly moved up the list of possible sites, while others dropped off.

As one Finnish diplomat put it, ''When they eliminated those which would be unsuitable because of logistics or location, they came to us.''

That, in itself was a change, because Finnish officials were informed 18 months ago that the United States was extremely annoyed at both Sweden and Finland because of their giving open support to the Sandinistas in Nicaragua. With the Nicaraguan war over, Finland and Sweden had once again become eligible for official American visits, another sign that the Cold War and its incidental skirmishes were history.

Another plus for Helsinki, according to diplomats, was the fact that Finland has contributed more troops to United Nations peacekeeping forces than any other nation, an important bit of symbolism for two leaders who were coming to talk about such things as bolstering the role of the United Nations in the coming years.

Finland, the site of the original Conference on Cooperation and Security in Europe - the so-called Helsinki Final Act - also played a key role in the document that paved the way for the Gorbachev reforms. That was another plus.

The main meeting will be in the Finnish Presidential Palace, another piece of symbolism. When Finland was annexed by the Russian empire in the 19th century, it was the home of the Russian grand duke who ruled the province.

The palace is now the residence of the Finnish president, who leads the democratic Finnish state, which has lived uneasily but successfully in the shadow of the Soviet Union for the past 73 years.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Coaches Jerry Glanville, Joe Bugel and Bruce Coslet face their old teams and the San Francisco 49ers return to the site of their greatest victory on the opening weekend of the 1990 NFL season.

Glanville, whose rocky run as Oilers head coach ended when he resigned after last season, faces Houston in his first game with the Atlanta Falcons.

Bugel, a Washington assistant for nine years, coaches his first game as the Phoenix Cardinals boss in Washinton. The scenario is the same for Bruce Coslet. After nine years as a Bengals assistant, he takes his New York Jets to Cincinnati for his head coaching debut. The third man making his NFL head coaching debut Sunday, New England's Rod Rust, faces the Miami Dolphins at home.

The 49ers cap the opening weekend Monday night at New Orleans, where they crushed Denver 55-10 last January to repeat as Super Bowl champions. Against the Saints, the 49ers kick off their quest for the historic ''three-peat.'' Glanville, had a 35-35 record at Houston from 1985-89 and led the Oilers into the playoffs three years. But they were considered underachievers because they never advanced past the second round of the postseason, and great things are expected under Glanville's successor Jack Pardee.

''Any time you leave a team, and it doesn't have to be as head coach, you have a special emotion when you play that team for the first time,'' said Glanville, who was uncharacteristically low-key this week.

''I'm sure Sunday will be emotional but I'll try to keep it away from the players.''

Oddly, the Falcons are slight favorites though they are coming off a 3-13 season and seven straight losing years.

The game should be wide open, because Glanville brought his red gun offense with him to Atlanta and Pardee installed the run-and-shoot he used at the University of Houston. The passing attacks suit Falcons quarterback Chris Miller and Houston passer Warren Moon.

Pardee tried to downplay Glanville's role on Sunday.

''Jerry's not going to be on the field,'' he said. ''If he is, we'll be getting some yardage out of it.

''I'd definitely be disappointed if our players didn't want to play their best against their former coach.''

Pardee returns to the NFL, where he coached Chicago from 1975-77 and Washington from 1978-80.

Any advantage Bugel and Coslet have in knowing their old teams' systems is overriden by the superior talent those former teams enjoy. The biggest preseason decision for both former offensive assistants was selecting a quarterback.

Bugel cut veteran Gary Hogeboom and will start untested Timm Rosenbach. Coslet chose incumbent Ken O'Brien over Tony Eason in a battle of veterans.

Coslet said he will suspend friendships on the Bengals from the opening kickoff to the final gun.

''I've got a lot of friends on the Cincinnati sidelines, but for three hours on Sunday they're no friends of mine,'' he said.

Bengals Coach Sam Wyche said Coslet's return might give the Jets an emotional edge.

''It's going to be emotional for Bruce because he wants to come back and show what he can do with his new guys,'' Wyche said. ''We'll have to respond emotionally or we'll lose whatever edge we have.''

Joe Montana and the 49ers face a rugged Saints defense Monday night. The 49ers have won their last three over the Saints in New Orleans, by a total of seven points.

''The New Orleans game is going to be indicative of the way our whole season is going to go,'' San Francisco safety Chet Brooks said. ''Every team is going to be up for us, every week.''

In other games Sunday, it's Philadelphia at the New York Giants, Denver at the Los Angeles Raiders, Indianapolis at Buffalo, the Los Angeles Rams at Green Bay, Minnesota at Kansas City, Pittsburgh at Cleveland, San Diego at Dallas, Seattle at Chicago, and Tampa Bay at Detroit.

At East Rutherford, N.J., the Eagles try to make it five straight over their bitter NFC East rivals. Philadelphia is without holdout All- Pro tight end Keith Jackson, while the Giants have former holdout All- Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor after three days of practice.

At Buffalo, No. 1 draft pick Jeff George makes his NFL debut as starting quarterback for the Colts against the two-time defending AFC East champion Bills.

BY DAVID E. ANDERSON

WASHINGTON (SEPT. 8) UPI - Rabbi James Rudin pulled into a gas station along the Ohio Turnpike at the end of August and found a wait for service - not because of gas lines, but because the attendants wanted to hear the latest radio broadcast on developments in the Persian Gulf.

''It was very strange,'' said Rudin, the director of interreligious affairs for the American Jewish Committee. ''I travel a lot and I've never seen that before - two guys stopping their work and going to listen to the news - and this was four weeks into the crisis.''

Rudin's experience is a sign that the Middle East crisis is dominating the American psyche, stirred by the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait by Iraq and jolted by the massive U.S. military response, the taking of Western hostages and world condemnation of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Other indicators confirm Rudin's experience.

In mid-August, the Times Mirror Center for the Public and the Press found that the American public was ''riveted'' on the crisis in a way never observed since the center began surveying interest in news events in 1986.

''The center's 'news interest index' indicated that the gulf crisis is one of the highest attention-getters in history,'' said Andrew Kohut, director of the survey. He said 85 percent of those surveyed volunteered the crisis as the most important news event of the month. A 60 percent rating followed the U.S. invasion of Panama in December and a 50 percent measure was recorded after the fall of communism in Eastern Europe late last year.

''Like it or not, the buildup in the Middle East places us in a crisis, and every minute of news coverage reminds us of our fears for ourselves, our families and our country,'' said Dr. Charles Figley, a family therapist and director of the Psychosocial Stress Research Program at Florida State University.

So far, the public supports a White House policy that has deployed more than 100,000 American military personnel to warships in the Persian Gulf and the Saudi Arabian desert and has authorized the first call-up of military reserve forces in almost 20 years.

An NBC News-Wall Street Journal poll released last week found that 76 percent of those Americans surveyed supported President Bush's decision to deploy troops, up from 70 percent when the crisis began.

Paul Dyster, of the Catholic University of America and a former State Department official, said political scientists agree that there is a cycle that typifies American public opinion when the president takes forceful action.

''Usually, the public reaction can be described in a general way as first, very supportive of the president in the early stages of the crisis,'' Dyster said. ''People tend not to be very critical, they tend to accept the things they hear from the White House.

''As time goes one, however, and more sources of information become available - from the media, for example - they begin to apply a more traditional cost-benefit analysis. As the costs mount, as the risks mount, there is a tendency for the public to become much more ''endency fo

Dyster also said ''muted'' public opposition partly resulted from the fact that ''people have voted with their feet - they'd rather fight for Persian oil than undergo domestic hardship'' and in part because there is no military draft.

''We have a volunteer army. Even the reserves and National Guard units are made up of volunteers and are very different from conscriptees. It makes it easier for the American public to accept sending them somewhere.''

Dyster said he expects the public - for now - to remain patient and continue to support Bush. ''American public opinion, because of Vietnam, the (Iranian) hostage crisis, has become very sophisticated,'' he said.

Despite overwhelming support, there is concern.

''I saw a great deal of concern,'' Rudin said of his automobile trip from Madison, Wis., to New York City. ''People feel enormous concern about American lives. There is a lot of fear, a lot of anxiety.''

On the campus of the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Rudin said, parents wondered about allowing their children to join ROTC. There was also concern - and some anger, he said - about the failure of America's allies, especially Germany and Japan, to commit troops to the desert.

Larry Ross, a spokesman for evangelist Billy Graham and a Dallas resident, said there was intense concern over the crisis in his community - in part because it is touched both by the oil business and because many of the troops being sent to Saudi Arabia are coming from that area.

''I wouldn't exactly call it anxiety,'' he said. ''But there is an emotion out there. There is a community spirit, a spirit of the people saying, 'We're all a part of this.'''

Other communities and groups are responding to the crisis and the disruption by finding ways of showing solidarity with the troops and hostages.

Teamsters union President William McCarthy called on members to wear blue and yellow ribbons on Labor Day in support of troops and hostages and declared the traditional workers' holiday ''Support U.S. Troops and Hostages Day.''

Karen Bunker, Federal Way, Wash., posted a notice on the Prodigy personal computer network, which has some 450,000 subscribers, noting her son was on a ship in the Mideast and seeking recipies for cookies that would stand up to shipment overseas.

The response was overwhelming, according to Prodigy officials, and resulted in Operation Cookie as well as an outpouring of support for those engaged in the Mideast mission.

Other responses speak directly to the disruptions caused by the military buildup and the call-up of reserves.

The National Apartment Association, a trade association of managers, developers and builders of multi-family housing, urged its members to ''accommodate the special circumstances our soldiers are experiencing by keeping rents stable and accommodating leases during their time of service.''

Rudin said his trip indicated that so far most of the public's concern and attention is focused on the troops.

''There was very little concern about the hostages,'' he said. ''Much, much more about the GIs, the men and women and how long they'll be there.''

The downplaying of the role of the hostages - and their families on the homefront - has some people worried.

The American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy estimates that well over 100,000 families are missing members, either deployed in the military to the region or held hostage and even more families are touched by other anxieties springing from the crisis - over a possible draft, nuclear war, a stock market crash and even family farms failing as a result of the economic blockade.

Dr. Pauline Boss, a family therapist at the Univeristy of Minnesota, said she was concerned about the lack of compassion being shown toward the hostages and their families.

''There's some blaming of the victim going on,'' she said, noting that people were viewing the hostages as ''only there for the money.''

''I wonder if we're slowly moving to situation where if they do get hurt, we won't feel so bad. I'm a little bit nervous about that, concerned that we don't remove the compassion.''

(SEPT. 8) UPI - President Bush flew to Helsinki, Finland, this morning for the summit meeting with Soviet President Gorbachev that's intended to increase pressure on Iraq. The two leaders hold five hours of talks tomorrow. Gorbachev is in favor of the economic embargo against Iraq. Bush hopes to persuade him to play a more direct role, although he will NOT ask Gorbachev to send troops.

MIAMI (SEPT. 8) UPI - Atmospheric winds sheared off the top of Hurricane Isidore Saturday, slicing it down to a minimal hurricane with top winds of just 75 mph.

Isidore's maximum sustained winds dropped rapidly, down from 100 mph on Friday, forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami said. They predicted the storm would continue to weaken Saturday.

If its sustained winds drop below 74 mph, Isidore would be downgraded to a tropical storm.

''It's still too early to tell if it's going to try to make a comeback, but I think it will weaken to a tropical storm today,'' hurricane forecaster Max Mayfield said.

At noon EDT, Isidore was centered near latitude 23.5 north, longitude 39.8 west, or about 935 miles west-northwest of the Cape Verde Islands.

It was moving north-northwest at near 13 mph and was expected to continue that general motion for the next 24 hours.

Isidore developed from a tropical depression Wednesday. Forecasters had feared it might turn westward toward the Caribbean, but it has spun harmlessly through the open Atlantic.

''It's a long, long way from land and I can't think of any reason for it to change direction,'' Mayfield said. ''That keeps it away from the Caribbean. It's a minimal hurricne now and will remain a threat only to marine interests.''

Hurricane-force winds extended 35 miles from the center and tropical storm-force winds extended up to 200 miles.

Isidore is the ninth named storm of the Atlantic-Caribbean hurricane season and the fourth to reach hurricane strength. The season runs from June 1 to Nov. 30.

JEDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA (SEPT. 8) UPI - Members of a congressional defense appropriations subcommittee hailed Saturday the prospect of Soviet troops being deployed in Saudi Arabia alongside U.S. troops, saying such a move would prove the existence of ''a new world order'' of superpower cooperation against leaders like Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

Rep. John Murtha, D-Pa., who spent three days touring Saudi Arabia with a 10-person congressional delegation, said that if Moscow was considering sending ground forces to Saudi Arabia, ''We would welcome the Soviet troops.''

President Bush told reporters aboard Air Force One en route to Sunday's summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev that he had no plans to ask the Soviet leader to deploy such troops, but U.S. officials are known to believe it would be useful for the Soviets to send forces to join U.S. and multinational troops sent to the gulf region.

''There is a new world order,'' Murtha said with reference to the collapse of the cold war and U.S. and Soviet support for sanctions against Iraq in response to its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait. ''The two superpowers are now coming together to find peaceful solutions to regional conflicts.

''This is where (Saddam) Hussein completely miscalculated,'' the congressman said. ''I am sure he though the Soviets would completely veto any sanctions against him.''

Murtha and other members of the defense subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee toured sites where U.S. forces are deployed in Saudi Arabia's Eastern province and in Jeddah, where they had an audience with Saudi King Fahd and met with exiled Kuwaiti leaders.

Although there are trade links between Saudi Arabia and the Soviet Union, the Saudi kingdom does not have diplomatic relations with Moscow because the orthodox Islamic monarchy objects to official Soviet athiesm.

There are signs this objection is wavering, however, and a Western diplomat, when asked how Riyadh would react to Soviet troops on Saudi soil said, ''I think they would welcome it.''

Most of Iraq's weaponry was supplied by the Soviets and about 1,000 of the estimated 5,000 Soviets remaining in Iraq are military advisers, which Moscow has refused to withdraw because it does not want to break contractual obligations.

But Moscow moved swiftly to ban all arms exports to Iraq following the Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Citizens of the two superpowers have already found some appreciation of each other in Saudi Arabia.

At one port facility in the Eastern province, where the U.S. military is unloading vast shipments of munitions, a Soviet freighter has berthed in recent days to unload grain.

U.S. Marines have been paying special attention to the vessel because its female crew members spend their spare time sunbathing on the deck of the hammer-and-sickle bedecked ship.

The Soviet women have started playing to their captive audience, strolling about the deck and waving to the Americans.

Murtha's delegation has also met with the overall commander of the U.S. ground forces in the gulf, Gen. Norman H. Schwarzkopf, who delegation members said emphatically denied a report that he was in a power struggle with his Saudi counterpart.

''It is completely inaccurate,'' Murtha said of a Washington Post report on the alleged dispute. ''There are no problems with the command structure. ... There is no difference between the Saudi policy on this international atrocity and U.S. policy.''

Schwarzkopf was reportedly incensed when Saudi Gen. Khaled Ibn Sultan said the United States would have to consult with Saudi King Fahd before launching any offense against Iraq from Saudi positions. Such a caveat would limit American options to strike if U.S. hostages held in Kuwait and Iraq were in danger, analysts say.

Murtha stressed the military buildup in the region was a multinational effort, not one involving only the United States - pointing out that Egypt and Syria had sent troops as well.

Murtha said the United Nations was proving itself to be an effective means of upholding international laws against leaders like Saddam, whom he described as the ''Hitler of the Middle East,'' and he said U.S. forces in the gulf area would be able to resist any attack by Iraqi troops from neighboring Kuwait.

GAINESVILLE, FL. (SEPT. 8) UPI - Sources close to the investigation of the slayings of five college students said a chief suspect has admitted to having knowledge of the first two killings, a newspaper reported Saturday.

The Florida Times-Union said that during an interview with investigators last week, suspect Edward Humphrey named someone he said killed the first two victims - Christina Powell, 17, and Sonja Larson, 18.

The two University of Florida students were found stabbed to death Aug. 26 in their Gainesville apartment.

The Times-Union said investigators believe the person Humphrey named is one of the multiple personalities he has appeared to exhibit.

Humphrey is considered to be one of eight suspects in the case. He was arrested on Aug. 30 and charged with assaulting his grandmother and was being held in lieu of $1 million bond in the Brevard County Detention Center.

Quoting unidentified sources, the Times-Union said Humphrey, 18, a part-time student at the University of Florida, made the statement to state Department of Law Enforcement investigators after he was charged with beating his grandmother in her home. Humphrey gave no other details in his statement.

So far, authorities have refused to discuss publicly what Humphrey told investigators and have not made an arrest in connection with the killings.

Gainesville Police Lt. Sadie Darnell said investigators expect defense attorneys to challenge any statements Humphrey has made if he is charged. She said the task force has developed a strategy to deal with such a defense move, but she would not say what the strategy is.

The Times-Union said it had also confirmed a report that investigators found a pubic hair similar to Humphrey's at one of the crime scenes.

The hair, unlike fingerprints, is not considered to be conclusive evidence but can be used to narrow a list of suspects.

Investigators took hair and blood samples from Humphrey Thursday, but police would not comment on reports they were awaiting DNA test results. Such tests, which can help identify the killer, usually take six to eight weeks.

Police also said Friday they found ''promising'' evidence when they searched Humphrey's Gainesville apartment, his grandmother's home in Indialantic and his car. Authorities refused to disclose any details about the searches.

''We continue to make progress,'' said Alachua County Sheriff's spokesman Lt. Spencer Mann. But he said, ''An arrest is not imminent.''

Darnell said Friday that investigators speculate the killer may have spent from one to two hours in some of the apartments where the murder took place, and police believe the killer had some knowledge of his victims.

The bodies of the five slain students were all found in their apartments between Aug. 26 and Aug. 28. All five victims lived within 2 miles of each other and within 2 miles of the university campus. Besides Powell and Larson, the victims included Christina Hoyt, 18, Tracy Paules, 23 and Manuel Taboada, 23. Hoyt was a student at Santa Fe Community College and the others were all UF students.

All five were stabbed to death, and some of their bodies were mutilated.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - The following is a verbatim transcript of Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's speech on arrival in Helsinki Saturday prior to Sunday's summit with U.S. President George Bush:

Mr. President and Mrs. Koivisto, let me very warmly thank you and the friendly people of Finland for your hospitality in receiving us and for once again agreeing to take part in a very important event.

It is very symbolic that this extremely important meeting between the president of the Soviet Union and the president of the United States will be taking place in Helsinki, which saw the birth of some very important trends that are evolving today and acquiring further prospects.

President George Bush expressed the desire for us to meet at this crucial moment in history when it is very important to compare our political approaches and to cooperate in order to protect the positive trends evolving in the world today to make sure that they are not thwarted by any development.

I accepted this invitation with pleasure, and given the rapid agreement of the government of Finland, we are now here. I hope this meeting will be successful. It is important for us to meet personally. Although we have been in touch through our personal representatives and in various other ways, it is necessary to meet in order to discuss the acute crisis in the Persian Gulf and a number of other issues.

I would like to conclude my brief remarks by expressing very warm wishes to the people of Finland from all the peoples of the Soviet Union. I wish prosperity to your country. Thank you.

TAMPA, FL (SEPT. 8) UPI - Three hemophiliac brothers who were shunned by their community when it became known they had the AIDS virus have lost their legal battle against two pharmaceutical companies they said made the blood products that infected them.

U.S. District Judge Elizabeth A. Kovachevich cleared the pharmaceutical companies Friday of negligence and granted their request to have the case dismissed.

''Given the law as it exists in Florida today, this court is bound to grant summary judgment to the defendants,'' Kovachevich said.

Clifford and Louise Ray of Sarasota filed suit in 1988 against Cutter Laboratories, a division of Miles Inc., and Armour Pharmaceutical Co., on behalf of their three sons, Ricky, 13, Robert, 12, and Randy, 10.

Their suit claimed their sons were exposed to the AIDS virus through contaminated blood products they took for their hemophilia. They claimed Cutter and Armour were negligent in the manufacture and distribution of coagulating agents.

But attorneys for the companies successfully argued that the Rays and their doctors could not specifically identify the plasma product that infected the boys. Without showing a direct cause of the damages, the family cannot sue for negligence, Kovachevich's order said.

The family also sued under other theories of liability not yet accepted in Florida but which have become major tools of consumer litigation in other states.

Those theories hold that when a consumer cannot show the exact source of a defective product, such as when the consumer uses the same product from different suppliers over time, damages should be assessed according to each firm's share of the market.

Kovachevich said those theories were argued before the Florida Supreme Court in 1986 but ''unfortunately'' no decision has been rendered, giving the Rays no other legal remedy.

''This is particularly disturbing given Florida's constitutional mandate that for every wrong there must be redress,'' Kovachevich said.

The Rays' attorney were not available for comment.

The Rays drew national attention in 1987 when they were shunned by the community of Arcadia and by school officials after the boys' AIDS virus infection became known.

Their house burned down in a fire investigators said was arson, but no arrests were ever made. The Rays have since settled in Sarasota.

Their suit alleged that Cutter and Armour failed to screen out high-risk blood donors from the plasma from which the agents are made, failed to test the products for AIDS and failed to warn users of the risks of contracting AIDS.

During litigation, Cutter Labs mistakenly gave the Rays' attorneys a memo showing that Cutter's own attorney recommended as early as 1982 that plasma products carry warnings about AIDS. Cutter and Armour did not start including the warnings until 1984.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 8) UPI - Workers at a bulk mail processing center were evacuated for several hours Saturday after finding a box of World War I- era grenades in the mail, police said.

The devices were found when a parcel being unloaded from a truck at the Bulk Mail Center fell off a conveyor belt and broke open, said Philadelphia police Lt. Gene Zelks.

''There were 19 grenades of first World War vintage, a 40- millimeter shell and some relics from the first World War,'' Zelks said.

Workers were evacuated for about three hours and the devices taken to the Police Academy. They were detonated without incident, police said.

ANDREWS AIR FORCE BASE, Md. (SEPT. 8) UPI - White House and congressional budget negotiators met at their military hideaway for a second day Saturday as federal workers protested the threat of widespread furloughs should the talks fail.

Negotiations resumed at 1 p.m. following a morning of separate Democratic and Republican ''caucuses,'' but there was no word on progress made during the 13 1/2-hour opening session kicked off Friday by President Bush.

The marathon budget summit, the latest and probably last in a series of negotiations that began in May, are aimed at reaching an accord on spending cuts and tax increases to reduce the $168.8 billion federal deficit.

Failure to produce a budget package by Oct. 1 would set off $105 billion in automatic spending cuts under the Gramm-Rudman budget- balancing law. Federal agencies have warned that such a development would severely curtail basic government services and result in the furloughs of federal workers.

As talks continued Saturday, about two dozen government employees, chanting, ''hell no, furloughs!'' and wearing black armbands, picketed outside the gates of Andrews, 15 miles east of Washington, to protest the threatened layoffs.

''We're here to send a message that we don't want them to strike a budget deal that's at the expense of federal employees or the people that we serve,'' said John Sturdivant, president of the American Federation of Government Employees.

The union represents 700,000 of the 2.1 million civilian federal workers who could lose several weeks of pay if the automatic spending cuts take effect.

''The federal employees have done our job,'' Sturdivant said. ''Obviously, the administration and members of Congress haven't done their jobs or else we wouldn't be here.''

Bush, before heading off to Finland for a meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, opened the budget talks Friday with words of encouragement, saying he sensed a ''new spirit of optimism'' for reaching an agreement.

The negotiators met from 10 a.m. until 11:30 p.m. the first day, said Karen Beimdiek, a spokeswoman for the House Democratic leader Richard Gephardt of Missouri, chairman of the talks.

The administration team and 17 congressional negotiators have given themselves an unofficial deadline of Monday, hoping to reach a settlement in time for the president's return from Helsinki.

The negotiators planned to remain sequestered for the duration of the talks at the Officers Club at Andrews, away from reporters and distractions of Capitol Hill. News media were allowed on the base, but were relegated to facilities a good distance from the club.

The administration and congressional leaders of both parties had agreed going into the talks to shoot for a budget package that would reduce the deficit by $50 billion in fiscal 1991, which begins Oct. 1, and by $500 billion over five years.

Because these goals fall short of the current Gramm-Rudman targets, the law would have to be modified as part of any new budget package.

A savings of $50 billion is twice the size of the largest previous one-year deficit reduction - a cut of $25 billion achieved in late 1987 following the stock market crash.

But it is less than half the $105 billion in spending cuts - split evenly between defense and domestic programs - that would be imposed under Gramm-Rudman starting Oct. 1 if no budget agreement is reached.

The law exempts certain programs from the Gramm-Rudman cuts, such as Social Security and most entitlement programs for the poor. Reductions in Medicare benefits cannot exceed 2 percent and Bush has exempted military personnel.

Nevertheless, federal agencies have warned of widespread disruptions in basic functions of the government, as well as furloughs of up to 22 days for most civilian federal employees if the automatic cuts take effect.

''They've talked about 22 days, but we hear figures of 30 to 60 days. We can't afford that,'' Sturdivant said. ''Gramm-Rudman is no way to run a government. It's a cop-out.''

Although Social Security is insulated from the Gramm-Rudman budget ax, Sturdivant noted that his union represents 55,000 Social Security employees, and that furloughs could prevent benefit checks from going out on time.

Health care for veterans, meat and poultry inspections, prison security and civilian military support are also among the government services that would be diminished, he said.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL. (SEPT. 8) UPI - Engineers removed foam insulation from around leaking fuel pumps in the grounded shuttle Columbia's engine room Saturday and geared up to replace the units Sunday in critical work to keep the ship on track for launch around Sept. 17.

On nearby launch pad 39B, meanwhile, engineers worked to install the European-built Ulysses solar probe in the shuttle Discovery's payload bay for blastoff around Oct. 5.

To put the spacecraft on the proper course to the sun, Discovery must be launched between Oct. 5 and Oct. 18 or the $750 million mission will be delayed for 13 months - a bleak prospect for a project already running four years behind schedule because of the 1986 Challenger disaster.

Given Discovery's relatively tight 18-day launch period, or window, and an internal NASA rule calling for three weeks between shuttle launches, Columbia must get off the ground within a few days of its current Sept. 17 target, or the flight likely will be delayed until after the higher-priority Ulysses mission.

Columbia and its seven-man crew were grounded eight hours before blastoff Thursday when sensors detected explosive hydrogen gas seeping into the ship's engine compartment.

Launch originally was scheduled for launch May 30, but the flight was put on hold by a leak in a 17-inch-wide hydrogen fuel line fitting. The fitting was replaced and did not appear to leak Wednesday night during fuel loading.

Engineers now believe Columbia actually was suffering from two different leaks in May and that only one was fixed, the one involving the 17-inch ''disconnect'' fitting that allows the shuttle's tank to be jettisoned in space. A similar leak grounded the shuttle Atlantis in July.

Data indicates the leak that grounded Columbia Wednesday involved hydrogen recirculation pumps in the shuttle's engine compartment. The pumps are used to keep liquid hydrogen flowing through critical engine systems prior to launch.

Engineers chipped insulating foam away from the pump housing Saturday and planned to remove the unit Sunday and replace it with a spare pump package.

If no additional problems crop up, Columbia will be cleared for takeoff around Sept. 17.

At the same time, engineers are working around the clock to ready Discovery for blastoff on the long-awaited Ulysses mission.

While launch officially is targeted for Oct. 5, the flight likely will be delayed a few days at least because of work to troubleshoot a leak in the shuttle's Freon cooling system.

Engineers worked Saturday to install Ulysses in Discovery's cargo bay and with that work complete, technicians will be able to focus on resolving the coolant system problem. The leak is slow - 1 percent per day - and NASA managers may elect to simply top off Discovery's coolant supplies and launch the ship on its four-day mission as is.

Ulysses is a joint project between the European Space Agency and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The nuclear-powered probe is the first spacecraft ever built to fly over the poles of the sun.

Ulysses cost the European Space Agency some $250 million. NASA is chipping in some $500 million, which includes the cost of the shuttle launch, data processing and a $95 million three-stage solid-fuel booster system.

To accomplish its mission, Ulysses first must be fired to Jupiter so the giant planet's gravity can fling it down, out of the plane of the solar system and back toward the sun. The probe's post-Jupiter trajectory will carry it first over the sun's south pole and then the north.

Discovery's 18-day launch window is set by the positions of Earth and Jupiter and the power of Ulysses' booster rocket. If Discovery is not off the ground by Oct. 23, the flight will be delayed 13 months to allow Jupiter and Earth to return to favorable launch positions.

SAN ANTONIO (SEPT. 8) UPI - More than 2,000 people crowded into a giant airplane hangar Saturday because there was not enough room in any church to remember the first military reservists to die while aiding the cause of Operation Desert Shield.

And when the last prayers were said for the nine dead men, Air Force officials announced yet another call-up that would press more reservists from around the country into active duty this week.

Hundreds of uniformed reservists and 315 relatives of the victims attended the memorial service for the nine Air Force reservists from Texas who were among 13 to die in the crash of a C-5A Galaxy cargo plane Aug. 28 in West Germany.

The plane was carrying supplies to U.S. troops massing in Saudi Arabia since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Aug. 2.

The nine Texas reservists to die were members of the 433rd Military Airlift Wing, headquartered at Kelly Air Force Base in San Antonio.

Staff Sgt. Lorenzo Galvan Jr., of San Antonio, one of the four injured survivors, placed a single rose above each folded flag displayed above the names of his nine fellow crew members in the hangar at Kelly.

''It is with great sadness that we remember those who made the ultimate sacrifice,'' said Col. Michael Quarnaccio, commander of the 433rd, ''and we feel great pride in knowing they willingly committed themselves to the ideas that make our country great.''

More than 200 members of the 433rd, rather than wait for the call- up, had volunteered their efforts since Aug. 5, ferrying supplies and troops to the Middle East for Operation Desert Shield.

Ironically, a unit of the 433rd was pressed into active duty within 24 hours of the plane crash. Galvan, once he has recovered, will be on active duty.

''Because of their courage ... we shall be victorious,'' the Rev. Willie McDaniel, an Air Force chaplain, told the crowd.

Many of the uniformed men and women wept. As the families of the dead walked past the crowds at the ceremony's end, some rose from their seats and soon all stood in silent tribute.

The funerals and burials were Thursday and Friday for Tech. Sgt. Daniel Perez, Tech. Sgt. Lonty Knutson, Staff Sgt. Daniel Garza, Maj. Richard Chase, Master Sgt. Rosendo Herrera, Maj. Richard Price, Staff Sgt. Edward Sheffield, Senior Master Sgt. Carpio Villarreal and Maj. John Gordon. All lived in San Antonio except Gordon, who lived near Houston in Spring, Texas.

Maj. Gen. Roger Scheer, chief of the Air Force Reserve, said following the ceremony that about 7,000 of the 10,000 reservists now working in support of Operation Desert Shield are volunteers.

Of those called into active duty, Scheer said not one of the 3,000 had asked for an exemption or a delay.

''The morale of the reservists could not be higher,'' Scheer said. ''We've said for years and years they were ready to go. But there's nothing like proving it.''

Scheer said four C-141 reserve squadrons would be pressed into active duty by Monday from Charleston Air Force Base near Charleston, N.C.; Maguire Air Force Base near Trenton, N.J.; McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma, Wash., and Travis Air Force Base near Sacramento, Calif.

Air Force investigators have yet to determine a cause of the C-5A crash and likely will not complete their probe for another month or two.

''There's no obvious reasons that have come to the surface to date,'' Scheer said.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - President Bush is in Finland for an emergency summit with Soviet President Gorbachev. It's Bush's third superpower summit in 10 months. The president said upon arrival in Helsinki that he plans to urge Gorbachev to turn up the pressure on Iraq's Saddam Hussein . Bush said the hastily arranged summit meeting comes at ''a critical time'' and the outcome could shape the world for years to come.

Kuwait's exiled leaders are pledging to support the massive deployment of U-S troops in the Persian Gulf region. Secretary of State Baker, who held talks earlier with the toppled emir of Kuwait, says the Kuwaitis have promised five BILLION dollars to help pay for the American military deployment... and to compensate other nations in the area for losses incurred because of the international embargo against Iraq, which invaded Kuwait a month ago.

Hurricane Isidore is losing strength as it churns in the open Atlantic about 980 miles northwest of the Cape Verde Islands. The hurricane's winds decreased to 90 miles an hour today, down from 100 yesterday. And forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami say additional weakening is likely. They says it's too soon to tell whether Hurricane Isidore will turn north out of harm's way, or take a westerly course toward the Caribbean Islands.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Another setback for the beleaguered Cambodian peace talks. Cambodian resistance leader Prince Norodom Sihanouk says he won't attend the talks in Indonesia because of illness. The announcement is the latest development in a series that have cast doubt and confusion over the talks called to discuss a U-N plan aimed at ending Cambodia's 11-year civil war. It evoked skepticism from his long-time rival, Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen, who now says he will take part in the sessions planned for tomorrow.

Nicaragua says it won't be a base of support for rebel movements in Central America. Nicaraguan Vice President Virgilio Godoy made the statement while in El Salvador yesterday to attend a regional summit of vice presidents. Godoy apparently was referring to the recent discovery of arms coming from Nicaragua and destined for leftist rebels in El Salvador. The Salvadoran government and its armed forces have accused the Sandinistas, who governed Nicaragua until recently, of sending arms to the rebels.

PHILADELPHIA (SEPT. 10) UPI - Four Pennsylvania banks have rejected the city's request for partial backing of a $400 million note sale, which could be critical to Philadelphia's financial future as officials grapple with the prospects of a $200 million deficit this fiscal year, published reports said Saturday.

Meridian Bankcorp Inc., CoreStates Financial Corp., Mellon Bank (East) and PNC Financial Corp. refused to grant the city letters of credit to back up to $60 million of the note issue, the Philadelphia Inquirer and Daily News said.

Only one of those banks, Meridian, would publicly confirm that it had turned down the request, a condition of a larger letter of credit the city had been seeking from a Japanese bank.

''Under the current circumstances, we cannot reconcile the associated risk with our bank's ongoing responsibilities to stockholders and other important constituencies,'' Meridian said in a statement. The Daily News said several sources told it the other banks also refused to help the city.

The city is facing a $200 million deficit this fiscal year, and Mayor Wilson Goode has proposed a $150 million tax increase and city service cuts, along with the sale of city assets including Veterans Stadium, to stop the red ink.

Hyman Grossman, a managing director of the Standard & Poor's bond- rating firm, said the development was ''discouraging'' and could mean the city could only sell a portion of the notes.

Standard & Poor's this summer downgraded the city's bond rating, which caused some of Philadelphia's problems in lining up the note sale.

Standard & Poor's placed the city on a credit watch ''with negative implications'' on Aug. 13, and warned investors it might lower the city's BBB- bond rating, the lowest of any major U.S. city, to junk-bond levels.

Moody's investors service lowered Philadelphia's bond rating from BBB to Ba, or non-investment status, on June 29.

City Finance Director Betsy Reveal has warned that if the city is unable to sell the notes, it will run out of cash in four months. That, she said, would lead to ''a legal, political and public safety nightmare.''

The city is still seeking backing for the note sale from other foreign banks. Philadelphia officials went overseas after several Wall Street banks and insurance companies refused to back the notes.

Philadelphia has routinely sold such notes annually since 1972, but this year's issue ran into trouble in the face of a $200 million city deficit and the downgraded bond rating.

The city is expected to market the notes sometime this week.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein told President Bush and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev Saturday on the eve of their superpower summit that it would be ''futile'' to try to reverse the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait.

In a six-point speech read by his spokesman on Iraqi television, Saddam reminded the leaders that Iraq did not invade the superpowers, and said Baghdad had not harmed the legitimate interests or the people of the United States or the Soviet Union.

''Foreign intervention complicates things and does not resolve them,'' said the leader of Iraq, which is facing the largest assembly of military might since World War II and food shortages from a U.N.-imposed blockade.

Typical of the messages he has issued in past weeks, Saddam invoked history, Islam and Arab nationalism and justified his invasion of the oil-rich emirate, which he contends was historically part of Iraq.

Bush and Gorbachev arrived in Helsinki Saturday for a hastily called superpower summit - the first time the two superpowers have been on the same side in a regional conflict since World War II. Bush hopes to pursuade Gorbachev to turn up the pressure on Saddam in a bid to force the Iraqi leader to withdraw his troops from Kuwait.

National security adviser Brent Scowcroft, commenting just hours before Bush and Gorbachev were scheduled to meet, said Saddam appeared to be ''maneuvering'' and ''looking for ways out of his dilemma.''

Scowcroft said isolating Saddam and increasing pressure through a trade embargo is a strategy that can probably succeed without a military clash.

''We've put together a strategy that has a good chance of success without the use of military force,'' Scowcroft told reporters.

Moscow, once a staunch ally of Baghdad, has supported U.N. resolutions that condemned Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait and the punitive military and economic sanctions, but has stopped short of joining a U.S.-led multinational military force in the Persian Gulf.

Saddam told Bush and Gorbachev the decisions they make in Helsinki will ''establish the humanitarian weight of your countries,'' but far from begging for mercy, the Iraqi president went on to say the reestablishment of the exiled Kuwaiti government is an impossibility.

''The attempts of those who want to reverse the situation to those before August 2, 1990, are futile,'' he said.

The Iraq leader, who has throughout the crisis repeatedly appealed to the Arab masses to rise up against their pro-Western rulers and the U.S.-led military presence in Saudi Arabia, sought again to present a united Moslem front in an apparant warning against the use of force to defuse the crisis.

''Before each of you make any decision on Kuwait, you should remember that the Arab nation is one, even though it is now divided,'' Saddam said.

''Iraq is part of a nation of 200 million people extending from the Atlantic Ocean to the Arab Gulf. These people are all part of an Arab nation,'' he said through his spokesman. ''When confrontation takes place, the people of Iraq, whom God has chosen to be on the front line, will achieve victory.''

In an apparent acknowledgement of the potential consequences of a united U.S.-Soviet position against Iraq, Saddam said the outcome of the summit could determine whether the Soviet Union would recapture its superpower status, which he said has come under doubt.

He also said Bush's reputation and the U.S. role as superpower were at stake and warned the United States against falling ''into the abyss of war.''

Upon arriving in Finland, Bush declared: ''Here in Helsinki, President Gorbachev and I meet hopefully to strengthen our common approach to this unjustifiable act of aggression.''

Bush later said in a brief exchange with a U.S. Air Force colonel at the U.S. Embassy that Saddam would ''be stupid'' if he attacked the massive multinational force in Saudi Arabia, which numbers well over 100,000.

Egypt's President Hosni Mubarak said after a meeting with Secretary of State James Baker in Alexandria that he also wanted a united U.S.- Soviet response to Iraqi aggression, warning the superpowers they would otherwise face a ''hell of a problem'' in the area. Baker flew to Helsinki later Saturday.

HELSINKI, FINLAND (SEPT. 8) UPI - Mikhail Gorbachev said Saturday a personal meeting with George Bush was necessary at a ''crucial moment in history'' to discuss the Persian Gulf crisis.

The Soviet president arrived in Helsinki early Saturday evening for Sunday's superpower summit expected to be dominated by the conflict that began Aug. 2 with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

''Although we have been in touch through our personal representatives and in various other ways, it is necessary to meet in order to discuss the acute crisis in the Persian Gulf and a number of other issues,'' Gorbachev said in a brief arrival statement at Helsinki's Vantaa International Airport.

In a statement after his arrival earlier in the day, Bush said that he and Gorbachev had come to Helsinki ''hopefully to strengthen our common approach to this unjustifiable act of aggression'' by Iraq.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, in a statement read on Iraqi television an hour after Gorbachev's arrival in Finland, tried to drive a wedge in the emerging U.S.-Soviet alliance against his country.

Saddam appealed directly to Gorbachev to ''remember that doubts about the place of the Soviet Union as a superpower have entered the minds of every politician for some time, especially as the United States began to assume to be the sole power in the world.''

Gorbachev, however, indicated on arrival that he had come to Helsinki to work with Bush in finding a solution to the five-week crisis in the Gulf.

''President George Bush expressed the desire for us to meet at this crucial moment in history when it is very important to compare our political approaches and to cooperate in order to protect the positive trends evolving in the world today, to make sure that they are not thwarted by any development,'' Gorbachev said.

Soviet television commentator Dmitri Biroukov said the Helsinki summit marked a turning point in U.S.-Soviet relations.

''For the first time, the leaders of the superpowers are meeting during a regional crisis,'' Biroukov told the Cable News Network. ''The spirit of such a meeting is very important.''

Gorbachev, accompanied by his wife Raisa, echoed Bush in noting the ''symbolic'' importance of meeting in Helsinki, which he said ''has seen the birth of some very important trends that are evolving today and acquiring prospects.''

Bush said earlier that Helsinki, the capital of neutral, non- aligned Finland, ''has often been a meeting place for nations seeking to advance the cause of peace.''

Gorbachev went from the airport to the Finnish Presidential Palace, where he met with President Mauno Koivisto for talks and a state dinner.

In talks over lunch earlier in the day, Bush and Koivisto agreed that U.N. Security Council sanctions against Iraq must be ''completely and strictly implemented.''

The Soviet Union has supported five U.N. measures against Baghdad following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, including the most recent resolution allowing limited use of force to enforce a trade embargo against Baghdad.

But Moscow has refrained from joining an international naval blockade of Iraq to enfore the sanctions and has waged a diplomatic offensive to try to solve the Gulf crisis through political means.

''Taking into consideration our economic situation, any possibility of new military involvement for us is unpleasant and undesirable,'' the Soviet TV commentator Biroukov said.

Shevardnadze, who accompanied Gorbachev to Helsinki, said before his arrival that the gulf conflict would not be resolved easily.

''Neither the Soviet Union nor the United States have any ready- made formula to achieve a peaceful settlement to the Gulf crisis,'' Shevardnadze told Soviet reporters Friday as he flew from Tokyo to Moscow to end a weeklong Asia tour.

LAFAYETTE, NY (SEPT. 8) UPI - Authorities told residents Saturday to keep their eyes out for a roaming herd of buffalo that has frightened school children and stopped traffic on Interstate 81.

The herd, which numbers about 16, recently broke loose from fenced- in pastures on the Onondaga Indian Reservation, and stopped rush-hour traffic Friday on Interstate 81 just south of Syracuse.

''They're still loose,'' said an Onondaga County Sheriff's Department dispatcher who asked not to be identified. ''They're not bothering anyone. It's mostly just damaging lawns.''

''They're in the road a lot, but most people know they're out, so they are being pretty cautious,'' she said. ''There is not much we can do other than try to steer them in another direction. There are a lot of them.''

Sheriff John Dillon has cautioned residents and motorists in the town of LaFayette to stay away from any buffaloes they see roaming through their neighborhood because the huge animals can be unpredictable.

Residents have blamed the herd for frightening school children and doing damage to trees and lawns in the area.

Earlier this week, the animals caused more than $10,000 worth of damage at John and Dawn Krewson's tree farm and $700 worth of damage to trees on private property nearby, officials said.

Meawnhile, Dillon said members of the Onondaga Nation Council of Chiefs have assured him they are trying to head the wandering herd back to the reservation.

State Police trooper Pam Morris, who was on the scene when the herd stopped traffic on the highway, said the animals have a mind of their own and there is ''no fence in creation'' that can keep them in a pasture if they want to leave.

The animals have yet to be blamed for any accidents, authorities said.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Soviet President Gorbachev has joined President Bush in Finland... but the two leaders don't plan on meeting until the start of their summit tomorrow. A special Soviet flight carrying Gorbachev and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze arrived in Helsinki this morning under overcast skies. Finnish President Mauno Koivisto greeted them at the airport. .

Koivisto met with Bush for 90 minutes earlier today following his arrival in Helsinki. A Finnish official says the two leaders agreed that U-N sanctions against Iraq must be ''fully and strictly implemented.'' But he adds that they did NOT discuss a possible air embargo or military strike. Koivisto is said to have raised concerns about the harmful effects of the U-N sanctions.

Environmental groups say they'll go to the 9th U-S District Court of Appeals to fight a federal judge's refusal to halt the transfer of U- S chemical weapons from West Germany to Johnston Island in the Pacific for destruction. Colombian officials say it'll take months to gauge the effectiveness of President Cesar Gaviria's latest action in the war with the nation's drug cartels. The action is aimed at taking away the cartels' justification for the violent war on the government.

GAMES

The Olympic Council of Asia's executive bureau recommended unanimously to ban Iraq from the Asian Games and set a vote of the OCA's 38 members on Sept. 20, the eve of the opening ceremonies. A simple majority vote would exclude Iraq from the quadrennial Asian Games, China's first major international sporting event, and presumably avert an embarrassing boycott of the games at Bejing.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Environmentalists and scientists at an international conference today issued stinging criticism of Baltic Sea countries for polluting the sea to the brink of disaster. The conference in East Berlin accused governments of approving studies and bureaucracies rather than taking concrete steps to reduce pollution. Delegates expressed particular concern about pollution from agriculture, tourism, synthetics and radioactive waste.

(SEPT. 8) UPI - Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein declared today that any efforts to dislodge Iraqi forces from Kuwait would be in vain. Speaking through a spokesman on Iraqi television, Saddam told Presidents Bush and Gorbachev on the eve of their Helsinki mini- summit that he would NOT tolerate foreign intervention in the Persian Gulf. Saddam also goaded Moscow by expressing doubts of the Kremlin's stature in light of Washington assuming the role of... quote... ''the sole power in the world.''

LONDON (SEPT. 9) - An Iraqi Airways plane with 170 British women and children aboard is expected to arrive at London's Gatwick airport at 9.30 (2030 GMT) Sunday, the Foreign Office said.

The Boeing 747, scheduled to leave Baghdad early Sunday morning, is believed to have other foreign nationals aboard, but a Foreign Office spokesman was unable to give more details.

An Iraqi Airways spokesman said some Iraqi citizens living in Great Britain are expected to board the plane for its return to Baghdad.

The flight will be the first by an Iraqi Airways plane to London since the Iraqi government announced it was no longer flying to Amman because of congestion at the Jordanian airport.

AMMAN (SEPT. 9) - Jordan's Foreign Minister Marwan Kassem said Sunday

Amman would continue to receive Iraqi oil despite U.N. sanctions against Baghdad, as the deliveries represented long-standing debt payments.

Kassem, in an interview with Agence France-Presse, also urged the international community and the Arab world to find a common solution to the Gulf crisis that would avoid a disastrous conflict in the region.

He said Jordan "supported all U.N. Security Council resolutions on the Gulf conflict" but would continue to exclude its imports of Iraqi oil from the trade embargo ordered by the United Nations.

"We will continue to take in Iraqi oil until we find an alternative solution that provides us the same benefits, as we receive the oil at preferential rates under a financial arrangement covering several years," he said.

Baghdad is using oil exports to help pay back a 400 million dollar debt to Jordan, which depends on Iraq for 90 per cent of its oil needs.

Jordan has criticized the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait but has distanced itself from the decision by the Arab League and the West to send forces to the Gulf.

The influx of hundreds of thousands of refugees from Iraq and Kuwait has severely strained its economic resources, already threatened by the potential effects of the embargo on Iraq, its largest trade partner.

Kassem said it was "essential for the Arab world and the international community to each bring its contribution to a solution" that could not be imposed "from outside the region."

Speaking as U.S. and Soviet leaders met in Helsinki, the Jordanian minister said Amman was "closely studying the new Soviet ideas contained in Moscow's call for an international conference to end the Gulf crisis."

The Soviet Union Tuesday made a new call for an international Middle East peace conference that would cover the Gulf crisis as well as the Palestinian issue. But the United States and Israel have not backed the idea.

"It is difficult for a solution to work if it is imposed by one party without consideration of the need to coordinate with and support the other party, "Kassem said, adding that an "adequate formula has to be found."

He said Jordan wanted a peaceful solution to the crisis, otherwise "nobody would win, and certainly not the Arabs."

Jordan's King Hussein made a whirlwind tour of 10 North African and European countries in late August and early September to try to defuse the Gulf tension.

ISLAMABAD (SEPT. 9) - With the Gulf crisis adding one billion dollars to its balance of payments burden, Pakistan may follow Egypt's example and ask the United States to write off its loans, analysts said Sunday.

Pakistan's foreign debt now stands at 15 billion dollars with annual repayments of nearly three billion dollars to donor nations and international agencies.

The United States, a major aid donor, has committed 7.20 billion dollars in loans and grants to Pakistan in two packages of economic assistance and military sales.

The two five-year packages amounted to 3.2 billion dollars in 1982-87 and 4.02 billion dollars for the current 1988-93 period of which 2.69 billion dollars were grants and the rest in soft loans.

The United States has written off its seven-billion-dollar loan to Egypt as a relief for the current financial burden caused by the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait, its deployment of troops as part of the multinational force in Saudi Arabia and the United Nations-backed blockade of Iraq.

Pakistan has also sent 5,000 troops to Saudi Arabia.

Apart from the debt write-off proposal, Pakistani authorities were also trying to maximise exports to reduce the balance of payments deficit, the analysts said.

AMMAN (SEPT. 9) - After braving danger to flee Iraqi troops and being crammed into camps in Jordan often short of food and water, the mostly Asian refugees from Kuwait and Iraq have one remaining challenge: Amman airport.

The departures hall at Queen Alia international airport and its parking lot have been been transformed into a bustling campground as governments and aid groups step up efforts to airlift the thousands of refugees home.

The check-in desks are tense areas of confrontation as police brutally push back the crowds, sending women and children tumbling over the enormous bags, badly packaged boxes and mattresses that make up their worldly possessions.

The departures zone was stretched to full capacity over the weekend as 12 special Air India flights and five set up by the Geneva-based International Organization of Migration (IOM) were added to the airport's daily traffic.

The final ordeal for the refugees, mostly Indians, Pakistanis, Bangladeshis and Sri Lankans, begins some 12 hours before their flight, as embassies and aid groups organise their transport from transit camps in and around Amman.

There was chaos Saturday night at the International Fair centre as 20,000 Asians housed there flocked under loudspeakers to hear whether they would be on 21 buses driving 530 Indians and 447 Bangladeshis to the airport.

As the monotonous voice listed the names, the lucky ones rushed around grabbing mountains of baggage, even empty bottles, anxious not to miss the bus, while those forced to remain in the makeshift camp hung their heads.

Jordanian soldiers twirled their belts to dissuade any violent outbreak of anger and forced the chosen passengers to line up outside the buses, as they had hours earlier to receive their ration of bread and water.

Once they arrived at the airport, the Bangladeshis, due to fly to Dhaka on a Soviet Antonov plane chartered by the IOM, were forced to stay in the buses for hours waiting for space in the packed parking lot and departure hall.

The Air India passengers were asked to wait outside. Women in saris carried their children on interminable walks around the parking lot while others covered themselves with blankets to sleep.

"Here, I already feel much better," said George Rajan, a 50-year-old Indian confident that eventually he would be called for his flight home.

India is staging a massive airlift to bring home its nationals stranded in Jordan, bringing 11 civilian and military aircraft into service to shuttle around the clock between Amman and Bombay, either directly or through Dubai.

Air India officials in Dubai, where Indians were also to arrive by merchant ship from Kuwait, said the flights were to pick up more than 3,500 Indians a day starting at the weekend in a bid to repatriate 20,000 Indians by Thursday.

One of the planes operating from Amman is an Ilyushin-62 chartered from the Soviet airline Aeroflot. India is also using European Airbuses grounded since a crash in February as well as Soviet-made Ilyushin-76 Indian military aircraft.

The IOM, which has organized 23 flights to Bangladesh and Sri Lanka since last Monday, has a budget of 30 million dollars for the operation backed by aid from the United Nations and European Economic Community.

The group plans as many as 99 more flights over the next three weeks.

Pakistan and the Philippines have also organised special evacuation flights, often using aircraft diverted from scheduled connections elsewhere.

The airlift has slowly begun to reduce the refugee population in Jordan, despite the continuing influx of an average of 15,000 people a day via the Ruweishid crossing on the Iraqi-Jordanian border.

But according to unconfirmed Amman press reports, another 250,000 people are waiting on the Iraqi side of the border for Baghdad's authorization to cross into Jordan.

Crown Prince Hassan ibn Talal has warned that Jordan may so far have only experienced the "tip of the iceberg".

Officials said some 80,000 refugees were still in Jordan, 50,000 of them on the border, compared to 105,000 in the middle of last week. A total of 605,000 people are known to have fled to Jordan since the Iraqi invasion on Aug. 2.

More than 14,000 refugees have been airlifted since Thursday from Queen Alia airport, as well as from a once defunct airstrip on the outskirts of Amman and the airport in the Red Sea port of Aqaba, aviation sources said.

The repatriation of Arab refugees has been organised mainly by sea from Aqaba. More than 200,000 Egyptians who worked in Iraq or Kuwait have returned home since Iraq invaded Kuwait. Some 15,000 Yemenis have also been repatriated.

TOKYO (SEPT. 9) - Japan, aware that its cheque book diplomacy in the Gulf crisis has been badly received abroad, now appears willing to go beyond giving only financial aid to the multinational force there.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, who recently met here with U.S. Treasury Secretary Nicholas Brady, made clear his intention to send medical and technical personnel to the Gulf.

"In the days when Japan was still in the process of rebuilding its war-battered economy, financial contribution alone may have been enough," he told a seminar of his ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) Saturday.

"But now Japan is one of the seven most indutrialised democracies and must fulfill its international responsibility," he added.

Government sources said Mr. Kaifu hopes a law allowing Japanese military and civil personnel to take part in United Nations peacekeeping missions will be drafted by the time he visits New York at the end of the month for a U.N. conference on childhood.

Kaifu is also well aware that Washington feels that Japan has not contributed enough towards finding a peaceful solution to the crisis in the Gulf, from which Tokyo gets 71 per cent of its oil.

U.S. Ambassador to Japan Michael Armacost told an LDP meeting Sunday that "we hope you will find it in your interest to make a contribution that is consistent with the power you represent."

Armacost last month asked Japan to transport U.S. troops and military equipment and to deploy minesweepers in the Gulf, a request Kaifu ignored when he announced Aug. 29 that Japanese civil ships and planes chartered by the government would carry essential supplies to the Gulf.

Tokyo also said it would provide one billion dollars towards the cost of the multinational force deployed in Saudi Arabia, together with 22 million dollars to help refugees who fled Kuwait following Iraq's August 2 invasion and are now stranded in Jordanian camps.

Added to this are 784 Toyota and Mitsubishi four-wheel drive vehicles which have been sent to Saudi Arabia.

But during his talks late Friday with Kaifu, Brady asked Japan for two billion dollars.

He also insisted that Japan provide emergency aide to Gulf countries most affected by the blockade on Iraq -- namely Turkey, Egypt, Jordan -- and Eastern European countries whose economies have been shaken even more by the Gulf crisis.

"His expectations towards Japan were quite high," said Yukio Okamoto, a senior foreign ministry official, of Brady's requests.

Kaifu is also under pressure from his party, as some LDP leaders favour tougher action in the Gulf and revising Japan's constitution, which is generally interpreted as forbidding the country to send troops abroad.

"The constitution was made by the Americans so we are free to correct it," former deputy prime minister Shin Kanemaru said recently in reference to Article 9 of the constitution, which states that "Japan renounces war and the threat or use of force as a means of settling international disputes."

Without going so far, LDP secretary general, Ichiro Ozawa, said Saturday that the post-World War II U.S.-drafted constitution did not prevent Japan from sending troops if they were part of a U.N. peace effort.

The Gulf crisis and various interpretations of the constitution that have been put forward as a result should mean that sooner or later the Diet parliament will have to deal with the question of how to use Japan's self-defence forces during an international crisis.

The Yomiuri newspaper commented recently: "Article 9 should not be used by Japan as an excuse to avoid doing what it should do as part of the international community."

NICOSIA (SEPT. 9) - Strategic problems in the Gulf are likely to remain for years to come and will require a home-grown military coalition, regional analysts and U.S. officials have said.

The idea, recently floated by U.S. Secretary of State James Baker during Congressional testimony, is not new but must take the current situation into account, they said.

"It can't take the form of a purely American presence," said a senior Congressional Middle East expert in a telephone interview from Washington.

"The pact would have to come under Arab leadership."

He was referring to a security structure Baker proposed for the Gulf that would be fashioned after NATO but from which the secretary backed down the following day when critics baulked at the prospect of a long-term military commitment in the region.

"The problem is that nobody can dictate military plans on reality," the congressional source, who declined to be identified, said.

The concern comes from a massive military build-up in the Gulf, spearheaded by Washington and triggered by Iraq's Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

Drawing on the North Atlantic Treaty Organization example, Baker said the Western alliance had succeeded in preventing nuclear war and that a Gulf arrangement was needed to keep Iraq from using nuclear weapons.

"It was extremely important for the secretary to raise the question of what the region would look like in the post-crisis era: the end game," explained Thomas L. McNaugher, a senior Middle East fellow at the Washington-based Brookings Institution.

The ongoing debate, he said, was that even if the Gulf crisis were resolved diplomatically, the feeling among U.S. policymakers is that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein would remain a serious threat to his neighbors and beyond.

"The region would still be inherently unstable," he said. "The need for the security arrangement is to rectify the imbalance."

If such a pact materializes it come would almost a decade after the creation of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC), which was designed to protect countries in the region from an Iranian threat after the Iran-Iraq war erupted.

"It's purely for politicians," said a military anlalyst with intimate knowledge of the region about the GCC. "It has no effective military capabilities."

The GCC established in May 1981 to group Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), Bahrain, Oman and Qatar has relied on limited resources and the inexperienced military forces of its members.

"Kuwait and the UAE are particularly vulnerable to pressures that force them to distance themselves from the United States," wrote U.S. military expert Anthony H. Cordesman in 1984.

Since the current crisis began, the UAE, Saudi Arabia, Oman and Bahrain have either received foreign troops or offered military facilities to the United States, Britain and France.

Analysts acknowledge that coordinating the multinational forces deployed to protect the Gulf states can be a formidable task.

"If the U.S. president decides military action is necessary, we must recognize that political support is needed from all," said McNaugher. "It can't be a unilateral action."

Analysts have dismissed suggestions that a U.S.-prompted Arab military alliance could resemble the Baghdad Pact of 1955, later renamed Central Treaty Organization (CENTO), which Britain devised to maintain an Arab-Western relationship after such ties were adversely affected by the creation of Israel in 1948.

CENTO was established to check communism and the explosion of nationalism under former Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser, argued the congressional source.

Before its demise in 1979, CENTO counted Iraq, Turkey, Pakistan and Iran as its members.

"If there's any force that we should continue worrying about, it's Islamic fundamentalism," said McNaugher, adding that it was a growing source of unification in the Arab world.

JAKARTA (SEPT. 9) - Cambodia's warring factions on Sunday opened talks here aimed at ending the 12-year-old war in the southeast Asian country amid signs that an agreement may be in the offing.

Before talks began, the Phnom Penh government and its arch enemy, the Khmer Rouge, military muscle of the opposition guerrilla coalition, said they were confident a settlement could be reached.

The talks, co-chaired by Indonesia and France, are to focus on proposals by the world's major powers to end the war between Phnom Penh's Vietnam-installed government and the guerrilla alliance aided by China and the United States.

The United States on Sunday also held its first meeting with the Phnom Penh government since it announced a few days ago a decision to open direct contacts with the regime set up in January 1979 after Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia.

Shortly after the talks opened, John Monjo, the U.S. ambassador here, had a 45-minute meeting with Hun Sen, Phnom Penh's prime minister and the leader of his government's delegation in the Indonesian capital.

The meeting was at the embassy's request, Phnom Penh officials said.

Hun Sen told reporters that the discussion showed that the United States and his government had "the same intentions and the same understanding" regarding a Cambodian settlement.

The United States has no relations with Vietnam or Phnom Penh and gives non-lethal aid to non-communist guerrillas allied to the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge to fight the Cambodian government.

The U.S. decision last week to engage in a dialogue with Phnom Penh, followed its announcement in July to withdraw diplomatic support from the guerrilla coalition because of the presence of the Khmer Rouge.

The Khmer Rouge are blamed for the deaths of hundreds of thousands during their rule of Cambodia between 1975 and 1979.

The U.S. move is viewed as an attempt to pressure the guerrillas to move toward a settlement.

In a parallel announcement, the Soviet Union, Vietnam's and Phnom Penh's chief ally, said it was willing to open a dialogue with former Cambodian monarch Prince Norodom Sihanouk, the coalition's nominal head and the leader of one of two non-communist leaders allied to the Khmer Rouge.

According to diplomats monitoring the talks, the Khmer Rouge are also expected to show flexibility as a result of pressure from China.

Before the opening of the talks here, Hun Sen said he was "95 percent confident that the meeting will reach agreement", and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan said that peace was "closer than ever with the documents of the Perm Five."

He was referring to proposals put together by the five United Nations Security council permanent members -- Britain, China, France, the Soviet Union and the United States -- giving the U.N. a major role in running Cambodia until elections are held.

According to the U.N. blueprint, a Supreme National Council (SNC) is to be formed with representatives of all Cambodian factions. It will then delegate wide executive powers to the United Nations to administer Cambodia until polls are held.

The Khmer Rouge and their allies have expressed formal support for the U.N. peace plan. According to sources familiar with pre-conference discussions, there were signs Phnom Penh now supported the plan, despite earlier reservations.

Indonesian Foreign Minister Ali Alatas told reporters he was "encouraged by the fact that all four factions have indicated they can accept the Perm Five documents as the basis for settling the Cambodian conflict as well as the framework which all of us will now work together to develop comprehensively."

A spokesman for the French delegation also said the factions had accepted the documents "in their entirety as the basis for working towards a comprehensive settlement.

"We think this in itself is a major breakthrough," the French spokesman said.

Both France and Indonesia presided over a failed international conference on Cambodia in Paris last year.

In opening statements at the talks, Alatas and the leader of the French delegation, junior Minister for Foreign Affairs Edwige Avice, both told the Cambodian factions that it was imperative that they accept the U.N. plan because conditions had never been more conducive to a settlement.

Prince Sihanouk, who is still Cambodia's internationally best-respected leader, has decided to stay away from the meeting, citing health reasons.

LONDON (SEPT. 9) - Western governments should seek a solution to the Palestinian question once Iraqi troops have withdrawn from Kuwait, British Foreign Office Minister William Waldegrave said here Sunday.

"We cannot just go back to pretending that nothing needs to be done about the Palestinian problem," Waldegrave told the private television channel ITV in an interview.

The minister said that Washington should pressure Israel to settle the issue. "It seems to me that this is one of the things that contributes to the underlying bitterness in the region," he said.

"Look, if we do not solve this problem -- and that means potentially explaining to our Israeli friends rather more clearly than we have in the past -- then we are going to have American boys out in the desert again and again," Waldegrave predicted.

"I think the American government has been through a sea change on this issue," he added.

Before Iraq declared Kuwait a province, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein linked the withdrawal of the soldiers that invaded the emirate on Aug. 2 to the implementation of all United Nations Security Council resolutions on the Middle East.

This would imply that Israel should withdraw from the occupied Arab territories as well as seeing an Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait. Both moves have been demanded by the security council.

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES (SEPT. 9) - A cargo ship left port here Sunday for India carrying 538 Indian passengers who had fled Kuwait and were returning home, official sources said.

The passengers had flown here from the Jordanian capital Amman aboard chartered Air India flights and later boarded the Indian-flagged Tupi Sultan.

A first group of 722 Indians, evacuated directly to Dubai from Kuwait aboard the cargo vessel Safeer, were flown home on special Air India flights on Friday and Saturday.

Shipping sources here said two other Indian vessels, including the Akbar, were to sail for Kuwait in the next few days to continue the repatriation of some 100,000 Indians trapped in the emirate since its Aug. 2 invasion by Iraq.

HELSINKI (SEPT. 9) - U.S. President George Bush said Sunday that he had accepted an invitation from Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to visit the Soviet Union shortly.

Speaking to reporters after a joint news conference in the Finnish capital after a five-hour summit with Gorbachev focusing on the Gulf crisis, Bush said the date had not been fixed, but the visit could take place at t end of this year or early next year.

Both powers plan to sign a treaty on U.S. and Soviet strategic arms reductions by the end of this year. Bush's visit had been agreed in principle at the Washington summit in June.

Concerning a possible visit to Berlin for Oct. 3 German unity ceremonies, Gorbachev said he was "in the process of making a decision".

According to the White House, no decision has been taken on whether Bush would travel to Berlin.

HELSINKI (SEPT. 9) - As Iraq sought supplies from its longtime enemy Iran, U.S. President George Bush and his Soviet counterpart Mikhail Gorbachev agreed food could enter Iraq provided this was strictly monitored by international agencies.

At a summit in the Finnish capital, the two superpower leaders said in a joint statement they preferred resolving the Gulf crisis peacefully, but were united against Iraq's aggression.

''If the current steps fail to end it, we are prepared to consider additional ones consistent with the U.N. charter. We must demonstrate beyond any doubt that aggression cannot and will not pay,'' they said. Both men declined to say what steps they meant.

Although the size of Iraq's food stocks is a secret, Baghdad has asserted U.N. trade sanctions will lead to the starvation of its children, and has demanded that foreign nations feed their own expatriates in Iraq and Kuwait.

Pakistan agreed to this Sunday, saying it would send food and medicine for an estimated 50,000 Pakistani nationals in Kuwait.

Iraq's foreign minister, Tariq Aziz, had two and a half hours of talks with Teheran on peace arrangements to end their 1980-1988 war. He was expected to ask for food deliveries across the border. The Teheran press has suggested Iran will ''study'' this.

The superpowers said in their joint statement that the U.N. Security Council sanctions permitted food imports to Iraq and Kuwait ''in humanitarian circumstances''.

''The sanctions committee will make recommendations to the Security Council on what would constitute humanitarian circumstances,'' their statement said. ''Imports must be strictly monitored be the appropriate international agencies.''

Special priority would be given to children in Iraq and Kuwait.

Bush told reporters this was an exception and was not meant to develop into a ''hole in the embargo''.

The two presidents had seven hours of talks, mainly on the Gulf crisis. Bush said ''there may be a difference'' between himself and Gorbachev regarding a possible military option if sanctions fail.

Bush rejected linking the Gulf crisis to a settlement of the Arab-Israeli conflict. But Gorbachev said: ''There is a connection here.'' Their joint statement spoke of resolving remaining Middle East conflicts ''at the proper time'' and proposed regional security structures be set up once the Gulf crisis was over.

Meanwhile in Brussels, diplomatic sources said the European Community will provide about two billion dollars of aid for Jordan, Egypt and Turkey for their backing of U.N. sanctions against Iraq.

The French government announced it was boosting its military presence in the Gulf by sending six combat and reconnaissance helicopters and about 100 troops to Saudi Arabia.

AMMAN (SEPT. 9) - For 446 haggard refugees fleeing Iraq and Kuwait, the ordeal was almost over. Sitting cross-legged or curled up on their foam mattresses, they clustered beneath the mammoth fuselage of the Antonov 124 that was about to fly them home to Bangladesh Sunday.

They had been waiting at a transit camp at the international fairgrounds in the Jordanian capital and were finally summoned Saturday night to the airport.

"I've felt better ever since my name was called," said 30-year-old Mohammad Khairiul, a housepainter who arrived in Jordan on Aug. 25 after six years in Kuwait.

Delighted to be going home, he was nonetheless anxious about his future. "All my family is depending on me. I have four brothers and four sisters. Whatever I can earn in Bangladesh will not be enough. Already, my younger brother has had to stop his studies because of the Kuwait crisis."

In six years he has been back just once to Bangladesh. His family doesn't know where he is and there will be no one to greet him in Dhaka.

The huge Soviet Antonov was chartered by the Geneva-based International Migration Organization and has already made two round-trips from Amman to Dhaka.

When it landed here it was carrying 100 tonnes of rice for refugees still stuck in Jordan, by terms of an agreement with the World Food Program, and will carry a similar cargo on its next return flight to the Jordanian capital.

Captain Alexander Katchenko made his first flight to Dhaka on Sept. 5. "It was the first time that I had carried passengers in such a plane," he said. "But everything went fine. They all slept or walked around to stretch their legs."

With its rear door open, the Antonov appears to be an enormous cavern: forty meters (yards) long, 15 meters wide and as tall as a six-floor building.

The last two people to climb up into the gaping abyss are the only two women to be taking the flight.

Noorjahan Begum and Shahida Akther worked as cleaning women in Kuwait and did not want to leave their husbands and set off for an uncertain future.

"We are worried," said Noorjahan. "I've not slept for the last two days."

"I'm happy now," added Shahida. "Sure, I love my country but I'm wondering what I am going to do now."

Inside the plane, Serge, a husky crewman from Kiev, directs the passengers toward the front, allowing each just a tiny square of space for the eight-hour flight.

Baggage is piled along the sides, although one man comes aboard with just a bucket and a blanket that he refuses to part with. His neighbor clutches a thermos, while others guard plastic sacks.

And some are already asleep, in spite of the deafening roar of the engines that signals the beginning of the end of their nightmare.

LONDON (SEPT. 10) - The leadership of Britain's tiny communist party on Sunday said it had decided to transform itself into a looser federal organization and drop the name communist.

Party general secretary Nina Temple, speaking after an executive committee meeting, said the decision "reflects the changes that have been taking place in communist parties in Europe and the decline of our own support in Britain."

The party congress to convene in December will put forward a new name for the organization which the executive committee would like to see transformed into a forum of various leftist movements.

Founded in 1920, Britain's communist party has steadily been losing support since the 1960s. It has only 7,000 members and is not represented in parliament.

LIMA (SEPT. 10) - The United States is to provide 250,000 tons of food aid to Peru in fiscal 1991, which begins next month, U.S. Embassy officials said Sunday.

Some 100,000 tons of the aid is to be directly distributed to impoverished communities and the other 150,000 tons is to be dispersed through stores.

U.S. food assistance to Peru has progressively increased in the past few years from 50,000 tons in 1988. The latest assistance is 140 percent more than in fiscal 1990.

LIMA (SEPT. 10) - Peruvian authorities have slapped a 100,000-dollar fine on a U.S. company for excavating in prohibited areas and contaminating water, it was reported Sunday.

Jose Carlos Mariategui, who heads the local government in the departments of Puno, Moquegua and Tacna in southern Peru, said Southern Peru Copper Corporation broke agreements that it would not pursue new deposits.

He said authorities fined the company 100,000 dollars for excavating in the Vizcachas lake in Moquegua and contaminating the water used by local communities.

Authorities have also alleged that the company was contaminating the air with chemicals and production fumes.

BOGOTA (SEPT. 10) - A west German correspondent living in Colombia and five Colombian journalists who planned to interview guerrilla leaders of the Eln movement friendly to Cuba were Sunday reported missing.

The group including Hero Buss, a freelancer for several German papers and radio stations, had left Bogota August 30, announcing their return for September 2. There has been no sign of the journalists since their departure.

It was speculated that the journalists are being held by Eln guerrillas, who have been blamed for attacks on pipelines and other oil installations.

(SEPT. 9) UPI - Western journalists in Iraq say the U-N sanctions are affecting the Middle East state. Food supplies are dwindling, although it is said that planeloads of aid are arriving despite the embargo. Several nations have expressed the desire to send assistance to the region to care for citizens trapped because of the standoff, but the U-S delegation to the United Nations says NO food emergency exists in Iraq.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev referred to Sunday's scheduled meeting with President Bush as... in his words... ''a crucial moment in history.'' The session will be dominated by the Persian Gulf crisis. Bush has stated he hopes the mini-summit fortifies the bilateral superpower stance against Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The meeting takes place in Helsinki, Finland, where notable peace movements have arisen in the past.

Californian officials say a 47-year-old abalone diver suffered moderate lacerations Saturday when what is thought to have been a great white shark mauled him. A spokesman for the state Department of Parks and Recreation says the UNidentified man fended off the shark's advances with his spear gun and was able to make his way back to shore. The attack occurred some 20 feet offshore at Sonoma Coast State Beach.

Guatemala's supreme court is expected to hand down a preliminary ruling Sunday on a former military leader's quest to become president. Current law holds that Efrain Rios Montt canNOT run for president in November because of his role in a 1982 coup. That coup put Montt in power until he was forcibly ousted a year and a half later. Montt has vowed NOT to resort to violence if his efforts fail.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (SEPT. 9) UPI - Miss Illinois Marjorie Judith Vincent, a law student who wants to help with the economic development of Haiti, was named Miss America 1991 Saturday night, becoming the fourth black woman to hold the coveted title of America's unofficial sweetheart.

Vincent, 25, of Oak Park, Ill., appeared stunned as her name was called at the conclusion of the two-hour nationally televised pageant finals. Tears swelled in her eyes as she was fitted with the rhinestone- studded tiara by her predecessor, Miss America 1990 Debbye Turner of Columbia, Mo.

She then made the traditional stroll down the runway, waving and smiling to a sold-out crowd in Convention Center on the Boardwalk and a television audience estimated at more than 60 million.

Serenading the new Miss America with the theme song ''There She Is'' was Bert Parks, the former long-time master of ceremonies, returning to the pageant after a 10-year hiatus. The pageant was co-hosted by Gary Collins and Miss America 1971 Phillis George.

Vincent, a 5-foot-6, 110-pound, brown-eyed brunette, returned to the stage and was mobbed by pageant contestants from the other 49 states before being whisked away to her first news conference as the 64th Miss America.

''I was just so happy I made the top 10,'' Vincent told reporters. ''From then on, it just didn't matter. I was just thrilled.''

''When I won,'' she said, gasping, ''I still can't believe it.''

Vincent said the pageant's selection of a fourth black woman as Miss America showed ''race is not an issue any more in Miss America.''

''I'm proud to follow in the footsteps of Debbye Turner, but it's a tough act to follow,'' she said.

She said she would make efforts to ease the plight of battered women ''one of my biggest goals'' during her one-year reign.

''Battered women is a subject that has not been focused on or had much attention until recently,'' she said. ''I would like to increase the awareness of that issue and try to increase the funding and training and legal protection for women.''

The new Miss America, a third-year-student at Duke University Law School, receives $42,500 in scholarships and the chance to earn more than $100,000 in fees for appearances across the country next year.

Vincent, whose parents are from Haiti, speaks fluent French and Creole and is studying Japanese. After graduation from law school, she wants to practice international law and assist in the economic development of Haiti.

The accomplished pianist performed a Chopin piano solo in the talent competition.

Vincent is the fourth black woman to become Miss America in the history of the pageant, and the second in two years, following Turner.

The first black Miss America, Vanessa Williams, was dethroned in 1984 in a scandal involving published nude photographs. First runner-up Suzette Charles, also black, replaced Williams.

The first runner up was Miss South Carolina Mary Waddell Gainey, the second runner up Miss Tennessee Dana Brown, the third runner up Miss Texas Suzanne Lawrence and the fourth runner up Miss Louisiana Linnea Marie Fayard.

In a last-minute, unannounced switch, Parks - not Collins - sang ''There She Is,'' the song Parks had made famous during his tenure hosting the pageant.

The annual end-of-summer pageant had been threatened by protests from New York black activist Al Sharpton, who at first announced plans to disrupt the finals to gain a national platform for his demands that the gambling mecca of Atlantic City offer better recreational facilities for youths.

Sharpton, charged with inciting a riot on Labor Day for a traffic-stopping protest on the Atlantic City Expressway, also said he wanted to crown himself ''Mr. America.''

After meeting with pageant organizers, however, Sharpton agreed to hold a Saturday afternoon protest outdoors and not disturb the evening gala.

The first runner-up wins a $20,000 scholarship, the second runner- up a $14,000 scholarship, the third runner-up an $11,000 scholarship, and the fourth runner-up an $8,000 scholarship. The five other semi- finalists each win a $6,000 scholarship.

In an effort to downplay its image as a beauty contest, organizers of the ''scholarship pageant'' this year would not allow contestants to pose for photographers in their swimsuits, though the swimsuit competition remained a part of the pageant. The swimsuit pictures on the Atlantic City beach or at poolside had been a tradition, in part because the pageant began as a publicity stunt to extend the seaside resort's summer season into September.

The slate of 50 contestants - the Miss District of Columbia pageant was not held this year for financial reasons - was narrowed to 10 by preliminary judges who rated them on how they handled themselves during private interviews and in three nights of preliminary swimsuit, talent and evening gown competition.

The preliminary panel stepped aside Saturday night to allow a celebrity panel to pick America's sweetheart.

The celebrity judges were Delta Burke of TV's ''Designing Women;'' actress Shirley Jones; talk show host Larry King; actor John Forsythe; author Sidney Sheldon; actress Cynthia Sykes, who was Miss Kansas 1972; and Tony-award winner Nell Carter of ''Ain't Misbehavin'.''

While this year's contest marked the 70th anniversary of the pageant, the winner was only the 64th Miss America because the competition was not held in some years during its early history.

(SEPT. 9) UPI - The Blue Jays took their second straight game from the Chicago White Sox Saturday with a 3-0 victory, but they succumbed easily to the Sox team that they're chasing in the American League East - the Boston Red Sox.

The Blue Jays have learned to master Chicago but dropped 3 of 4 games - getting shut out in three of them - the last time they challenged Boston for the division lead in late August.

Toronto has beaten the White Sox in six of the last eight games between the teams.

The two Toronto victories dimmed the White Sox' hopes of overtaking the Oakland Athletics in the West, but didn't do the Blue Jays much good in their hunt for the pennant. The Red Sox thumped Seattle 10-2, maintaining their 5 1-2-game lead over the Blue Jays.

''Not much you can do if the first place team keeps on winning,'' shrugged Kelly Gruber, who provided Toronto with all its offense Saturday. ''We can't control that, we just have to go out and win.''

Gruber scored all three runs, two on homers off Alex Fernandez, 2- 3, and the other when he scored from third on a Fred McGriff single in the fourth.

''We haven't been able to gain a lot of ground but we just have to keep going out there each day and keep trying,'' he said.

Dave Stieb, who pitched a no-hitter last Sunday against Cleveland, became the first Blue Jay to win 18 games in a season.

Stieb, 18-5, scattered six hits, allowed two walks and struck out three in eight innings. Tom Henke pitched the ninth for his 28th save.

Stieb held the Blue Jays' record with 17 victories in a season, a feat he recorded four times.

''It means nothing to me, it's just another win,'' said Stieb, who ran his career record against the White Sox to 20-4. ''It's great and it's fine but it's just another win.''

Gruber staked the Blue Jays to a 1-0 first-inning lead when he drove a 2-2 pitch from Alex Fernandez, 2-3, over the left-field fence.

He belted another Fernandez pitch over the left-field fence in the eighth for his 26th homer and a 3-0 lead.

-- AROUND THE AL --

Elsewhere in the American League, Boston stomped Seattle 10-2, Oakland kicked New York 5-2, Minnesota scalped Cleveland 6-1, Milwaukee downed Detroit 5-2, Baltimore tripped California 5-4 and Texas topped Kansas City 2-1.

Red Sox 10, Mariners 2

At Boston, Luis Rivera's two-run double capped a four-run sixth inning and Carlos Quintana drove home two in a five-run eighth, lifting the first-place Red Sox. Tom Bolton, 9-2, pitched his third complete game. He gave up seven hits, walked two and struck out three. Scott Medvin, 0-1, took the loss.

Athletics 5, Yankees 2

At New York, former Yankee Rickey Henderson slammed two homers, rallying Oakland, who are attempting to sweep the season series with New York. With a win Sunday, the A's would be the first team in history to accomplish the feat against the Yankees. Scott Sanderson, 15-9, allowed three hits and Dennis Eckersley pitched 1 2-3 innings for his 42nd save. Mike Witt, 3-8, took the loss.

Twins 6, Indians 1

At Minneapolis, Shane Mack homered, doubled and scored twice and rookie Scott Erickson pitched his first complete game to lead the Twins. Erickson 5-4, scattered seven hits, walked one and struck out four. Mike Walker, 1-6, was the loser.

Brewers 5, Tigers 2

At Milwaukee, B.J. Surhoff belted a three-run homer and Jaime Navarro won his fourth straight game, lifting the Brewers. Navarro, 7-5, allowed nine hits over 8 2-3 innings, striking out one and walking two. Julio Machado picked up his first save. Walt Terrell, 4-3, took the loss.

Orioles 5, Angels 4

At Baltimore, Cal Ripken lifted a sacrifice fly to score Brady Anderson and give the Orioles the win. Mark Eichhorn, 2-5, loaded the bases, setting the stage for Ripken's shot to the warning track in left. Joe Price, 3-3, recorded two outs in the ninth for the win.

Rangers 2, Royals 1

At Arlington, Texas, Rafael Palmeiro's double with one out in the bottom of the ninth scored Julio Franco from first base to lift the Rangers. Kenny Rogers, who relieved Texas starter Nolan Ryan, entered in the eighth and improved to 7-5. Loser Kevin Appier, 11-6, went 8 1-3 innings and was charged with both runs and three hits.

DOVER, DE (SEPT. 9) UPI - Rep Tom Carper, D-Del., defeated his primary opponent Saturday, earning his party's nomination and a spot on the November ballot.

Unofficial totals showed Carper with 24,809 votes to challenger Daniel Rappa's 2,508 votes. All ballots in two of Delaware's three counties had been counted, while 89 percent of the results were in from the third county.

In a speech before 300 supporters at a Wilmington restaurant, Carper said his victory was a new day for Democrats.

''This victory tonight is a reaffirmation of the rebuilding we started a year and a half ago,'' the four-term representative said. ''It has been a tough five weeks and somedays it hasn't been very pretty.''

The campaign featured accusations of corruption, the incumbent's acceptance of political action committee money as well as the challenger's association with convicted former elected officials.

Voter turnout in Delaware was exceptionally light Saturday with less than 20 percent of registered Democrats coming out to vote in the only statewide primary.

Delaware voters have elected Carper to Delaware's lone seat in the U.S. House four times. Prior to that he served two terms as state treasurer.

He will face Republican challenger Ralph Williams in the fall election and if he wins in November, Carper would become the winningest politician in Delaware history.
